Browne points out in his complaint that these nine neighbors met in a real estate office in the district and conspired to intimidate him into selling his home by sending him threatening letters, by trying to force an early foreclosure of his mortgage, by trying to have him transfered to another postoffice and by causing persons on July 17 and August 31, 1924 and July 17 of this year to attack the house and destroy his belongings.

ANDERSON APPEAL AGAINST HIS EXPULSION BY JOHNSTON ENDORSED BY 143 LODGES; WILL GO TO BALLOT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Appeal by J. F. Anderson, former vice-president of the International Association of Machinists, to the general membership to reverse the action of President Johnston, who suspended Anderson from membership, will be put up to the lodges thruout the United States and Canada.

Anderson announces that 143 lodges have endorsed his appeal, altho less than 90 were required to put the question to general vote. Acting President Conlon states that when the required number of endorsements are filed at Washington headquarters the ballots will be sent out.

No meeting of the executive council for discussion of the matter will be held. A meeting which had been planned has now been indefinitely postponed. Some 25 of the larger lodges, according to Anderson, had decided to send delegates to this meeting, to express their view of the Johnston-Anderson controversy which arose from the race between the two last spring for the presidency of the organization.

ARGENTINE TRANSPORT WORKERS GIVE WELCOME TO SOVIET STEAMSHIP

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 14. — The Transport Workers' Union of Buenos Aires has decided at a meeting to support the committee which has been set up to organize a reception for the Vasvla-Vorovsky, the first Soviet vessel which has visited South American ports. The anarchist paper La Protesta and the reformist paper El Aventino are attempting a revolting campaign against the Russian revolution during the visit of the Vorovsky, but without any success.

CRIBBEN-SEXTON STOVE COMPANY FRAMES UNION

Metal Polishers Appeal to Locals for Aid

The following appeal is being sent out by the Metal Polishers' Union, Local No. 6, to local unions all over the country telling of the attempt made by the Cribben, Sexton & company, corner Chicago Ave. and Sacramento Blvd., to frame-up the polishers' union, which is leading a strike in the plant manufacturing the Universal stoves, ranges and heaters:

Third Degree Union Heads.

"Walter W. Britton, international president of the Metal Polishers' Union and John Werlick, business agent of Local No. 6, were accosted by three plainclothes officers on Wednesday, December 2, and whisked to the offices of the state's attorney at the county jail and shut off from the outside with no means of communicating with an attorney. Both were subjected to a gruelling cross-examination on the Cribben and Sexton stove shop strike and accused of plotting to blow the firm out of existence.

GITLOW RELEASE IS VICTORY FOR NEW YORK LABOR

Organized Toilers Free Jailed Leader

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—The following statement issued by District Two, (New York) of the Workers (Communist) Party hails the release of Benjamin Gitlow, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, as a victory for the organized workers of New York, who vigorously protested the jailing of Gitlow and calls upon the workers to join in the struggle against the capitalist system in the United States:

"The pardoning of Benjamin Gitlow by Governor Smith is a victory for organized labor of New York City. Benjamin Gitlow was imprisoned because he championed the interests of the workers. He was freed because hundreds of thousands of organized workers of New York City, in support of the campaign conducted by the International Labor Defense and the Workers (Communist) Party, aided by friendly organizations, thru resolutions in their unions and thru mass meetings demanded his release.

Against Capitalist Class.

"The victory of the New York workers is not only in the freedom of Gitlow, but also in the admission of Governor Smith that Benjamin Gitlow was imprisoned for the expression of a political opinion antagonistic to the interests of the capitalist class. In other words, that he committed a political 'crime' and was a political prisoner.

"This admission on the part of the governor shows that in America, with its boasted rights of free speech and freedom of opinion, members of the working class are imprisoned because their opinions do not coincide with those of the spokesmen for big business.

"Benjamin Gitlow returns from jail to carry forward the fight for which he was imprisoned—for the establish-

WORKERS ENTHUSIASTICALLY GREET DAILY WORKER WHICH FIGHTS FOR THEM IN THEIR EVERY-DAY BATTLES

YESTERDAY'S issue of The DAILY WORKER, which carried a story on the strike of the sheet metal workers of the Edison Electric Appliance company in Ciecro and also the the statement on the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America elections was widely distributed in Chicago.

As the workers in the garment trades district went to their shops, girls were on hand distributing copies of The DAILY WORKER among them.

The DAILY WORKER was enthusiastically received by the garment workers who are facing an important election, and by the striking sheet metal workers and by those at work at the main plant of the Edison Electric Appliance company.

The DAILY WORKER is a tremendous weapon in the hands of the workers in their everyday struggles with the bosses. It can become a still greater power thru the co-operation of thousands of workers who will act as worker correspondents, writing stories of their everyday struggles to be published in The DAILY WORKER, and thru distributing bundles of their paper containing these stories.

Anglo-Russian Unity Committee Deplores Amsterdam Refusal

BERLIN, Dec. 14—The Anglo-Russian Committee for World Trade Union Unity yesterday met here and among other actions issued a statement pointing out the deplorable effect of the decision of the general council of the Amsterdam International in refusing to meet in an unconditional conference with the Russian union to discuss admission of the Russian unions to the Amsterdam International. The statement was signed by Tomsky for the Russians and by Pugh for the British. The British delegates in the general council voted solidly in favor of the conference proposal. The reformist leaders led by Oudegeest, Jouhaux and company, voted solidly against it.

PERSHING SORE AT CHILE FOR MAKING APPEAL

Also Don't Like Any Hostile Publicity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ARICA, Chile, Dec. 14. — General Pershing made a vicious attack on Chile and its representative, Senor Augustine Edwards for daring to appeal against Pershing's position on the matter of holding a plebiscite February 1, 1926, instead of April 15, as proposed by Pershing.

Pershing declares that the compliance to the commission's decrees had been "when accorded at all, formal rather than substantial."

Riles the General.

It was particularly annoying to the honorable general of the U. S. army, that Senor Edwards had not only made a scathing criticism of his, Pershing's, handling of the matter, but had "released such address to the press."

"This, after I had specifically drawn his attention to such an understanding and agreement, advising him that such publication could only be regarded by the commission as conspicuous and an unfortunate violation thereof."

A New Plan.

Considerable sentiment among those in Chile who wish to keep the good will of the U. S. bankers, favors a division of the Tacna-Arica territory, instead of giving it all to one or to the other. If Peru gets the Tacna region under such a plan, it will have it only in spite of the fact that 500 miles of desert separate Peru proper from the Tacna region.

This plan, however, is the "solution" offered by the "Pan-American diplomatic corps"— a body something like the diplomatic corps at Peking, China, which is taking more and more the position of dictator of Chilean affairs.

U. S. BANKING POWER GROWS DURING YEAR

Corner on Gold Supply of World

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Staggering figures, reflecting the financial power of the United States, were contained in the annual report of Comptroller of the Currency, J. W. McIntoch mode public today.

The combined banking power of all banks in the country is $60,469,400,000 an increase of $4,022,900,000 since June, 1924.

Money stocks of the principal countries of the world were given as $9,669,359,000, of which the United States holds $8,221,200,000.

The United States has a corner on the gold supply with a stock valued at $4,546,407,000. Great Britain has $760,874,000, France, $710,000,000; Japan, $585,738,000; Spain, $489,164,000, and Argentine, $453,175,000.

Paper Currency.

This country, however, gave way to many foreign nations in circulation of paper currency. Hungary took first place in a walk with a total of 4,513,898,560,000 krone, with France second with 40,603,965,000 francs. United States has $5,320,946,000 in paper.

Bank clearings for the year ending September 30, reached the collosal total of $505,299,000,000, more than $62,299,000,000 in excess of the preceding year.

Belle Maid Dress Co. Want Injunction to Intimidate Strikers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 14. — The Belle Maid Dress company, 253 W. 35th street, against whom the workers are on strike since October 1, has applied for an injunction against the strikers. Mr. Rothenberg of 5 Beekman street, is handling this case.

The company's stubborn refusal to reinstate members who were discharged during the stoppage against the former administration is the cause of the strike. Members of the union are urged to help picket this shop.

COMMUNIST IN TENTH DAY OF HUNGER STRIKE

Physical Condition Is Dangerously Weakened

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 14.—The traitorous Machado government of Cuba, acting under orders from American imperialism declares that it will let Julio Antonio Mella, general secretary of the Communist Party, die in prison for his terrible crime of opposing the American sugar interests. Mella is entering upon the tenth day of his hunger strike. His pulse is recorded at 68, respiration at 20, and his entire physical condition is dangerously weakened.

The ostensible charge against Mella and the twelve workers arrested with him is setting off bombs in front of a factory, but it is well known that the bombs were placed by the police department. Mella was miles away at the time. There is little attempt to conceal the fact that the real reason for his arrest was activity in the strike of the sugar-cane workers against the American sugar trust.

Active Leader for Liberation.

As general secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba, Julio A. Mella, has been the most active leader in the movement to free the island from Wall Street domination. He organized the Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, which has systematically exposed the relations of the American ambassador Crowder, to the Cuban government.

In name the ambassador of a friendly foreign power, Crowder is in fact the representative of an imperial overlord, treating Cuba as its private possession. General Machado, president of Cuba, is a mere tool of Crowder. The United States government permitted Machado to elect himself president by fraud and now Machado is "making good" with his protectors. Workers and students have been deported wholesale for daring to voice "anti-American sentiments."

The case of Mella is of the utmost importance. It will show just how far American imperialism can or cannot go in its terrorization of an ostensibly free country. Protests are pouring into Cuba from all parts of Central and South America. It is now up to the workers in the United States.

CRUSH WORKERS' DEMONSTRATIONS BY USING TANKS

Scotland Yard Head Favors Plan

LONDON, Dc., 14.—Sir Basil Thomson head of Scotland Yard, in his recent work "The Criminal" advocates the use of armored tanks against workers, who are on strike or demonstrate for better conditions. The following excerpt taken from his book will give one an idea of the propanda that the ruling class is now placing in the minds of its defenders.

To Crush Workers' Demonstrations.

"The mounted police were useful in their day, but the day has passed. The defence for them is that they are useful in controlling disorderly crowds, but a London crowd intent on mischief in these days would have the men off their horses in the first rush, since the modern paving gives no sure foothold for a horse, however, he may be shot. . . The modern appliance for dealing with disorderly crowds is the motor-lorry filled with police and driven slowly along the line to which the crowd is to be kept, or, in case of a mob bent on outrage, the light tank."

BRINGS HAITI SUPPRESSION INTO SENATE

Shows Wall Street Is Ruling Caribbean

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.— Resolutions demanding of the state department an explanation of the powers and functions of Brig. Gen. John H. Russell, military governor of Haiti, and an account of his activities in preventing the holding of elections by the Haitian people, and also a resolution declaring it to be "the sense of the senate" that American forces should be withdrawn from Haiti, have been introduced by Sen. King of Utah, democrat.

Wants to Know.

In his first resolution King asks for all correspondence that has passed between Gen. Russell and the Haitian government, and between any other agent of the American government and the Haitian government, with reference to Haitian loans by American banks. He asks whether the state department has instructed Russell to prevent the holding of an election next January, or to retain the present Haitian officials in office in default of such election.

These inquiries are designed to bring out the fact that the Borno government in Haiti is a puppet set up by the American military forces and obeying Gen. Russell, and that it has been made to negotiate a loan in Wall Street at high profit to American bankers and against the will of the Haitian people.

Treaty Protects Bandits.

In his second resolution King declares that existing relations between Haiti and the United States have become unsatisfactory to Haiti and disadvantageous to the United States. This is due, he holds, to American military and fiscal control of Haiti. The purposes for which intervention was ordered have long since been accomplished, and it is now the duty of the United States to withdraw and to arrange an abrogation of any treaty or other agreement providing for the control of Haitian revenues by the United States, or providing for the intervention of the United States in Haiti's political affairs.

This last clause refers to the trick clause in the Haitian treaty establishing American officials in control of Haiti's revenues and permitting the American government to "protect" these American officials. Under this pretext American conquest of both Haiti and the Dominican republic was carried out.

NATIONALIST MOVEMENT STIRS SHANGHAI; "DARE TO DIE CORPS" FORMED

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 14—Colonel Yen Chung-chang, Chinese chief of police of the native city has prohibited public meetings following the formation of a "dare-to-die" organization of militant national liberationists, who openly proclaim they will fight to the death against police and soldiery breaking up meetings of the workers and the national liberation movement, of which the Kuomintang is the leading party.

This is merely an indication of the growing spirit of the Chinese masses, stirring under the heel of alien imperialism, and kept from open revolt largely by native official repression.

From Tientsin the report is that a preliminary skirmish between the troops of General Feng Yu-hsiang and Li Ching-ling, governor of Chihli province, Li's troops won.. Tokio reports state the exact opposite. The railway and the motor road between Tientsin and Peking is said to be cut in several places.

570,000,000, an increase of over a billion dollars in 12 months.

U. S. Gold Certificates.

The low amount of paper currency of the United States as compared to the tremendous issues of Hungary and France does not mean that those countries are in a more favorable condition as far as money is concerned. Quite the contrary is the fact. The movement of commodities is so slow in those countries, the economic condition so shattered, that it takes an enormous amount of paper (fictitious) symbols to carry on the business of the country.

In the United States a small amount of currency only is required to circulate an enormous amount of commodities. Also the currency used as circulating medium here is for the most part composed of gold certificates. Each yellow back in circulation is worth its face value in gold.

This tremendous change has taken place since the war. The ordinary bank currency (green backs) is issued on the basis of 100 to 13 gold dollars. The influx of gold at the close of the war caused a movement toward withdrawal of this currency from circulation and the issuing of new currency in the form of gold certificates, each of which is issued upon the basis of its face value in gold and can at any time be cashed on demand at the United States treasury for the full amount.

Even this issuance of gold currency has not helped the situation here which is rapidly becoming alarming because of the impossibility of finding places with which to dispose of the enormous surplus that has accumulated.

This plethora of gold makes essential the tremendous sweep of imperialist conquest, and is responsible for the efforts to maintain and increase the power of the military establishment of the country, so that the workers may be mobilized to wage war against other countries in order that the bankers on Wall Street may be able safely to invest the wealth they have pillaged from the working class.

Jewish Bakery Workers Thrown Out of Work in Dispute Between Bosses

A dispute between the Jewish bake shop proprietors' association and the retail grocery and delicatessen store owners has resulted in much hardship for members of the Jewish Bakers' Union Local No. 237.

The retail grocery and delicatessen shop proprietors refused to handle the bread baked by the members of the Jewish bakeshop proprietors' association, as they claimed the price they charged for bread was too high and that they could buy bread from other bakers at a much lower price.

When the bakery wagons, which had been sent out to deliver the bread returned with their loads, the bakeshop proprietors closed their shops and sent their union bakery workers home.

The bakeshop owners and the retail store proprietors have come to a temporary agreement and it is expected that the men will be back at work in two or three days.

Many of the union bakers fear that the agreement which the bosses have entered into with the storekeepers will result in an attempt to lower their wages.

MORE WORKERS JOIN STRIKE AT EDISON PLANT

Bosses Fail in Attempt to Recruit Scabs

By A Worker Correspondent

The successful picketing of the Edisonson Electric Appliance company plant at 52nd and 19th streets has resulted in a number of men failing to report for work yesterday morning, with some of them coming to the strike headquarters and joining the striking sheet metal workers. All that is now left in the plant is about a dozen scabs and an army of gunmen calling themselves deputy sheriffs.

Company Peddles Fairy Tale.

The company, in its desperation, is trying to induce workers in its main plant at 56th and Taylor Sts. to submit to a transfer to the struck shop, telling them that there is no strike and that a couple of men, who quit work or were fired, were raising hell in order to get back into the plant. This fairy tale that the company bosses are telling certainly jibes with the army of gunmen that are being maintained in the plant and that are used to escort the scabs to and from work.

The company is also offering the men at the main plant higher wages if they will submit to the transfer. As yet none of the workers have been induced to scab on their fellow workers. The strikers are taking steps to acquaint their fellow workers in the main plant of the situation that exists in the struck plant.

DAILY WORKER Tells of Strike.

The DAILY WORKER was distributed yesterday before the main plant telling the story of the sheet metal workers' strike.

The ranks of the strikers remain firm and they are determined to carry on the strike to a successful conclusion.

May Start Campaign.

The condition of all the workers in the electrical manufacturing concerns in Cicero is deplorable and out of the situation that now exists may develop a general organization campaign to organize this important industry.

Propose Investigattion of Spy System Bosses Use Against Unions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler has proposed a congressional investigation into the espionage systems maintained in big industries against organized labor.

Wheeler announced he would introduce a resolution in the senate Monday to authorize the investigation. It will call for an "inquiry into the extent of the system of industrial espionage in all its ramifications" and authorize the investigating committee to "report to the senate what legislation is desirable to correct such practices as they may find inimical to the public welfare."

Soviet Court Frees Mother Who Slays Defective Child

MOSCOW, Dec. 14—Olga Degtarova strangled her six-weeks old baby after she had found it was infected with a chronic disease which would render it insane, but would not cause its death for many years. She was tried and sentenced to eight years' imprisonment in the lower court. She appealed. The higher court freed the woman, declaring she had acted according to her best judgment of the most beneficial thing for her baby. The court declared she had done the best thing for society.

BERLIN, Dec. 14—A majority of German parents of children suffering from incurable mental or physical disease are willing to have their children's lives snuffed out, according to a study made by Dr. Ewald Meltzer, prominent physician and director of an asylum for imbecile children in Saxony.

Dr. Meltzer reveals in a book, which he has just published, that he asked 200 parents of his patients whether they would agree to the premeditated death of their children. One hundred and nineteen of the parents answered in the affirmative and only 43 were definitely in the negative.

AS WE SEE IT

talked about was business, and it is a fact, tho hardly believable that some of these hard-boiled bankers talked of the "traditional friendship between the Russian and American people." And I have not the least doubt but the Soviet envoys applauded these nice words. All of which don't mean a damned thing as everybody concerned knew very well.

THE thing that counts in business, and profits. There are approximately 160,000,000 people in Russia and whether they support a Bolshevik government or not, whether they believe in a personal god or in a chunk of dried cow dung, they eat, wear clothes and in other respects consume things produced in American factories, and if one so inclined dropped one of their gold rubles in the cash box of an American methodist church the christian god would rub his hands with satisfaction over his belly in the anticipation of investing the ruble in roast goose and champagne.

THE American bankers were happy in the thot that Russia was again dropping a considerable number of rubles in the American market. It is not so very long ago that Mr. Bakhmateff, the ambassador without a country cut quite a figure here. Wilson gave him $187,000,000 out of the U. S. treasury to have a good time for himself and make war on the Soviet republic. But those days are gone forever and the very bankers who supported Bahkmeteff, are now just as cordial to the Bolshevik envoys. Nothing succeeds like success. This maxim cannot be repeated too often in connection with Russia.

THE Associated Press dispatch said of the New York banquet: "The banquet was the first outspoken recognition by American finance and industry of the importance of Soviet trade and the stability of the Soviet government." Mark these words well, and then note that Senator Borah has introduced a resolution in the senate calling for U. S. recognition of Soviet Russia. This is one of the very big developments in American political life today. And when the red flag of a workers' and peasants' government flies over the embassy in Washington once occupied by the agents of the czar, no worker with a spark of the divine fire of revolution in his soul, can regret that he has lived to see the most powerful capitalist power acknowledge the might of the first workers' republic.

RETURNING to Europe, for a moment. England put something over when the Locarno pact was signed. But things do not stay put, and never less than today. We are passing thru the period of the decline of capitalism in the world sense. The fact that America is more powerful and more stable than ever before, is the exception that proves the rule. The interests of England clash with those of Germany and France. In fact the interests of all capitalist powers clash with each other. But the major clashes make the front page, and no matter how many Locarno pacts are signed; no matter how many kisses the volatile Briand imprints on the austere jaw of Sir Austen Chamberlain, the war between the capitalists of France and England will not down.

OUTSIDE of the positive power of of the Red Army and the support of the European working class in general, this conflict of interests is Soviet Russia's greatest protection against her foes. They are unable to agree on a policy of annihilation against a power that spells their ultimate doom. How often have we heard it said that every system carries within itself the germs of its own decay! The capitalist system is such a bug-carrier. Nothing stays as it is. Change is the most constant phenomenon in life. Capitalism is going, but it will take some kicks to get rid of it. In the meantime the diplomatic war between England and Russia has the stage. It is a drama well worth watching.

British Government Refuses Rail Labor Any Wage Increase

LONDON, Dec. 14—The government commission on railway wages has rendered a report which denies all pleas for a raise in the wages of railway labor. It has been joyously accepted by the capitalist press, but there is certainty that the arrogant attitude of the commission will generate further unity in the ranks of the British unions. Especially it will tend to push the movement for an alliance with the miners and transport workers.

Bar Association Will Test Constitutionality of Illinois Parole Law

The Chicago Bar Association has appointed a committee, which is working out a plan to vacate the parole of Ira D. Perry, Jr., son of a millionaire manufacturer, who was sent to jail for the murder of a policeman during a holdup, and threatens to make the Perry case a test as to the constitutionality of the new parole law.

Bankers' Gold Purchases University Support Like Harlot Bought on Streets

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Hearst press discovers with horror that Wall Street is the "mysterious Santa Claus" that is feeding the national collegiate world court conference with finances. It announces this discovery to the world and bids it shudder.

Arthur Brisbane and William Randolph Hearst have been so busy investing their surplus millions in New York real estate that they haven't had time to make this discovery before. Brisbane thinks "Andy" Mellon, secretary of the treasury, is one of the greatest financiers of all time. He is —for the great rich. "Andy" could no doubt have given Arthur a little primer lesson on the economic forces that determine opposition to or support of the world court, the back door to the league of nations.

It is Morgan's Wall Street that is in Europe with its loans and its Dawes plans, and it is Wall Street, with its international banking clique, that wants the United States in the court and the league. Therefore, it provides the coin to put it over.

It was not difficult to learn that Corliss Lamont, son of Thomas W. Lamont, of the House of Morgan, is the figurehead of the dominant New York group of what is known as the "world court committee" of the Council of Christian Associations, that planned and carried out the collegiate conference at Princeton University, over which Woodrow Wilson presided before he started his political career that carried him to the White House, and to the Versailles peace conference as the chosen agent of American imperialism.

It was under the direction of young Lamont's committee that organization work was carried on, a propaganda campaign launched and an army of speakers sent out to persuade the students of America's goose-step universities and colleges, with their faculties, that they should all be for the world court.

The opposition,—championed by American industrial interests—lacking virility and organization, saw the world court adherents sweep everything before them in the fraudulent referendums that were conducted in real Tammany style.

They were not able to bring back the ghost of George Washington, to warn against entangling foreign alliances, to conjure up the past and glorify American isolation, divorcing the United States from the troubles besetting the capitalist countries of Europe.

• • • •

The paid for demonstration of university students at Princeton is only another indication, and an important one, of the big efforts that are being made by the international bankers to put this country into the league and the court. It is the method of American finance capital to win congress for its world domination schemes.

That the movement is neither temporary nor sporadic is shown by the confession of the most active court disciples that:

> "We were told we could have all the money we wanted to spend; the colleges don't have to put up anything themselves until 1927."

New York backers (Wall Street) are to finance the first year of the permanent world court organization the students have started. They will finance the second, and others also, if necessary.

All this so that the United States may resume its "leadership of the world," in the words of Bishop William T. Manning and Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, puppets that jump and dance as the dollar dictates.

Thus, in spite of the opposition of industrial capital, American finance capital drags the United States more and more into the world arena of greater competitive rivalries, with their diplomatic alliances and ententes leading to new wars.

It is a challenge to America's workers and farmers to do the only thing open to them, develop their own class power in alliance with the workers of other countries, and thus prepare for the final test of strength that must result in the abolition of the profit rule that is even now purchasing the support of America's educational system, like a harlot bought upon the streets, in order that the chains of the dollar may be shackled more firmly than ever upon all nations. Thru the alliance of labor the shackles will be broken.

Stove Company Frames Union

both union oficials, we suppose for the purpose of future identification.

"The grand jury was in session at the same time, but refused to fall for such a blundering frame-up. Some friend of the union officials by accident found out the predicament and called their attorney who threatened to take out a habeas corpus writ unless sufficient evidence was produced for their immediate indictment.

"We'll Get You Yet!"

"This unlooked for move caused a scurry about, and after five hours of confinement both were turned loose with the threat 'We'll get you yet.'

"The incidents which led up to the frame-up was an article printed in the labor-hating Chicago Tribune of Sunday, Nov. 29, which stated that the state's attorney was in possession of evidence that the largest bombing ever done in Chicago was plotted to be done at the Cribben and Sexton stove plant, and was only averted thru the tender feeling of the bomber. 'On acount of the policeman, who was watching the plant being the father of six children, he did not want to make six orphans, but was only waiting till a policeman was detailed as a watchman who had no children when the job would be completed.'

Expose Tribune Bunk.

"The above is pure unadulterated bunk and the kind the Chicago Tribune has been indulging in for years, but an excuse for which there is an especial reason in the fact that full page advertisements are appearing quite regularly for the Cribben and Sexton Stove company advertising the Universal stoves, ranges and furnaces.

In Desperate Straits.

"The Cribben and Sexton firm is in desperate straits and this desperate move in another attempt to force a let-up on the strike.

"Remember the 'Universal' stoves, ranges and furnaces, and will someone at at the meeting, where this communication is read, make the motion to select one or more committees to acquaint the dealers in stoves, ranges and furnacse of the attitude of the Cribben and Sexton company and have them write this firm demanding that they adjust the differences and treat their employes in a fair manner.

WORKERS CHEER GITLOW AT NEW YORK STATION

Union Delegation Meets Train at Grand Central

ment of a labor party, for world trade union unity, for recognition of Soviet Russia, for amalgamating the unions into powerful instruments in the struggle against the employing class and for the defense of every right of the workers to organize, to speak, to strike and to picket.

Plan Onslaught on Workers.

"The pardoning of Gitlow must not deceive any worker regarding the intentions of the capitalist class. At the very moment of the pardoning of Gitlow, the president in his message to congress, declares for the registration of all alien workers, under the guise of enforcing the immigration law; the president proposes the creation of a weapon thru which the capitalists can enforce greater slavery over both native and foreign-born workers. In Pittsburgh, members of organized labor are being sentenced to long time imprisonment for defending the right of freedom of speech, and for fighting for the interests of organized labor. The confirmation of the imprisonment of Charlotte Anita Whitney is again a demonstration that the capitalist class is pursuing a policy of persecution and oppression of the workers.

"The freedom of Benjamin Gitlow must be the starting point of a widespread agitation to arouse the workers to the need of energetic struggle against these efforts of the capitalists to subjugate labor."

Workers Cheer Gitlow.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—As Benjamin Gitlow, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party and standard bearer of the Workers (Communist) Party in the last mayoralty elections in New York City, stepped off the train, which had brot him from Sing Sing prison to this city, he was enthusiastically greeted by a delegation of workers representing the largest unions in the city.

Leaves For Philadelphia.

Following the demonstration which lasted for a considerable period of time in the Grand Central Station, Gitlow left for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' convention at Philadelphia, where he had been invited to speak to the assembled delegates.

Admits Political Persecution.

ALBANY, New York, Dec. 14.—In the memorandum accompanying the pardon of Benjamin Gitlow, Governor Alfred Smith admits that the conviction and imprisonment of Gitlow was for his political views when he states that as far as the Gitlow release is concerned, it was a question with him as to "whether or not he has been sufficiently punished for a political crime."

Did Not Advocate Anarohy.

He then reviews the decisions of the judges in the appeals cases and declares that "I am further moved to extend executive clemency from the fact that two justices of the court of appeals dissented from the conviction, and I assume it must be upon the same reasoning given in the Larkin decision which, in effect, was that

MARINE WORKERS' UNITED FRONT CONFERENCE AT MONTEVIDEO MAY LEAD TO ONE SEA INTERNATIONAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—(FP)—Years of American marine rule in Haiti and Santo Domingo are why no delegates from the twin republics will be found at the international marine union conference in Montevideo, March 15, say members of the Marine Transport Workers' Union which issued the summons. The American protectorate has scotched organized movements of the workers, they state.

Cuba is expected to send men from Camaguey, Havana and Santiago, though government opposition caused the original plan to hold the conference in that island to be given up.

Montevideo was selected because it is the freeest port in the western hemisphere. There is said to be less interference there with the civil liberties of unionists than anywhere else in the hemisphere. Also Montevideo has the advantage of proximity to Buenos Aires and other La Plata ports and is conveniently situated towards Brasil and Chile.

Reactionaries Oppose.

The conference will be the second of its kind. The first was held last March at New Orleans when a preliminary coming together of the independent unions of the hemisphere was made and a tentative program was mapped out. The M. T. W. was given power to issue the next call, originally set for next January but postponed to March.

The movement does not have the support of the A. F. of L. marine unions in the U. S. A. or the Mexican Federation of Labor. But from the latter country delegates are expected from the independent unions in Tampico and Vera Cruz and in South America the lines between the federation and independent unions are less sharply drawn.

Foresee One International.

The purpose of the conference is to lay the ground work for united action, the M. T. W. announces—a general strike eventually to force standard wage scales and conditions of labor. There is no standard today and it is said that the highest paying Mexican boats offer far more attractive wages than such American concerns as the Munson line where wages are today being reduced as boats are purchased from the U. S. Shipping Board.

Already some co-operative action is being taken. Since the last conference there have been a number of cases where struck ships from America were boycotted in Latin-American ports. The general feeling of the M. T. W. is that these conference understandings are only a first step, that a marine international enrolling the union seamen of all nations of both eastern and western hemispheres is the desired goal.

PLEDGES SUPPORT OF INT'L. UNION TO N. Y. FURRIERS

G. E. B. Sub-Committee Adopts Resolution

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 14. — According to a statement by Isaac Wohl, general sec'y.-treasurer of the Furriers' International, the sub-committee of the general executive board of the International Fur Workers' Union of U. S. and Canada, at its session held Tuesday evening, Dec. 1, 1925, adopted a resolution to co-operate with the joint board of Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15 of New York in its efforts to obtain the conditions for the fur workers of New York, as outlined in the new demands embodied in the new agreement with the New York fur manufacturers.

Shachtman to Represent International.

The sub-committee of the central executive board elected General President Brother O. Shachtman to represent the International Fur Workers' Union at the conferences to be held soon between representatives of the joint board and the manufacturers' association.

The first conference was scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 8, to take up the demands contained in the new agreement for preliminary discussion. The new agreement is to replace the present one, which expires on February 1, 1925.

Items of Agreement.

The main features of the new agreement are: Forty hours a week, spread over five work days; equal division of work; no overtime to be permitted at any time.

The establishment of an unemployment fund, to which the manufacturers shall contribute, and which is to be supervised by the union. The agreement contains 18 demands of the workers.

President Shachtman, who is touring thru Canada, to review the strike of the fur workers, which is going on for over nine months, and other organization matters in Canada and Detroit, will be back in time to participate in the conferences.

AVERAGE OF EMPLOYMENT LOWER THAN IN 1923, THOUGH SLIGHT INCREASE OVER 1924 REPORTED

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

Small increases thankfully received is the prevailing note in the monthly employment reports of the Illinois and New York state labor departments. But in neither state have employers put enough men back to work to bring the average for the year up to 1924. In both states thousands who had jobs in 1923 are still out of work.

Employment in Illinois factories increased seven-tenths of one per cent between October and November, according to Statistician Cahn's report. This makes the highest level since February. There are about 4 per cent more workers on the payrolls than in November, 1924, but 8½ per cent less than November, 1923. The average for the first 11 months of 1925 is nearly 4 per cent below 1924.

"Industry continues on the upgrade," says the Illinois report. "Since July the factories of this state have increased their working forces by about 4.2 per cent, 31,500 securing positions thereby." This is the optimistic view. There are still at least 85,000 fewer jobs in Illinois factories than there were in November, 1923.

122 For Every 100 Jobs.

Free employment officers thruout the state reported 126 applicants for each 100 jobs compared with 122 in October. A year ago there were 140 persons applying for every 100 jobs.

A week's work in November brot an average wage of $28.46 to Illinois factory workers. In October the average was $28.49, the highest point since the department began its record in 1922. In November, 1924, the workers averaged $27.61 a week.

Employment in New York factories gained about 7-10 of 1 per cent between October and November reaching the highest level of the year. It now stands 4 per cent over November, 1924. But it is 6½ per cent under 1923. For the 11 months ended Nov. 30, employment in New York factories averaged 1 per cent below the same period a year ago.

Only Two to Brag Over.

The importance of sustained activity in the building industry and of high production in the automobile industry is stressed by the New York labor commissioner. Employment in the coming months will probably hinge on these industries.

The uncertainties of the building situation are summed up by T. S. Holden, statistician for the F. W. Dodge corporation, important financiers of the industry. Holden says: "The stimulus of the building shortage has been removed, but it is entirely possible that the growth requirements of the country may become larger than we now conceive. The situation seems unusually difficult to analyze. On the whole it looks as if there is a real reaction on the way, a flattening out of the boom. It seems likely to develop fairly gradually but unlikely to drop to extreme levels. It appears to me that the building total of 1926 will be less than that this year, but probably not a great deal less."

Automobile production is being cut down and no one seems to know whether 1926 production can be held up to this year's record. Employment in Detroit is still about 60,000 above a year ago. But the oversupply of used cars, the increase in the number of cars, sold on time, which are being taken back because of nonpayments, and the possibility that price cuts and liberal selling terms in 1925 have anticipated the normal 1926 market are recognized as unfavorable symptoms.

HOW TO BREAK STRIKES, TOLD BY U. S. GOV'T

Department of Labor Proud of Itself

Some workers may think that the United States government is a sort of "fair and impartial" arbitrator of their troubles and struggles with the bosses. But just what the government's department of labor does in such cases can be well shown by the labor department's own words, given out in the department's news letter the first day of December. Here is what they report on three strikes:

Weavers, Providence, R. I.

"A conciliator from the department of labor reports that after a two days' conference with the B. B. and R. Knight company officials and striking employes, an agreement has been brot about. The trouble grew out of a demand by the company that the number of looms per weaver be increased. In the adjustment which was reached the employes accepted a ten per cent wage reduction as a substitute for the increased number of looms.

Weavers, Biddeford, Maine.

"A wire has been received from the department's representative that at a conference the threatened strike of 3,100 operatives of the Pepperell Manufacturing company was averted. In the interests of production and increased efficiency the company proposed to install the multiple weaving system, and this plan was objected to by the operatives. At an extended conference held at Biddeford, attended by representatives of the workers, the company, the state labor commissioner, and two conciliators from the U. S. department of labor, an agreement was reached by which the weavers agreed to fully co-operate in trying out the new system.

Radio Workers, Bronx, N. Y.

"Employes of the F. A. D. Andra company, a manufacturer of radio supplies, went on strike for a wage increase of from 12½ per cent to 15 per cent. The demands were refused. A conciliator from the department took up the case and found that only a small minority of the employes of the company had gone on strike. They were induced to return to work at the old rates."

Structural Workers Gain.

BOSTON, Dec. 14.—Structural iron workers of Boston, who struck for a raise from $1.10 to $1.25 per hour, have returned to work under the old wage scale, but with an agreement for a bonus of 15 cents per hour.

JUDGE ENJOINS U. M. W. BECAUSE IT IS BUILT ON INDUSTRIAL LINES

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 14. — Few workers among the ones outside those immediately engaged in the the battle against the non-union operators of West Virginia realize the significance of the recent injunction of Judge McClintic against the United Mine Workers.

Judge McClintic, in issuing the injunction, said that he based his action upon the clause in the U. M. W. of A. constitution which, in his view, makes the union a monopoly. the clause is as follows:

"To unite in one organization regardless of creed, color or nationality, all workmen eligible for membership employed in or around coal mines, washeries and coke ovens on the American continent."

This is industrial unionism, which William Green, president of the American Federation is set against as an upholder of craft unionism. Green, although he has issued statements of opposition to McClintic's injunction, has no room to quarrel with a capitalist court for forbidding industrial unionism.

WORK FOR A BIG DELEGATION TO SOVIET RUSSIA

Kansas City Unionists Strong for Idea

By E. HUGO OEHLER.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 14.—The Trade Union Unity Committee, the enlarged former Purcell committee has started the task of financing, selecting and sending a delegation from this district with the American trade union delegation that will visit Soviet Russia and report back to American trade unionists actual conditions in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The committee is urging all trade unions in Greater Kansas City to send delegates to the unity committee to help carry on the work and to bring unity to the movement locally. The committee urges all trade unions in nearby cities to get in touch with the officers, E. B. Eastwood, chairman, and Barny McCoy, secretary, Room 2, Labor Temple. The unionists of the nearby states are urged to get into the saddle and help direct this work to a speedy conclusion to enable us to have a fine delegation to go to Russia.

Plans were immediately launched to increase the representation and to finance them. Sub-committees were appointed to call on unions for this purpose. The committee is arranging a Christmas tree celebration to distribute baskets to the needy workers and to obtain funds for the financing of the delegation.

The committee meets the second and fourth Thursday of each month at the Labor Temple.

CAP MAKERS PUT UP BATTLE OVER OFFICIAL 'WORK'

Left Wing Hammers At Zaritsky's Machine

NEW YORK CITY, (By Mail)—The officials of the Cap Makers' Union called a mass meeting to demonstrate their strength. The entire industry was stopped for the meeting. The main question really before the meeting was—whether the officials of the union are agents of the workers or of the bosses. The whole membership was ordered in to get a vote of confience from the meeting.

Work For Bosses' Interest

The situation in the union is very serious. Instead of the officials working in the interests of the workers who are members, they work more in the interest of the bosses and the contractors.

This was pointed out by many left wing speakers, among them H. Sazar, Cohen, Borom and Eva Shafran. President Zaritzky refused to allow alternate speakers, one worker and one official. He forced the left wing to all speak first then let the machine use all the opportunity to close the argument. The atmosphere and the voting showed the mass of members oppose the machine.

Many Abstain

From the entire audience of 1,800 the machine got only 381 votes and the defiant left wing 154 who openly voted against the machine, while all the rest abstained from voting, fearing the terror of the administration. They were afraid of voting against the machine, so they would not vote at all.

If the machine would allow the demand of the Cap Makers' section of the T. U. E. L. and the desire of the workers, there is no doubt but that all those who abstained from voting would surely vote against the machine.

The opposition made a clear and strong attack to which the administration speakers could not reply. Cohen said that the present leaders were out only for themselves. Sazar made a sharp attack on the "work" of the administration. He pointed out facts showing where and how the machine is the open agent of the bosses. So did Borom.

Eva Shafran depicted the ideological difference between the right wing administration and the left wing rank and file. Because of the lack of a class struggle policy by the officials, there is a reflection on the everyday work in the union. Non-union workers work in union shops. She pointed out trade evils. All left wing speakers declared that they would keep on with their work for the membership's interests.

LABOR IN THE FAR EAST (JAPAN) - - - -

By TANI

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Yesterday we told of the split forced by the reformists in the Japanese General Federation of Labor and of the program of action of the left wing body, the Japan Labor Union Council or, Nihon Radokumia Hyogikai, whose general policy is one of class struggle instead of class collaboration, such as the leaders advise in the reformist federation. Today we read of the manner the Japanese left wing handles the pressing problem of unemployment.

ARTICLE II

National League of Unemployed.

MAN must not be judged by his words, but by his deeds. So we are more concerned with the actual deeds of the Japanese left wingers than with what they say in their declarations. Among the activities of the Nihon Rodokumiai Hyogikai, since its formation, there are two which are most worthy of close attention. They are the activities aiming at the organization of the National League of Unemployed and the organization of the Proletarian Party.

The terrible state of unemployment in Japan is alarming even the most indifferent sections of society and hysterical cries are heard everywhere. For instance, the Japan Advertiser (June 22, 1925), which is a semi-official organ of the Japanese bourgeois government for foreign propaganda, is forced to admit the critical condition of the country in an article entitled "Japan's Depression Worst in History."

In part it says: "With an army of unemployed of considerably more than 2,000,000 during the last year in Japan, swelled constantly by numbers who have been thrown out of work during the first six months of 1925, and aggravated by labor disputes, the present period is sai4 to be the worst nation-wide depression that this country has yet experienced, according to a statement issued by the social work bureau of the department of home affairs yesterday. A radical movement such as has never before been felt in Japan is expected to result from the constant wrangling betwen labor and capital and the prolonged unemployment."

THIS is rather a bold admittance of fact on the part of the bourgeois organ. Under such circumstances the leaders of the trade unions were for some time feeling the necessity of organizing the unemployed on a national scale, but owing to the so-called "internal trouble," which finally split the General Federation of Labor, they were not able to take concerted action on even such a grave and common problem as unemployment. The initiative for organizing the unemployed on a national scale, however, was taken by the left wing leaders in July, soon after the conclusion of the "internal trouble."

On July 7, the eastern section of the aforementioned Hyogikai (Tokio) elected a "Commitee of Action Against Unemployment" and started to work out a wide-scale project for agitation and organization against unemployment. At the mass meeting held on July 18 in Tokio under the auspices of the Hyogikai a resolution to organise a "National League of Unemployed" was unanimously passed.

Following this first successful meeting on the problem of unemployment, 12 similar mass meetings were held in various quarters of Tokio and its vicinity within three weeks, all under the auspices of the Hyogikai.

MEANWHILE, at the executive meeting of the said Hyogikai held on July 27, the Committee of Action against Unemployment was made a permanent organ and at the same time the execution of actual work on the organization of unemployed, such as the registration of unemployed, negoitation with other labor organizations, etc., were started.

The unemployment movement in Osaka (Osaka is the largest industrial center of Japan, while Tokio is the political center), under the auspices of the Hyogikai, strated on July 10 with the broadcasting of leaflets and placarding. On the 12th a mass meeting was held in the city park. On the following day the Osaka branch of the Hyogikai invited all the local trade unions as well as the Japan Peasant Union for a "conference on unemployment problems." On July 20, answering the call of the Hyogikai, 71 delegates representing 27 different labor organizations met and agreed unanimously to carry on the movement against unemployment and to establish a permanent organ for the purpose.

IT is significant that to this memorable conference the Japanese Federation of Labor did not send its representatives. Since the recent split, the federation has entirely been subjected under the control of the reformistic bureaucrats, who, from their hatred of left wingers, have been obstructing all the attempts in which the latter are active.

At the conference, great indignation was expressed by some of the delegates at the non-attendance of the Japanese Federation of Labor, but at the suggestion of the Hyogikai and peasant representatives a delegation was elected to induce the federation to co-operate. The delegation succeeded and at the second meeting of the committee on July 26, the representatives of the federation were present.

At that meeting several committees of action were elected and actual work for agitation and organization among the unemployed were assigned to each. Thus the movement against unemployment in the great industrial centers of Japan initiated by the left wingers has sucessfully united all the local labor organizations regardless of their political tendencies.

IN another industrial center in western Japan, Kobe, the unemployment movement, initiated by the Nihon Rodokumiai Hyogikai, was started July 22. On that day the city was placarded with various posters bearing slogans against unemployment and the offensive of capital. On the 24th a mass meeting was held in the largest meeting hall in the city. On the 25th a permanent local committee on unemployment was elected.

Similar attempts by the left wing elements in the trade union have also been made in other industrial centers and similar results have been arrived at. It is erroneous to suppose, however, that all these attempts have been carried on smoothly. On the contrary every forward step taken by left wing organizations has met with obstacles laid by reformists and with suppression by the government.

Arrests and bloodshed are usual occurrences at mass meetings. Often the speakers are not allowed to speak more than a few opening words before they are pulled down from the platform by armed police. However, the brutal measures of suppression exercised by police and the gendarmerie are serving as oil on fire. The revolutionary leaders of Japan are finding unexpected promoters of their agitational work in the very suppression by the police administration.

SO far the writer has not received information as to the completion of the organization of the National League of Unemployed; or the opening of the National Congress of Unemployed, which is the immediate aim of the unemployment movement so energetically started by the Hyogikai But it is simply a matter of time.

There are yet two points to be remembered in observing the future development of this unemployment movement of the left wingers. At the Oska conference held July 26, it was decided that "the movement shall not concern itself with the work bearing a character of mutual aid, but it shall be a protest movement against the government and other sources on the question of unemployment." This statement clearly indicates the character of the movement as a political movement, fundamentally differing from the movement of reformists.

ANOTHER point to be remembered is the dual purpose of the movement, which its promoters are thinking to attain. The All-Japan Federation of Labor, that is, the national unity of labor, has had no opportunity of realization since its first abortion in 1922. The failure was partly due to the failure on the part of the leaders to base the unity movement on concrete and practical problems.

This mistake has lately been acknowledged by the left wing leaders and the unemployment movement has at once been grasped by them for the basis for the national unity of the trade union movement. This is why the present unemployment movement started by the Hyogikai is so important and needs close attention.

Proletarian Party.

IN Japan there is no "workers' party" nor any party legally representing the interests of non-propertied classes at the present. (Since this was written The Proletarian or Labor Pary has been formed early in December.—Editor DAILY WORKER.) The cry for a "Proletarian Party", however, has become loud since a year before last, when the extention of franchise became evident. This year in May the so-called "universal suffrage" (a manhood suffrage with many limitations) was passed through the diet and the number of voters for parliamentary elections was increased from 3,000,000 to 12,000,000.

The new political factor thus created is already becoming the object of exploitation by bourgeois politicians on the one hand and on the other has become the basis of a new political force of the oppressed class. The bourgeoisie, who have still to fight against feudalistic aristocracy and landlordism, want to exploit the new political factor for the warfare against their internal enemies.

For this purpose they are giving orders to their reformist lackeys to organize the new voters into an illusionary social-democratic party. Against such a danger and betrayal, the left wing leaders in the trade union movement are striving to organise the new political elements into a "proletarian party" on the basis of class distinction.

LATE last year preliminary work for the practical organization of a "Workers' and Peasants' Party" were started by Communist elements within the labor organizations. Particularly in the Japanese Federation of Labor the work was going on with definite results, until the so-called "internal trouble" put a temporary check upon it.

During and after the split, the center of the oganizational work of the political party has shifted from the Federation to the Japan Peasants' Union and to the newly organized Nihon Rodokumiai Hyogikai.

The reformistic leaders of the federation, now being free to exercise their will after the expulsion of communists, have consciously attemted to lead the party movement into chaos, thereby to a sabotage of the interests of the working masses. Instead of one national party of workers and peasants, which up to recently they advocated, they have begun to authorize the formation of local independent parties.

Thus, under the tacit guidance of the political committee of the Japanese Federation of Labor, several small local parties have already sprung up in different parts of the country. As a matter of course, these mushroom parties are of no great force, but their appearance at the critical moment of the founding of a national party is certainly an obstacle and an active sabotage on the part of the reformists against the coming "Proletarian Party."

PARTY'S CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ENDORSES UNITY RESOLUTION OF THE POLITICAL COMMITTEE

BY decision of the political committee, which on November 14th adopted the unity resolution for ending the factional struggle in the party and drawing the party into mass work, the resolution was submitted to the members of the Central Executive Committee with the request that they record their vote on the resolution.

Under the decision of the fourth national convention of the party the Central Executive Committee now consists of 22 members. The committee was elected on a parity basis at the convention with the understanding that if the representatives of the Young Workers (Communist) League changed after the Young Workers League convention the parity be maintained. The fact that such a change took place added two members to the Central Executive Committee.

The Central Executive Committee, thus constituted, has endorsed the resolution of the political committee by a vote of 17 in favor and five opposed.

The resolution of the political committee thru decision of the Central Executive Committee becomes the resolution of the Central Executive Committee. The overwhelming majority of votes cast for the resolution shows that the work of unifying the party is developing and gaining stronger support emong the leadership of the party as it has received in the vote of the membership at the various meetings thruout the country.

NEW YORK MEMBERSHIP AND DISTRICT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ENDORSES THE C. E. C. UNITY RESOLUTION

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 — The members and District Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party endorsed the resolution of the Central Executive Committee for the unification of the party and again throwing the party into mass work by a vote of 460 against 233.

The meeting at which the decision was made began at 3 p. m. and lasted until midnight, thus giving full opportunity for debate on the resolution.

Jay Lovestone and James P. Cannon represented the Central Executive Committee of the party. J. W. Johnstone appeared at the meeting and asked for time to speak in opposition to the unity resolution. He was granted the floor by the C. E. C. representatives for an hour for his attack upon the resolution, thus giving him the opportunity to present any argument he could, against the Central Executive Committee proposal for unification and development of mass work of the party.

Joseph Brahdy, who opposed the unity resolution and supported Johnstone's position openly defended Ludwig Lore, an expelled member of the party on the floor of the membership meeting.

The membership meeting in New York was preceded by a meeting of the District Executive Committee which had been elected on a parity basis of 7 to 7 in August. The District Executive Committee after long discussion of the unity resolution adopted the resolution by a vote of 8 to 2. The N. Y. membership vote of 2 to 1 in favor of a cessation of factional struggle and support of the Central Executive Committee in its efforts to unify the party and throw the party strength into the struggle against the capitalists and into work among the masses, is another great step forward toward achieving the ends which the Central Executive Committee is fighting for, that is, to draw the party into the mass struggles of the workers, to throw its strength into these struggles rather than have them go into the factional fights inside of the party.

ABOUT EXTRA DUES PAYMENTS

THE organization department of the Central Executive Committee is advised of the fact that some units of the party are experiencing difficulty in figuring out the dues payments of those comrades whose earnings are over $100 a month.

The constitution of the party (Art. 16, Sec. 2) states:

"Each member shall pay 50c. per month dues, which shall be receipted for by dues stamps issued by the Central Executive Committee. Members whose earnings are more than $100 per month shall pay additional dues to the amount of 1% of their earnings above $100."

For the benefit of the financial secretaries, and for the party members generally, the following scale of dues payments is here given. This should be clipped out and kept, particularly by the financial secretaries, so that no confusion may arise when the matter of dues payments for the comrades making over $100 per month comes up.

The Scale is as Follows:

Comrades who earn from $100 and up to $125 per month, pay 50c. a month in dues; that is, one regular dues stamp.

Comrades who earn from $125 and up to $150 per month, pay 75c. a month in dues; that is, one regular dues stamp, and 1 special .25c. stamp.

Comrades who earn from $150 and up to $175 per month, pay $1 a month in dues; that is, one regular dues stamp, and 1 special 50c. stamp.

Comrades who earn from $175 and up to $200 a month, pay $1.25 a month in dues; that is, one regular dues stamp, and 1 special 75c. stamp.

Comrades who earn from $200 and up to $225 a month, pay $1.50 a month in dues; that is, one regular dues stamp, and 1 special $1 stamp.

Comrades who earn from $225 and up to $250 a month, pay $1.75 a month in dues; that is, one regular dues stamp, and 1 special $1.25 stamp.

Comrades who earn from $250 and up to $275 a month, pay $2.00 a month in dues; that is, one regular dues stamp, and 1 special $1.50 stamp.

"Patriot" Fumes at Pardon.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—In a statement issued by Captain George L. Darte, adjutant general of the military order of the world war, on the pardoning of Benjamin Gitlow, he declared that "in liberating a man who deliberately preaches the doctrines of revolution, anarchy and overthrow of this government, a man who was justly convicted and such decision upheld by the United States supreme court," Governor Alfred Smith had committed a serious error in his judgment and then in denouncing the pardon he said that it was "a deplorable miscarriage of justice" and would not meet the approval of "true" American citizens.

Polls Open Today for Chicago Amalgamated Joint Board Elections

In the election that is now taking place in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers for the Chicago joint board officials, the lines are drawn very clearly. On one side is the candidate of the left wing, and the progressive elements in the union, Nathan Green, member of the pantsmakers' local, who is pledged to a program which stands for progress in the union and against the present slugging and expulsion policy carried on by the present administration..

On the other side is the candidate of the reactionaries and the die-hards in the union, Sam Levin, the present manager of the Chicago joint board, under whose leadership many of the active members of the union have been slugged and terrorized.

Questions for Fifth Lesson in Capital

(Chapter II, pages 96 to 106, Volume I.)

EARL R. BROWDER, Instructor.

1. What connection has the right of private property with the process of the exchange of commodities?
2. Has a commodity a use-value to its owner?
3. Explain the process which produces, from the development of exchange, the universal equivalent.
4. How does money give an external expression to the contrast between use-value and value?
5. Of what consequence is it whether an article is produced for consumption, or produced for exchange?
6. What sort of commodities are the first to become money?
7. What sort of commodities are best fitted by nature to perform the function of money? Give reasons.
8. Is the value of gold merely a formal, imaginary value?
9. How is it possible to find an expression for the value of gold?
10. Is the problem of analyzing money, of any fundamental difference from the problem of analyzing a commodity?

Answers to Questions of Lesson Four

(Pages 81 to 96, Volume I, Capital)

1. Commodities enter into relations with each other, not as use-values (a pencil has no use-value relation with a cigar), but merely as quantitative expressions of homogeneous human labor.

2. The enigmatical character of the product of labor arises from its form as a commodity, under which form the social character of labor, the mutual relations between the producers, expresses itself as a social relation between the products of labor.

3. This appearance of a social relation between the products of labor creates the illusion that value is a characteristic that resides within the commodity itself. This, however, is only an illusion. The value is an expression of the equality of all sorts of human labor, of the social character of labor.

4. The actual nature of the relationship expressed in the exchange of commodities is a definite social relationship between men.

5. Fetishism, in the religious world, is the idea that the products of men's brains (idols, gods) are independent beings endowed with life, entering into relations both with one another and with the human race; the fetishism of commodities, is the idea that the products of men's hands (commodities) have an independent existence when they become commodities, entering into relations both with one another and with their producers.

6. The actual process of exchange is the means whereby the private individuals or groups, carrying on production independently of one another, come into social contact with each other in the act of exchange, by means of which their labor asserts itself as a part of the labor of society; this is totally independent of whether the individuals or groups are conscious of this fact or not, and knowledge of the relations so established does not change the basis of exchange, which continues to appear to the producers in the form of value as a characteristic of the products of labor.

7. It is necessary that the production of commodities becomes highly developed, and men have accumulated a great deal of experience with the phenomena of exchange, before the scientific conviction can be established that all the different kinds of private labor, being carried on independently, are continually being reduced by this system to the quantitative proportions in which society requires them.

8. The expression of all commodities in money, which leads to the establishment of their character as values, actually conceals the social character of private labor, because this money form gives the absurdity of one concrete commodity standing as the universal incarnation of abstract human labor. This form of thought has social validity only for a definite, historically determined mode of production, and its mystery vanishes when it is compared to other forms of production.

9. In feudal society the relations in the performance of labor are based upon personal dependence, and these social relations appear in their true nature as the mutual personal relations of the persons and classes in that society. Under capitalism these mutual relations are disguised in the shape of social relations between the products of labor.

10. Marx's statement that the formulae of bourgeois economists are the products of a society in which the process of production controls the men, rather than the men controlling the process of production, means that these formulae, being so diametrically opposed to the underlying reality, disclose the complete lack of understanding of the bourgeoisie of its own system; a system controlled by men must necessarily be a system understood by men.

Workers Write About the Workers' Life

BILL GREEN'S ADVICE GOES FAR ASTRAY

Sends Information But It Only Confuses

By TOM RAY.

(Worker Correspondent)

McDONALD, Pa.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor has mailed out sets of slogans addressed to "Fellow Citizens and Trade Unionists:

He states that there are 158,000 coal miners on strike in the anthracite region. But he doesn't mention that 10,000 miners remain at work taking care of the coal operators' property. This means that the same results will come out of it as came out of the 1922 railroad strike, when nine crafts remained at work while seven crafts went on strike.

Information Should Not Confuse.

We have learned what the fatal results of such A. F. of L. policies are, and want no more of them. Information should be mailed out, but not to confuse the workers.

Green advises us to study two pamphlets by John L. Lewis on the anthracite. But we remember the last international convention when Lewis told us he would see us in hell before he would give Alex Howat a hearing, at a time when about 80 per cent of the delegates expressed themselves in favor of Howat.

Public Sympathy Depends on Power.

Green says that "public sympathy" is necessary. But he chooses to forget that the way the British miners won their strike was not by depending upon the "public" but upon their own power, used in unity with the two other basic industries, the railwaymen and the transport workers.

The British workers are not afraid of Communist leadership and as long as they have the power the "public" will favor them, just as over here the "public" favors those who have the physical force to rule.

The American miners must unite their forces like the British did, so that they will all strike at once, then unite in an alliance like the British did, with railway workers and transport workers. And then, with militant leadership they can get somewhere.

EIGHTH WEEK OF STRIKE FINDS HILLCREST SILK STRIKERS FIRM; SCABS REPORTED TO HAVE QUIT

By ALBERT WEISBORD, a Worker Correspondent.

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., Dec. 14.—The beginning of the eighth week in the gallant struggle of the silk workers in the Hillcrest Silk Mill in West New York finds the workers who are out just as firm and solid as before. Those who have savings are ready to spend all of their savings and borrow before going back defeated.

Those who are in need are being taken care of by the strike fund which has been raised and which is large enough to enable even the full payment of pickets on the picket line. However, as the fight is becoming one of a fight to a finish character, contributions to the United Front Committee of Textile Workers of Hudson county, made payable to George Pearlman at the headquarters, 393 Broadway, Union City are very welcome.

The boss is frantic. In spite of everything he is not able to get workers who will scab, at least he has never been able to get even ten per cent of the help he needs in the mill. And now it has been reported that the few scabs have not been able to face the steady picket line of the strikers and at least half of them quit work telling the boss they were tired of doing his dirty work.

Change of Front by Police.

The determination of the United Front Committee of Textile Workers in pushing the case against the police for their illegal and brutal actions have resulted in a change of front on the part of the local judge, police, and mayor. They have become quite polite. An offending policeman has been removed from the force pending investigation after the papers had given front page publicity to how the officer had forced someone physically to go into the mill as a strikebreaker. A big mass meeting has been staged with speakers:— Elizabeth Curley Flynn, Carlo Tresca, and Albert Weisbord.

Efforts will be made to make the mass meeting the initial force to stimulate into life mill committees in the other mills of the district so as to show the bosses that against their united front the workers have established an united front of their own.

Talks with Daily Worker Correspondents

By NANCY MARKOFF.

ONE of the students in the Chicago Worker Correspondents' class, who is also a Chicago correspondent for the Novy Mir, New York, the Russian Communist daily in this country, gave a brief talk to the class on how the Novy Mir developed its Worker Correspondents. That account was very helpful to the class because the problems the Novy Mir faced were similar to the ones we have to face in developing our Worker Correspondents.

IT takes a little time before a worker forms an understanding of what the job of a Worker Correspondent requires. At first he is inclined to think that an easy flow of language or the eloquence of a college professor in oratory are essentials for the job. But when he sits down to reason it out with himself he realizes that the people he will write for are workers like himself, that they live very much the same as he does, that his worries and his problems are very much like theirs—and once having reached that conclusion he is well on the road for active participation in the class struggle as a fighting Worker Correspondent.

NEXT in line comes the need to develop a nose for news. For instance, a worker will tell you that nothing ever happens where he is employed that he can write about. But that very same worker will tell in the next breath that "in the store where he works the employes pay more for food than the customers because they cannot take their lunch hour during the special sale price hour!"

IN the beginning it is better for a Worker Correspondent, if he is in doubt about whether a story is news or not, to send it in and let the editor pass final judgment.

IF anyone has told you that we are averse to receiving cartoons for our Worker Correspondents' column, tell him he is misinformed. The fact is we are wishing very hard that some more worker cartoonists would get on the job.

BUSINESS FIRMS COMPEL WORKERS TO BE ATHLETIC

Advertising Scheme Is Behind Move

By A Worker Correspondent

Big firms like Montgomery Ward, Western Electric company, Taylor Trunk company, Capper and Capper, Spaulding Sporting Goods Store and many others organize, for advertising purposes, athletic teams out of the ranks of the workers employed by them. The workers train and play after working hours.

The bosses spread the propaganda that this is done for the workers' health, but this is not true. Physical exercise is good for one's health when used as a recreation but that which is compulsory and carries with it the fear of losing one's job can not be regarded as play. Further physical strain after a long day's work, at the bench, or standing on one's feet all day, behind a counter, waiting on cutomers can not be regarded as fun but only as the rankest form of exploitation.

The writer happened to be present at a game staged between the Montgomery Ward team and some school girl team. The Montgomery Ward girls were so tired that they were more on the floor than on their feet. You could discern by the expression on their faces that they were in no mood to play, but they had to play or lost their jobs.

Workers who want to participate in healthful sports can now join a sport organization of their own where they will organize the games themselves and have their say in booking the games instead of some official of the exploiting class who has the company's interests to protect.

For information on how to join the Workers' Sport Alliance communicate with Emma Blechsmidt, care of Erickson, 4911 W. Walton Pl., Chicago, Ill.

Prolet-Tribune, Living Newspaper of Novy Mir

By A Worker Correspondent
Student of Chicago Class.

About a year ago the Chicago group of the worker correspondents of the Russian Communist daily Novy Mir began to talk of issuing a living newspaper. Some comrades were afraid that it is too a big job for the group. They were talking about it the whole year until finally they collected enuf courage to start.

A few months ago the first issue of Prolet-Tribune, as the paper was named, was "published" at the Workers' House. Altho an admission fee of 35 cents was charged about a hundred workers attended the reading and enjoyed it. The news about the novel "paper" spread among the Russian workers of the city.

The second number was issued about about a month later in the same place. The hall was crowded not only with workers, but the "intelligenzia" also made its appearence. The editors of the local Russian newspaper, a few Russian physicians, and others attended. There was too much copy and part of it was left over for the next issue.

The unanimous opinion was favorable for the worker correspondents. The comrades from nearby cities who attended were so enthusiastic that they invited the group to issue the living newspaper also in Kenosha and [illegible]man.

This success encouraged the group so much that they decided to issue the paper periodically once a month in Chicago and also in Pullman and other nearby places where they may be invited. They also decided to lower the admission price to 25 cents.

The next regular issue of Prolet-Tribune will be out next Saturday, Dec. 19, at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division street. It is planned to have also an article written by a worker correspondent of The DAILY WORKER.

Worker Correspondents Join Celebration of 1825-1905 Revolts

Milwaukee and Ashland Aves.

The following will participate in the concert program: Russian String Orchestra of the Workers' House; Lithuanian, Lettish and Jewish Singing Societies, soloists, etc., over 150 people in all. Speakers in English, Russian and other languages will address the crowd that is expected to fill the hall. Beginning at 2 p. m. sharp. The celebration is arranged by the Veterans of the Revolution of 1905. An admission fee of 25c will be charged for the benefit of the International Labor Defense.

NEW YORK CITY—Local 24 of the Millinery Workers unanimously demanded the release of Benjamin Gitlow from Sing Sing prison, at their meeting on Thursday, Dec. 10 at Bryant Hall.

The appeal for the pardon of Gitlow was unanimously passed at a meeting at which more than 100 workers were present. This is one of the many demands that have been made by local unions of this city for Gitlow's release.

WHY THE LEFT WING OF I. L. G. W. HAS SIGMAN WHIPPED IN SPITE OF FAKED CONVENTION MAJORITY

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 11—(By Mail).—The International Ladies' Garment Workers' convention, in many ways, is unique as far as the American labor movement is concerned. For the first time a left wing makes its appearance representing the vast majority of the membership, but is represented by a minority delegation. This situation is seen and felt by everyone attending the convention.

Of course the Sigman machine makes a verbal bluff that they represent the membership, but the left wing has many times during the convention served notice that the welfare of the union demands a new administration and the Sigman administration seems to be very uneasy over the situation. What the trump cards will be is not yet visible.

Two Irreconcilable Views.

Left wing resolutions, such as world trade union unity, are being mechanically voted down and class collaboration schemes endorsed mechanically by the Sigman paper majority. At this writing the officers' report has not come before the convention. On this report will center the struggle between the lefts and the rights.

The administration is frankly for class collaboration and even lays the basis for another expulsion policy while the left wing, under the leadership of the Trade Union Educational League, is determined to compel the repudiation of the expulsion policy and to turn the organization away from co-operation with the exploiters of labor and into the channels of the class struggle.

The fact that the left wing delegates represent all the large clothing centers, with the exception of Cleveland, makes Sigman hesitate. He cannot repeat Boston. His manner thruout the convention shows plainly that he would like to, but the membership has spoken and they are waiting to speak again if what they expect from this convention is not materialized.

Green's Soft Pedal.

Bill Green speech to the convention was a plea for unity, a concession to the strength of the left wing. He even praised the radicals, altho it seemed many times that he was about to forget his role for the moment and talk about the radicals as he would like to. Sigman undoubtedly told him the predicament he was in, so the tactics had to be changed to suit the situation.

A left wing representing the vast majority of the membership cannot, and will not, allow itself to be ignored or pushed into the background Sigman's strength lies in what is known as the "out of town locals" and to the method of representation. Here are a few examples of how Sigman gained the majority of delegates to the convention and why he is so uneasy about his majority. The figures are compiled by the research department of the international so it is Sigman's own figures I am using.

Long Island and Eastern Department.

Local No.	Avg. Dues Paying Members in 1924	Delegates
57	4	2
113	110	3
128	9½	2
8	197	17

In five sections of the country, with 37 local unions, with approximately 1,200 members the Sigman administration has 50 delegates.

Relative Strength.

Cleveland is the only center that Sigman controls. Six locals have an average membership of 1,470 with 14 delegates. Even here the left wing has three delegates out of the 14. Philadelphia with a membership of 2,119 sent a solid machine delegation, but the membership are supporters of the left wing. Most of the leading members of the T. U. E. L. have been expelled. Their return to the union means left wing control. Anyone who had doubts about the left wing's claim should have attended the vecherinka given by the left wing delegates at which over 1,000 of the Philadelphia membership attended.

What strength the Sigman administration has lies in Cleveland, and in Locals 10, 48 and 89 of New York City. These three locals are large locals with a total average membership of 11,490, and in these locals the left wing has substantial minorities.

On the other hand contrast this with the strength of the left wing. Remember these figures are compiled by the Sigman officials. Local 2, 12,000 members; delegates, 14; Local 9, 7,000 members, delegates, 11; Local 22, 12,000 members, delegates, 14; Local 35, 6,000 members, delegates, 10. Here we have only four locals with an average membership of 37,000 with 49 delegates while Sigman has 50 delegates for 1,200 members. The left wing also controls Chicago, Boston, Montreal and many other smaller centers.

It can be readily seen, from these figures who it is that speaks in the name of the membership, and why the Sigman machine is weakening under the sledge hammer blows of the progressives and why the left wing frankly tells Sigman that his convention's paper majority will avail him nothing. The rank and file has spoken in unmistakable terms, that they want and must have a class struggle program and a class conscious leadership.

NEW DRIVE FOR LABOR PARTY NOW UNDER WAY; FURRIERS' RESOLUTION

The following resolution adopted in October by the Furriers' International convention is similar to the one adopted on Thursday by the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union convention at Philadelphia:

WHEREAS, The organized workers in their struggle for higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions have found themselves forced to combat not only the employers directly, but also the government thru all its agencies, anti-labor legislation, Daugherty injunctions, railroad labor boards, use of troops and police in strikes; and

WHEREAS, The entire history of the struggles of the working class shows that so long as the powers of the government are allowed to remain in the hands of the capitalist class, as at present in the United States, just so long will these powers of government be used against the workers; and

WHEREAS, It is necessary, in order for the workers to develop the political power of their class to build up a political organization of their own, a labor party which will draw the millions of workers into political activities and organize them for political struggles against the capitalists, and

WHEREAS, The LaFollette progressive movement, which is devoted to the interests of middle class business and large farmers, cannot serve as a party of the workers and poor farmers and has completely betrayed those workers who saw in it a substitute for a labor party; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the International Furriers' Union herewith favors the formation of a labor party based upon the trade unions and including as affiliated sections all other political organizations of a working class nature, upon a local, state and national basis.

"Christian" Poland Arrests 112 Peasants; Charge "High Treason"

GRODNO, Poland, Dec. 14.—A hundred and twelve peasants were recently arrested and forced to march long distances to the prison here. All of the peasants who were arrested are charged with high treason because of their demand that western White Russia join the Soviet Union.

COOLIDGE AND MINE OWNERS IN CONSPIRACY

Out to Smash Union in Anthracite

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON—(FP)— Calvin Coolidge may be stubbornly determined to help Morgan and Mellon and their allies in destroying the United Mine Workers of America.

Coolidge's closest adviser, except Mellon and Hoover, is Dwight Morrow, partner of J. P. Morgan. The Morgan and the Geo. F. Baker interests control the anthracite industry through the Big Seven anthracite companies. Morrow is in a position to tell Coolidge of any major moves by the anthracite operators. Does Coolidge know this:

That the anthracite operators, including Warriner and Richards, with Ivy Lee, their press agent, and Merritt, their counsel, held a secret conference Nov. 19, 20 and 21 in the Railroad club in New York City, at which they agreed to make a fight to a finish against the union?

That the big operators pledged the support of the New York banks to the smaller operators, to tide them over the period of the fight, and that Geo. F. Baker, Jr., was present when this compact was made?

That they took this action, resolved to brook no interference by any public official, state or federal, after satisfying themselves that Coolidge would do nothing to spoil their plan?

The Federated Press is assured that this conference was held and these decisions taken. It is assured further that the sentiment of the group is expressed by one operator when he said that "This time we will stand for no politicians butting in; we let Mark Hanna and Roosevelt break in once, but that was enough."

The reference to Roosevelt and Hanna recalls the Roosevelt letter to Sen. Lodge, published last summer, in which T. R. told of having sent Elihu Root to see Morgan & Co. since it was obvious that Morgan was the power in anthracite. Root saw Morgan's partners Geo. W. Perkins and Robert Bacon, and got "old Pierpont Morgan" on the telephone, with Geo. F. Baer. He induced them to agree to accept a coal commission which should make a settlement. That was in 1902. The strike had run all summer.

Starve the union coal miners into submission, is the plan the U. S. chamber of commerce offers. It is circulating this idea throughout the country. Now the business lobbies in the national capital are confident that—with Coolidge's help and the help of the interstate commerce commission and a huge anti-labor majority in congress—they are about to witness the crushing of the strongest unit in the American Federation of Labor.

Nowhere in the administration, or among its business allies, is there any fear that the American labor movement will deliver a counter-blow.

Publicity Agent for Grafters

Revelations at the trial of Colonel William Mitchell emphasize the fact that the capitalist class of this country engages in the business of patriotism just as they engage in any other business—for profit. Not the profit of the whole capitalist class, but each group of capitalists trying to loot the government treasury before other groups beat them to it.

It is primarily the business of a capitalist government to serve the interests of the entire capitalist class. It is the executive committee of the capitalist class as a whole. But occasionally it breaks down as various groups of venal officials try to gain peculiar advantages for one group of capitalists. To best serve the interests of the capitalist class the government should be able to step in and force any given group to yield to the welfare of the whole capitalist class. Such action frequently aligns powerful interests against the party in power. A case in point is the present furore over the role of aircraft in warfare.

For years the aircraft trust had been pillaging the government thru fraudulent contracts. Such frauds, involving millions of dollars, admitted by the war department itself, have been awaiting prosecution, but the department of justice, under the notorious crook, Daugherty, and his successor, John G. Sargent, has refrained from prosecution, for reasons best known to themselves.

In their desire to continue their looting the aircraft trust started a campaign with Colonel Mitchell as its principal publicity agent. In his zeal to serve the interests of his masters, Mitchell came in conflict with the general staff of the army and is now being court martialed. So powerful are his backers that his trial is a stage for melodramatic heroics. Everything was going splendidly as long as testimony in favor of Mitchell was being presented. The Hearst papers whooped it up for Mitchell and a separate air service.

But the scene changed as rebuttal testimony began. The wind was soon taken out of the sails of the "hero," fondly referred to by the aircraft grafters as "Colonel Billy." Evidence was presented to prove that Mitchell, while in France, indulged in the most reckless excesses, sending men to certain death as they flew over territory defended by the anti-aircraft guns of Germany.

Another blast against the claim of the supremacy of air forces shook the case of Mitchell when secret German war documents, obtained by the American military attache at Berlin, were read in court.

The claim of the aircraft trust that the anti-aircraft guns are ineffective is refuted by this evidence. Out of a total of 6,052 allied baloons and planes wrecked during the war 911 were brought down by anti-aircraft guns. That is more than 15 per cent of the total.

This squabble of one branch of the so-called national defense against the rest, because of the greed for pelf, is one of the reasons why military forces under capitalism can never hope to reach that stage of discipline realized by a revolutionary government.

In the United States each capitalist group strives for advantages for the sake of profit. Men in the service can never be assured their lives are not being wantonly sacrificed in the scramble between groups of manufacturers fighting to hog the graft.

Compared to the military unity of the Soviet Union, where the element of profit is eliminated and where the one impelling motive is the defense of the revolution no such a scandal as the Mitchell episode can ever arise. That is also one reason why the Soviet forces are the most formidable in the world. Furthermore the red army soldiers know they are not pawns in the game of profit, but they are protected by every device known to modern warfare.

Hunger Strike Against Imperialism

Julio Antonio Mella, general secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba, organizer of the student's federation and editor of the organ Youth, which also represents the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, is trying to arouse the workers of the Central American countries and of the United States against the fierce despotism prevailing in Cuba by a hunger strike in jail.

A valiant fighter in the youth movement and for the liberation of the workers from the thralldom of imperialism, Mella was chosen a victim of the vengeance of the American combines exploiting Cuba. He supported workers in their refusal to slave on the sugar-cane plantations at starvation wages and under miserable conditions. This interfered with the interests of the Havemeyer sugar trust, which, with the American Tobacco company, incited the war against Spain and has since held sway in Cuba. The police agents of the trust planted two bombs near a factory and then arrested and accused Mella and eleven other workers of the crime.

It is generally recognized that the United States ambassador, General Enoch H. Crowder, is exerting pressure to keep Mella in jail.

Today is the eleventh day of the hunger strike and the Cuban government shows no inclination to relent in its persecution. The outcome rests with the working class.

Protests have already been made by the All-America Anti-Imperialist League to the Cuban government and to the American state department. Also communications have been sent urging the labor unions of Central America to act. Workers everywhere should protest against this crime of imperialism and in Cuba the workers should be urged to call a general strike, thereby stopping production until the agents of imperialism release this valiant fighter for the working class.

Wall Street is anxious to horn in on the proposed Geneva disarmament conference for the altruistic purpose of inducing European nations to devote their energies to rebuilding their industries to make the countries safe for investments of finance capital.

Mr. Morris Sigman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has formed a united front with the Philadelphia police whose job it is to keep that city on the scab list.

The official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers attacks THE DAILY WORKER in a concoction of drivel, in an effort to evade the answer it must eventually make to its own membership regarding the use of gangsters against the left wing.

The Convention Is Over, What Next?

By Ben Gold

THE convention of the Furriers' International Union was held recently in Boston. It was necessary to discipline the New York members for their disobedience and disloyalty to the general officers. The general officers in the accusations, claimed that the Joint Board as well as its paid officers were not legally in their offices because the elections, according to the interpretations of the constitution by the former president, was not held at the pre-determined time. In addition, left-wingers were elected to responsible offices. The former secretary-treasurer, Rosenthal, they claimed was illegally suspended from his office and a few more acts that touched upon the integrity of the international constitution were pointed out.

Discipline. How?

To discipline the thousands of union members?—How? Make them pay a fine or possibly suspend them from the union? Dissolve the New York Joint Board? Remove the elected paid officers? Suspend entirely the four largest locals of the international?

The plan as to how to suspend the New York membership is still held a secret. Probably "the used-to-be" general officers know it. The punishment, the disciplinary measure, has not yet been made public. At the beginning of the convention, it appeared that the general officers would not permit a delegate of the New York Joint Board to be seated until the most important problems of the convention had been settled, in this act the former general executive board was led by socialist party politicians, who practiced the same methods that were used by the republicans and democrats to bar them from their seats in the assembly.

To Shut Off Expose.

The unseating of the delegate was not only meant to hit the New York Joint Board, but was also meant to prohibit the New York membership from unveiling the damnable facts of the Morris Kaufman-Abe Cahan-Forward leadership in the New York organization. To shut up the mouths of opponents has always been the tactics of yellow union leadership. The fiasco was made clear to all when the constitution was made the main problem at issue. The cry of the former General Executive Board about the constitution was only camouflage—a smokescreen by which they sought to cover their ocean of brutalities and crimes against the New York membership.

Did the yellows really think that the Joint Board would be barred from the convention? Did the socialist party hired advocate really plan to cut off the New York board from the international? Of course, the right-wingers in their hopeless fight against the left-wingers are capable of all—but it would have been suicide for the yellow clique. For how could they cut off over 10,000 members of the international when the entire international is only composed of 11,000 members?

Try to Save Hides.

It is clear that the right-wing politicians with the socialist law-guides did not know in what world they were. The staged-tone to discipline the New York membership was only a threat of a half-dead corpse, a soap bubble that burst at the first convening of the delegates. The truth is that each one of them sought a way to save his own hide, sought the best method to crawl out of the slush that they themselves had mixed. Many a member of the "used-to-be" General Executive Board can be deeply thankful to the left wing delegates who helped them get out of it the faster.

They have maneuvered, pulled political mannikin wires, used all kinds of dead political appeals, tried to change the dealer of the cards. "Let me deal once and I'll let you deal again," was their policy. They have even invited a new player—the jobber. But the game was lost—the king was left without a throne. The machine did not dare to cut off the New York membership from the international. A majority seated the delegate. The losers lost themselves entirely. Whither will the roads lead? The right-wing leaders do not know—they must follow—there is no alternative. From the so-called aggressiveness—they were forced to retreat to the defense lines.

Who Needs Discipline?

Without mercy is the prosecution. The incision of truth is deep. Who needs to be disciplined? The New York membership that bled and suffered without measure and finally emancipated itself from the Kaufman-Forward rule or the leaders who were responsible for the inquisition, terror, injustice, provocations, punishment, suppression, etc.—an endless chain of crimes?

How does the leadership feel? Have they no conscience? Do they feel remorse? Scheidemanns and Noskes know no remorse! Should the occasion arise again they will do it over again! When the left-wing delegates speak, when Shatchman, the present president speaks—it is the voice of the many thousands who believe in them. But do those on the side-lines believe? Seemingly impossible. But not all has yet been told—everything has not yet been said. Right is the delegate that assured the convention that altho he must vote as he had been told but he wants to know the truth. When even a tenth of the truth is known it is enuf.

"Against the Constution."

No one denies it. Neither the former president, nor the vice-president has anything to say! Justify—what? Crimes! But . . . the constitution! You have transgressed against the constitution—you are illegally in office. Constitution ueber alles are their shouts. The orders of the president were not followed—this is against the constitution. The former secretary was impeached and suspended for actions that were not so beautiful, however—it is against the constitution. A number of organizers were shown the exit—the machine told the locals—that is against the constitution. Thousands of furriers refused to listen to the former president, this also is an additional point for the accusation of violations of the constititution. A just election was held—so, this is unconstitutional. Brother—fist-fighters were thrown out and the graft system has been uprooted—the right-wing prosecution calls it "irregularities"—so, this is against the constitution. The left-wing organized an opposition to the higher gendarmerie—this is also against the constitution. The thousands of membership who flung back the suspension policy—acted against the constitution. Thirty-two pages, densely written, contained the blasphemies committed against the "holy" constitution!

Verdict? Guilty!

Guilty—That's All!

How otherwise?—the president appointed a committee of seven: Five constitution-loving citizens and two "outlaws." Five strangers from afar, as I think, who were never in New York as yet. Investigations? Witnesses? Facts? Unnecessary! Guilty—that is all!

Th delegates vote on the report. So here is where the big comedy begins. The constitution is alright when it opposes you—but when it affects my interests, I mind it as a cat's meow. Parliamentary rules are good weapons to disarm and train opponents, but when the opponent holds the parliamentary weapon it is—down with rules, down with regulations—away with the constitution. When it is necessary, we make much of democracy but, brother president follows the mannikin rope of the socialist party advocate and he . . . rules against everything when it suits their purpose—even the constitution.

The yellows never turn red even when caught red-handed. Demagogues know no limits. In the name of equality, of fraternity in the name of the holy constitution—does our goodly president sneer at law and everything else! Appeal against the president's decision—you are out of order! Truly, how do you dare? If you finally win your appeal against the decision of Mr. President—the majority is out of order. And if you open the holy book, and read the constitution—the constitution is out of order. Justice? RULED OUT OF ORDER! You are guilty if the constitution is against, you are guilty—you are guilty anyway. You have violated the yellow virginity!

The joker is a funny card. You can use it, both ways—right or left. When necessary, it fits into the blacks, when there is a call, red is its color. If you are a good player—it may save you the game. At the beginning, the game was lost. So the joker was dealt to them. And the blacks won aganist the red—a game that is all. The entire labor movement is only a game with the gang. But the convention unveiled the game and put in the open its players.

Uniting Science and the Working Class -

By Gregory Zinoviev

(Speech of Gregory Zinoviev, president of the Communist International, at the meeting of the Leningrad Soviet in connection with the celebration of the 200 years' anniversary of the Academy of Science.)

IN the name of the Leningrad Soviet, I have pleasure in extending a hearty greeting to the Academy of Science and its guests. I greet you in the name of the Soviet of the first proletarian dictatorship, the Soviet of the town which deservedly bears the historic name of the greatest man of our epoch, that of Comrade Lenin.

In the 200 years since the foundation of the Academy of Science, much has happened in Leningrad. To mention a few things from the recent past: it was here that the Decembrist movement began; here in the streets of St. Petersburg, men such as Tschernyschevski were led to the scaffold and, amidst the silence of the population, not only symbolic but actual executions of the greatest leaders of the movement "Narodnaya Wolya" (people's freedom, people's will), Shelyabov, Perovskaya and others, took place. It was here that the workers first raised the banner of insurrection, and here that the two revolutions of 1917 were carried to a conclusion.

Not Leningrad alone, but this particular hall has had many experiences. It experienced the epoch of absolutism, the epoch of monarchy, of the bourgeoisie and of the large landowners; here the State Duma met; it experienced the first lightning flashes of the revolution; and then, when the workers' revolution began to be victorious, it saw the delegates of the country of the workers and peasants. Finally it experienced great world congresses of the revolutionary workers of all countries, but now for the first time it sees within its walls an assembly like this, a meeting of representatives of the working class of the first victorious revolution with the best representatives of science in the whole world.

Our party has an exactly outlined program based on scientific conclusions and on the foundation of the inviolability of scientific knowledge. Karl Marx was a very eminent scientific man and not merely a revolutionary. His discovery has, from the scientific point of view, at least the same enormous significance as the few inventions which have been made in the domain of pure science. True Marxism realises that a great discovery in any domain whatever—be it in astronomy or in pure mathematics—has an enormous significance. The discoveries of Prof. Pavlov are of far-reaching importance. We however, believe that the discoveries made by Karl Marx with regard to the laws of the development of mankind, have at least no less historical significance.

As long as 80 years ago, Karl Marx showed that class war would inevitably lead to the dictatorship of the proletariat. The dictatorship however on its part, is a stage of transition leading to the annihilation of the whole state, of all means of force, a jump from the era of necessity to the era of freedom. At that time only a few took this discovery seriously. It is now being confirmed here, in a country which embraces a sixth of the whole globe, and it will doubtless meet with confirmation in the whole world. (Applause.)

At that time the best heads, such as Darwin, also grasped the great significance of Marx' discovery. To-day there are no doubt among scientists, not a few who take an attitude of unrelenting scepticism towards the idea of Marxism. We are however firmly convinced that now that Marxism is being put into practice an epoch is coming in which there will inevitably be an approach between the best representatives of science and the representatives of the masses of workers who are numbered in millions. By various paths, from various sources, from various points of view, but inevitably, these currents will meet at some definite point and thenceforth flow together amicably side by side.

In the program of our party the following words are to be found: "The Russian Communist Party supports all measures which lead to the development of science and is interested in its further development and in the creation of favorable conditions for the improvement of the productive forces of the country." We have of course not yet done even the half of what might be done to promote science and to improve the material position of the disciples of science. The situation of our scholars is still very hard. What has been done is only a beginning. Now that the country is beginning to boom economically and that we have started actually to carry out the program of the October revolution, I must state that we shall greatly multiply that which has been done already. In any case, what we have already accomplished shows that we are fully aware that the development of science is closely bound up with the development of the efficiency of our country and of the whole human race.

There are many differences of opinion between the scientists with a revolutionary tendency and those with an anti-revolutionary tendency. Marx invented caustic appellations for those who did not take an objective view of his "Capital." Marx said that in order to reach the dominant heights of science, it is necessary to fight one's way fearlessly along stony paths. Alas, not all scientists are prepared to do this! A considerable number is in moral subjection to the privileged classes and is incapable of rising in any way. Those who subordinate science to outside interests were designated unworthy by Marx. Some of these answered Marx by saying that he himself also adapted his science to certain external interests. This is untrue. On the contrary, the fact is, that scientific Marxism has no other object than that of serving the masses and of giving objective expression to the interests of the enormous majority of the population.

Two parallel processes are inevitable. The fighting lines of the scientists are constantly approaching nearer to the fighting lines of the revolutionaries. On the other hand, processes of disintegration are taking place within the world of science itself. Scientists must study the science of social development as it is necessary and must endeavor as quickly as possible to open to mankind the door which must lead to the destruction of capital.

Lenin once said that the scientists had tried 605 remedies before they found remedy 606 to destroy such a scourge as syphilis. But is not capitalism on the whole a greater scourge than syphilis? And, is it not worth while for scientists and revolutionaries to have just as much patience and in the same way to try 606, and, if necessary, 6000 remedies to liberate mankind from the yoke of capitalism? (Loud applause.)

The idea that the proletariat by liberating itself is liberating the whole world, is beginning, in numerous places, to penetrate the minds of people of entirely different points of view. Thus as the Daily Herald reports, an archbishop recently said at a religious meeting:

> "I sometimes think that the Russia of to-day is endeavouring to fulfill the Christian teaching which we Christians reject. The slogan 'Every one according to his need' is a more Christian commandment than 'Everyone according to his greed'. The former is the principle of communism, the second is ours."

Thus sound ideas crop up sometimes at unexpected places. Of course we do not carry out the Christian doctrine because we, are materialists. Nevertheless we tell ourselves, in the opposition camp they speak of the superiority of our ideas: "The mole of history digs well."

Professor Roman from India, who is taking part in this meeting, used strong words in his speech when he said the arm of time cannot arrest the inevitable. I said to myself that, though his terminolocy is different, he has in essentials reached the spirit of Lenin, and that the words "it is granted to no one to prevent mankind realizing the principle of freedom," are very remarkable and symbolic.

All this justifies us in regarding with confidence the future of science. There is still much that separates us from the scientists, but there is also much in common between us, the representatives of the proletariat, and the scientists.

We do not demand a program in common, but we believe that there are three points which might unite us, These are:

1. A fight against new wars. It is clear to us all that forces hostile to mankind are already making preparations for a new war. Can we, the workers in the revolutionary labor movement join with the camp of the scholars, so that each in his own way works against the return of new wars? (Applause). I believe that we can so unite.

2. I feel sure that every serious scientist realizes the total injury which arises from the anarchy which prevails in production, from the lack of a systematic foundation in economics, from the conflicts and rivalries which arise thereform. In the present stage of the development of material wealth, the time has come to abolish anarchy in production. The time has come for mankind to live according to a plan which is less dependent on blind chance and on the nature of the elements in production, less dependent on the conflicts in privileged groups which inevitably lead to wars. He who is prepared to join us in fighting against war, must also be prepared to fight anarchy in production. I believe that, in spite of the differences of opinion between us we can, in the case in question, unite to help mankind to get out of the anarchy of production and to promote the development of the cultural and material forces of mankind. (Applause).

3. The third thing, finally, in which we can unite, is an alliance of scientists with the working masses, with the working class. Yes or no? I ask the scholars. Has the time come to bring science nearer to the masses and to make the greatest discoveries of science accessible to the people? Yes or no? I am convinced that all scientists, all the best of mankind cannot but be thinking of uniting with the people and especially with the working masses, the vanguard of all who work.

I believe that these three points: the fight against war, against anarchy in production, and for an approach between science and the masses must be completely and unconditionally acceptable to every scientist who wishes to serve his people, to serve the whole world.

The famous Russian scholar Prof. Timiryasev, in his last letter to his son before his death, wrote that the Bolsheviki are working for the happiness of the people and will bring them happiness. Full of enthusiasm for Lenin's activity, Timiryasev wrote: "I send you my warmest greeting and wish you continued success in your work for the happiness of mankind."

This was the first swallow from the world of science. Since that time eight years have elapsed. The workers' revolution has overcome all obstacles and has come nearer to the fulfilment of its program, to the elevation of the standard of the culture and well-being of the people. There is no doubt that the Russian scientists will now reach us by various ways; they will sometimes wound us but they will reach the point at which Timiryasev arrived.

The scientists of Leningrad experienced difficult times in the years 1918-1921, when the material situation of scholars was such that they had a right to be discontented. It was not easy for us to witness these privations. We did not close our eyes to the fact that the professors were suffering severely, and we were objective enough not to cherish feelings of enmity when we were met by an obstinate refusal on the part of certain groups of scholars to understand our work, and saw how all our intentions were interpreted in an unfavorable sense. We were objective enough to realize that this attitude was inevitable and to grasp the fact that at first we could not but talk different languages. We understood that the time would come, whether in one or in many years, when the best of them would recognize that we are in the right, not only externally but in essentials, when they would realize that the working class had seized the power not in order to gain privileges for itself, but in order thru its victory to liberate the whole world.

The introduction of our revolution has now ended and the real program of the great revolution is beginning. Now we can really think of safeguarding not only the political, but also the economic side of the revolution. Ensuring the economic side of the revolution however means raising our country to a height it has never before reached.

We turn to our scientists and to the representatives of international science who are present with the request that they will help us in this great work. We believe that it is their duty and their moral right to help the first revolution to raise itself to a cultural height which has never before been attained.

We look to you to show that science no longer plays the part of the handmaid of the bourgeoisie, but that of a torch which lights the way for oppressed mankind. Help this people of a hundred millions, and the working masses will show you their true gratitude. (Stormy applause).

CO STRIKERS FIGHT PINCHOT PLAN

SIGMAN MACHINE IS FACING HOT FIGHT ON EXPULSIONS IN LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS' CONVENTION

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 15.—The expulsion policy is now before the International Ladies' Garment Workers' convention. Progressive delegates have presented a minority report dealing with the situation in the industry, condemning class collaboration and expulsion policy, and demanding referendum on policy and elections of president, secretary and general executive board. The minority report shows that the demoralization of the union is due to the Sigman administration creating war within the union while making peace with instead of struggle against the bosses.

Zimmerman introduced the report. He drew a picture of the struggle where Sigman combined with Breslaurer, Heller and Langer against progressives and was finally compelled to join with progressives against these reactionaries. He warned the machine that they would again issue leaflets and hold membership meetings until a class conscious fighting policy was adopted and enforced in the international, that Sigman's administration and their policy must be repudiated.

Challenge Gangster Practice.

Rose Woris pointed out that Sigman had used police courts and gangsters, broke into offices at dead of night and that many members were crippled for life by these gangsters who had been paid out of the union treasury; that they had advised both custom company take out injunctions against workers.

Antonini complimented the progressives, saying that they were a good militant group and that he had opposed the expulsion policy. He defended Sigamn by trying to blame Langer, Breslaurer and Heller for the expulsion policy altho Sigman's report lays basis for same policy in the future and only yesterday Sigman declared war on progressives as soon as the convention was over.

Joseph Zack pointed out that expulsions always begin just before a new agreement and that if they had conferred with the employers they would have agreed to civil war in the union, that expulsion policy was part of class collaboration and only benefitted the employers, that unity and solidarity can only come with repudiation of expulsion policy and the adoption of a fighting policy against the employers.

The committee on officers' report endorses the general executive board report, commends it for its good work and lays basis for continuation of class collaboration and expulsion policy. The debate will last all day.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

MUSSOLINI is going ahead. He is about to declare Italy an empire and make the little puppet Emanuel an emperor, perhaps with a raise in pay. This is good, remarks Arthur Brisbane, the doting philosopher of the Hearst press. The pope is of the opinion that fascism is better for him than either the rule of the workers or the liberals, but the holy organ grinder does not like the idea of forcing catholics to join the fascist unions. The church should be the center of social life and not the state, says the pope. He means political life also.

ACCORDING to reports, certain socialist elements in Italy have issued a statement demanding a concerted war against fascism. It is about time. The Communists have been like voices crying in the wilderness, calling for a united front against the blackshirt regime. The socialists heard and heeded not. Now, Mussolini announces his decision to crush all parties that make the slightest pretense of standing for the interests of the workers. Mussolini has lined up with the proponents of class-collaboration in the United States; with the Bill Johnstons and the William Greens. The only difference is that Mussolini is more intelligent than the American sapheads who are using the unions as tools of the capitalist class.

MUSSOLINI is opposed to class warfare and he is taking what he thinks are the necessary organizational steps to eliminate the class struggle. But Mussolini, who knows something about history should recollect the story of the Saxon king who tried to hold back the tides with a broom. There is only one solution of the class struggle and that is the abolition of all classes thru the coming to power of the only producing class—the working class. "Everybody a producer" will be the slogan of the future. There will be no class warfare then. It is interesting to note that the theory of class peace has now become a universal disease sponsored chiefly by renegade socialists. The pure and simple labor faker lacks the intelligence to rationalize his treason.

THERE is talk of a dictatorship in France. Strange how benevolent this dictatorship appears when it is considered necessary to save the skin of some capitalist power! It is sinful when the workers adopt it as a necessary organ of government during

MELLA ON HUNGER STRIKE IS REMOVED TO PRISON HOSPITA AS CONDITION GROWS SERIOUS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 15.—Julio A. Mella was removed today from his cell to the prison hospital in a critical condition. He is continuing the hunger strike which he began eleven days ago as a protest against his imprisonment on a framed-up charge to satisfy the American sugar combines. The Cuban government remains deaf to all pleas for his release.

The International Labor Defense opened a campaign to save the life of Julio Antonio Mella, Cuban victim of American imperialism, now on hunger strike, when it cabled to General Enoch H. Crowder, American ambassador to Cuba that 200,000 American workers affiliated with the I. L. D. would consider him responsible for the possible death of the Cuban labor leader.

STRIKE TIES UP PRODUCTION AT EDISON PLANT

Scabs Unable to Turn Out Struck Work

Production at the Edison Electric company, 52nd Ave. and 19th street, is practically at a standstill due to the strike of the sheet metal workers. It was admitted by one of the scabs and also by the so-called deputy sheriff or plug-ugly, who was "guarding" the scabs, upon being questioned by one of the strikers yesterday, that the scabs were not able to turn out the work that had been performed by the skilled mechanics that are now on strike.

Scabs Quitting Daily.

The scabs are quitting the company and the number of those at work continually decreases while the strikers' ranks increase. The only force that remains status quo since the strike was called is the army of gunmen that the company has hired.

The company, in its desperation, is trying to induce the men in the main plant, which is located at 56th and Taylor St., to go to work in the struck plant. So far is has had no success.

Strikers' Solidarity Increases.

The strike which is in its second week, finds the ranks of the strikers increasing, their solidarity unbroken and finds them just as determined as ever to win this strike. The picket line

DAILY WORKER DRIVE CLOSES $10,000 SHORT

Rush Remittances to Help Reach Quota!

Tho The DAILY WORKER campaign for funds officially ends today, the total raised to date is almost $10,000 short of the amount necessary to make the paper's future publication certain. The sum required is $40,000, while only $30,628.26 has been received.

Shop and street nuclei of the Workers Party are urged to make a final effort to forward further contributions to bring the task of saving The DAILY WORKER to a successful conclusion. All possible haste is requisite. Hundreds of dollars are still expected from rescue parties yet to be held and also from the sale of DAILY WORKER stamps in the hands of workers, and from funds not yet collected or remitted by Workers Party secretaries.

Hereafter, under the heading of "Honor Roll of Workers Aiding Press," the list of donations received will be published daily.

With the paper not yet financially stable, added attention must be devoted to the task of building The DAILY WORKER'S subscription list. Every Communist a subscriber; every subscriber a builder—this is to be the achievement of 1926.

LA FOLLETTE NOW IN FOLD OF OLD GUARD

Has to Pretend He Remains "Prog"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15—Robert M. LaFollette, son of late leader of the Wisconsin insurgency, was formally assigned today to senatorial committees as a full-fledged republican.

He was assigned to republican membership on the manufacturers, Indian affairs and mining committees by the republican committee on committees and will be given a share of republican patronage. His father served before him on the manufacturers' and Indian affairs' committee, being chairman of the former until ousted from the republican party in the senate last March.

Altho now alligned with the republicans, young LaFollette is not expected to become a regular by any means.

Reaffirms "Progressivism."

LaFollettee today announced himself as an independent republican and renewed an oath of allegiance to the progressive platform of his late father, in a letter to the republican committee on committees.

If the republicans of the senate desire him in their fold under the circumstances, LaFollette said, he would be glad to accept the majority committee assignment given him by administration leaders.

LaFollette sent his declaration of independence to Senator James E. Watson, republican, of Indiana, chairman of the committee on committees. The letter said.

"I am informed thru the newspapers of this morning that the committee on committees has voted to report my committee assignments to the senate. Before this formal action is taken by the committee it seems im

BORAH SEES SWING TOWARD RECOGNITION

New Forces Favor Russian Accord

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15. — That forces hitherto opposed to recognition of the Soviet Union are now changing their stand is clearly evidenced by developments since the publication of the facts regarding the conference of Soviet representatives and bankers in New York last week.

Senator William E. Borah's resolution, known as senate resolution No. 74, will probably receive support that will seriously challenge the stand of the administration upon this issue.

American bankers who conferred with the Soviet representatives did not do so because they have any love for the revolution, but because they are interested in investments in Europe and they now realize that the policy of trying to outlaw Russia among the nations of the world will work disastrously for them. Hence, in sheer desperation, they are forced to strive to reach an agreemnt whereby they hope to bring about more stable conditions in Europe.

Furthermore the industrialists who have commodities to sell on the world market feel keenly the pinch of absence of trade relations with Russia and consider the policy of the Coolidge government a particularly foolish one. Borah speaks primarily for this group.

Hope of Success.

The recent favorable developments have made the Idaho senator not entirely without hope of success—despite the fact the state department returned the usual stereotyped reply today to questions as to whether any change in the administration's Russian policy was imminent. This reply is:

"There has been no change and there is nothing to say."

The department declined to comment on the fact that Soviet spokesmen were entertained at the exclusive bankers' club last week, or to explain how they got to the country—in view of the department's established policy of excluding all foreigners suspected of red or pink traits, as in the Karolyi case.

Saklatvala Question Up.

Critics of the state department in congress, however, are planning to raise the question in connection with the exclusion visited on the Karolyis by Secretary Kellogg. They are going to ask why the department permits the ingress of acredited representatives of Soviet Russia, while denying entrance to a Hungarian nobleman and a British Communist member of parliament, Saklatvala, who merely expressed their belief in certain Moscow doctrines.

Senator Borah will have more support for Russian recognition in this session of congress than he has ever been able to muster in his previous efforts.

LEWIS MACHINE PLAYS BOSSES' GAME IN UNION

Officials Determined to Crush Miners' Spirit

By NORMAN H. TALLENTIRE.

Workers (Communist) Party Special Organizer in the Anthracite Coal Strike Field.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Dec. 15.—The strike in the hard coal district has now lasted over one hundred days, and many of the miners, who during the September days jokingly referred to the strike as a "vacation," are now beginning to feel the pinch of poverty, and are glad to receive relief from volunteer committees, organized by petty business men and sympathizers, and sponsored by the local police, and in one case by the chamber of commerce.

Beware of Pinchot Plan.

The purpose behind the platitudes, and the stand-pat policy of the Lewis machine should now be plain to every miner. Altho unfortunately the majority of them have unbounded faith and follow blindly wherever "Lewis" leads.

The acceptance of Governor Pinchot's proposals (which, with exception of the partial check-off, are nothing more nor less than the operators' propositions wrapped up in silver paper) however, by the anthracite scale committee should sound a warning to every striking miner.

Kill Convention Plans.

It's a long road from the international convention in the Cleveland armory, to the acceptance of Governor Pinchot's plan by the anthracite scale committee. The Cleveland convention gave the miners a progressive program, and a militant policy, demanding the nationalization of mines, six-hour day, and five-day week, with uniform contracts expiring simultaneously. The convention instructed a sub-committee consisting of Golden of District No. 9, Brophy of District No. 2, and Mitch of Indiana to draw up a plan for nationalization. When the plan was submitted, one of the most destructive criticisms of it came from the national office of the United Mine Workers of America, in the form

OPEN SHOP COAL MINES MERGE IN GREAT COMBINE

Billion Dollar Firm Formed by Bankers

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—One representative of the bituminous coal operators today admitted that plans practically have matured for merging leading interests in the West Virginia and Eastern Kentucky fields into a billion dollar combine. It will be the biggest coal combination in the history of the country.

The operators' representative refused to allow his name to be used but admitted that the contract between the bankers backing the merger and the operators is practically ready for signing

A majority of the more important operators in eighteen of the West Virginia fields and six or more of the Kentucky fields, which border on the Big Sandy River and Tug Ford are reported to be included in the deal.

These fields have an available coal valuation of approximately $2,000,000,000 according to the engineer's advisory valuation committee of the United States coal commission, which figure of course includes plant values.

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Throws Smokescreen About Pinchot Plan; Lewis to Give More Concessions?

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The proposal put forward by Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, to settle the anthracite strike was mildly criticized today in a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the United States chamber of commerce.

A part of the resolution follows:

"An examination of Governor Pinchot's proposal shows that it did not propose that controversial issues should be arbitrated. On the other hand, the operators offered arbitration of all issues involved in the controversy."

CONGRESS OF RUSSIAN C. P. IS IN SESSION

Tremendous Progress Soviet Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Dec. 15.—One of the most important congresses of the Russian Communist Party is now in session in the Kremlin. It is the leadership of the party that has made possible the tremendous progress since the close of the era of civil war. In the difficult reconstruction work within the Soviet Union the problem of economic development of the country in order to keep it on the road to socialism has been of primary importance and has consumed the energy of the best brains in the movement.

Party congresses are of great moment to the whole country as party decisions are usually put into immediate practice in the government.

The past year has been one of remarkable progress in industrial life. The heavy industries have not only reached, but surpassed the condition existing before the war and the revolution. This has been accomplished in spite of the large capitalist nations conducting an economic boycott against the Soviet Union.

There is little or no opposition to the policy pursued by the leading group in the party. A few elements, mostly inexperienced are unable to grasp the real significance of the situation and raise objections that too many concessions are being given outside capitalists. In the debates in the Moscow district, Comrade N. Bukharin, one of the members of the political bureau, defended the policy of the party and declared that it was absurdly ridiculous to charge the present trend as capitalistic, citing facts to prove that capitalism has been left behind and that the path was so obliterated it could never be retraced.

The present political bureau of the party consists of Comrades Zinoviev, Stalin, Bukharin, Trotsky, Rykov, Tomsky and Kamenev.

Coal Strikes Fight Pinchot Plan

of attacks by Ellis Searles in the official Mine Workers' Journal.

In the interim since the Cleveland convention the officialdom of the United Mine Workers of America has executed a strategic retreat from the progressive program at Cleveland and they now stand pledged, by the acceptance of the "Pinchot plan" to a policy of class collaboration, which, if carried out in its entirety, will wreck the miners' union, and make of it nothing more nor less than a company union, patterned something after the company union on the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company lines, as suggested by the Wilkes-Barre Telegram on December 13, 1925.

What has come of the hard coal miners' demands, as put forward at the Tri-District convention last June? In the Pinchot plan every demand put forward is forgotten except one, the partial check-off is granted, which means a revenue of over one million dollars per year to the interntaional office in Indianapolis. This is all the miners obtain by this wonderful Harrisburg settlement with its concessions to the operators' concessions to the "public" concessions everywhere, but nothing for the striking miners.

Put Up No Fight.

The scale committee, so far as can be gathered from press reports, never even made a fight for the Scranton demands, but swallowed the Pinchot plan practically in its entirety, which gives the operators that which they would hardly have dared to ask for three months ago:

> A five-year contract. A no-strike agreement, and, arbitration of the miners' demands.

In this "settlement" if it is ratified, the miners surrender the right to strike, the right for which organized labor in America has fought its bitterest and bloodiest battles, this principle which even Samuel Gompers would always defend to the limit, ultra-reactionary as he was. The surrender of this principle, one of the cornerstones of the labor movement, is the net result of the miners' strike to date.

Another accomplishment of the wonderful "settlement" is the separation, for all practical purposes, of the hard coal and the soft coal miners. When the 1922 strike was called all miners quit work together. By some wonderful manipulation of "Lewisan" policy, they returned to work with contracts, which expired at different periods (to say nothing of the strikers in the Connellsville coke region who were left without any agreement at all). The result of this policy is, that while the hard coal miners strike, the soft coal miners continue to work, and by the Pinchot plan this policy is to be continued for at least five more years.

Operators Want "Separate" Union.

The operators' press is carrying on a subtle propaganda, for the creation of a "separate union" in the anthracite, and this vicious anti-union position is strengthened by the fact that these two sections of the union, are dealt with as two separate entities when contracts are made.

Will the miners in convention ratify the "Pinchot plan"? At the present time, it appears as tho they will. During the "100 days' vacation" the Lewis machine, in collaboration with the state and local authorities have done everything in their power to stifle any expression of the union membership, and to silence all criticism of their activities, no matter how sincere or constructive it might be.

Attack Progressives.

Commencing with the breaking up of the progressive miners' meetings in many towns, culminating in the arrests of Toohey, Valentine, Reid, and Zarek, in Scranton on September 26, (which action was officialy endorsed by the executive board of District No. 1—Cappellini's district) the policy of silence and repression has been carried out by the Lewis machine with "mathematical precision" to quote a favorite phrase of Lewis. Wherever members asked questions or protested, they are promptly silenced. Several members have been tried and threatened with expulsion for simply distributing laflets calling for a full strike. In other cases officials have put thru resolutions calling off all meetings of local unions, when members of said local unions demanded some action in the strike. Many local unions manage to transact all the business in twenty or thirty minutes, in other cases no meetings whatever are held, the officers say "We have no business to transact during the strike" or "We cannot afford to pay the hall rent during the strike." There are a number of local unions that have not held meetings since the strike. When the miners ask for relief they are brow-beaten by the local henchmen of the machine. Cappellini threatened to expel the Pontiac local if they use their funds for relief. In the Pottsville section, we have the spectacle of local union officials dragging their members before a police magistrate and making them swear affidavits before they can obtain relief.

Lewis Prepares His Ground.

These examples of the Lewis policy are but an extension of his entire policy in the international since he took the helm. From Cleveland to Harrisburg he took a long step, but the entire policy of Lewis has been bent to this end. In his public speeches and statements during the strike, Lewis has stated repeatedly, "I will gladly recommend a five-year agreement to my people." "We have always stood for stability in the industry," and "We are ready at any time to meet the operators on a give and take basis." These statements of Lewis given out in advance, prepared the way for the "Pinchot plan" which was promptly accepted by Lewis despite its vicious character.

The suppression of the miners' protests in the local union, together with Lewis' systematic propaganda, in advance for the terms of the "Pinchot plan" coupled with the fact that no effective relief or commissary system has been organized, with consequent distress for many strikers and their families, have prepared the way for the acceptance of anything of which Lewis would recommend. This is the key to the whole Lewis policy in the strike to keep the miners in the dark, and in suspense, and to suppress the meetings when protests arise, and failing any adequate relief system, to capitalize the "war-weariness" of many of the strikers by putting over the "Pinchot plan" in order to "get the boys back to work" in response to the demands of the public for "the adjustment of the present 'controversy'."

This destruction of the union however, which is implied in the "Pinchot Plan" will not be effected without protest. The bosses having had three of their major demands accepted by the scale committee are "asking for more," and in answer to their demand, local unions and policy committees, all over the coal region, are passing resolutions demanding that the maintenace men, and soft coal miners be pulled out. Such resolutions have been passed at Avoca, Wilkes-Barre, Forrestville, Pine Hill, Primrose, Duncot and Branchdale.

Back Progressives!

The miners are beginning to realize that a real menace to their union is involved in the present fight, and if given real leadership the miners will fight to the end for "the union."

only program that gives them a fighting policy in the present situation is the program of the Progressive Miners' Committee, and wherever speakers have been able to present that program it is endorsed wholeheartedly by the strikers. They must proceed one step farther and organize committees of militant miners to put this program into effect, and substitute for the class collaboration policy of Lewis the program and policies of the workers based on their conditions as a class. This is the only basis on which they can win their fight.

LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS' UNION GREETS GITLOW

Demonstration Marks Entrance to Hall

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15—A most enthusiastic demonstration took place, when Benjamin Gitlow, who has just been released from the Sing Sing prison at Ossining, N. Y., entered the hall.

It was equalled only in its intensity by the second demonstration which followed his introduction to the convention and the presentation of a basket of red carnations from the progressive delegates bearing the inscription:

"Welcome to our class war prisoner, Ben Gitlow, from the progressive delegates to the Ladies' Garment Workers' Convention."

When the convention adjourned for lunch, Ben Gitlow was presented by the progressive delegates with a gold watch as a token of their esteem of his activities in behalf of the workers.

"I speak to this convention with a great feeling and emotion that it was the action of the convention in passing unanimously a resolution demanding that Governor Smith pardon me that is responsible for my being a free man," declared Gitlow.

He showed that this was only possible because it came from a great and powerful international union and that it showed what the members thot on the question of political class war prisoners. He declared that it was not himself, not one man, but that it was the workers who must open the doors of all the jails and set all the class war prisoners free. He hoped that this act of solidarity in the convention, held in one of the largest industrial states in the union, Pennsylvania, where the constabulary were used so brutally against the workers, where the right to organize and freedom of expression were denied, would be a warning to the state and the financial and industrial combines and that the workers thru their power would abolish the state constabulary.

He showed that Smith in pardoning him was not opposed to the criminal syndicalist laws but thot that the punishment was too severe.

Gitlow then pointed out that with the industrialization of America and the development of giant trusts and with America now the dominant world's power, that the workers must form a labor party and bring about world trade union unity. He hoped that out of this convention would come unity and showed that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' organization had one of the most enlightening histories in the American labor movement and that they had conducted great struggles, lifting the workers out of the sweatshop hell-holes, building up from a few hundred members to 150,000 and that this was the proof of the courage and calibre of the membership, which makes certain that the organization cannot be destroyed, cannot be split, and that it will meet the future as it was able to meet the past.

He pointed out that we cannot live on the past; that the future belongs to those with vision, to the advancing exploited workers of every country in the world.

The convention is still discussing the officers' reports. The left wing resolution for direct negotiations with employers with the strike weapon to enforce demands instead of arbitration and that arbitration was only to be entered into after a long protracted strike, when the union was too weak to carry it on further and that all future agreements must have the clause giving the shops the right to strike was adopted.

Nagler, Halperin, Antonini, Fineberg and Sigman defended class collaboration. Antonini gave away the workers' strategy. After defending class collaboration he said that the left wing wanted them to defeat the strike resolution, but that they were not going to do it. Fineberg "evolved" a new "theory." He stated that the class struggle did not only mean getting the workers out on the streets but that arbitration, with so-called "impartial" chairman, was a weapon of the class struggle.

The convention is expected to end with the fight on the expulsion policy.

Watch Congress and Be Convinced of Necessity for the Party of Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., senator in place of his father, is given his committee assignments by the regular republican senate organization. In reply to a request by newspapermen for his comment on these "republican honors" bestowed upon him by Wall Street's politicians, LaFollette, Jr., stated, "I have nothing to say."

The conclusion is that the regular republicans have effectively gagged the "crown prince" of Wisconsin politics by accepting him as their own. The middle class attack waged in the senate by the elder LaFollette against big business is thus completely silenced.

• • • •

It was no later than last Sunday that the so-called "progressive" party of Illinois, meeting in Chicago, sent a greeting to LaFollette, Jr. The message was no doubt inspired by the forlorn hope that perhaps LaFollette, Jr., was still on the doorstep of the republican party facing the out-of-doors. Developments indicate that in fact the young senator is facing quite the other way.

What is true of LaFollette holds equally for the other members of the so-called LaFollette group, especially in the house of representatives. They will be assigned to minor committees in most instances, stripped of all seniority rights, and eager to get the crumbs. Not one has appeared to wage an independent fight against both the old capitalist parties.

• • • •

As this is being written the news comes from Washington that LaFollette dispatched his note of surrender to Senator James E. Watson, the most unscrupulous profit politician in the whole Wall Street fold, who is chairman of the G. O. P. committee on committees; in other words, capitalism's top caucus in the senate. LaFollette protested he is still an "independent republican" adhering to his late father's platforms. But old party political platforms are made to walk in on, and LaFollette, Jr., has walked right into the republican party on the platform his father provided him. Now he will have no more use for it.

"Jim" Watson's republican crew, upon receiving the Wisconsin senator's note, decided unanimously not to change their position, "that LaFollette's letter didn't change the situation at all."

Wall Street has thus decided that a few "independent republicans" will look good in its political menagerie, where Borah, Capper, Couzens, Johnson and a few more talk much but threaten it not at all. LaFollette is the latest and probably the most valuable addition to this zoo, since the prestige of his father well keep large numbers of workers and farmers paralyzed politically a little longer in the belief that there is "something good" in the republican party.

• • • •

Daily events in Washington, however, will cause them to think otherwise. The Brookhart-Steck contest in Iowa for instance will end this week. In the election campaign the republican organization supported Steck, the democrat. But Brookhart, the republican, claims the election. In commenting on this situation, a capitalist sheet recently declared that Brookhart would be seated by the republicans who fought him last year, because if he isn't seated, he might go into the elections next year and cause trouble. In other words, the contest will not be decided on its merits, but on the basis of how the decision will affect the future of the republican party. Brookhart, a United States senator at Washington, inside the republican fold, is considered safer than Brookhart, outside the senate, seeking to organize the discontent of the Iowa farmers.

• • • •

As workers study these developments they must inevitably decide for the building of their own party, independent of and opposed to the old parties.

LaFollette, Jr., Is Now in the Fold of the Old Guard portant that there should be no misunderstanding as to my position.

Can Play Politics.

"At the recent special election held to fill the vacancy created by the death of Robert M. LaFollette, I was designated as the regular republican nominee by the voters of Wisconsin at the primary, duly elected under such designation.

"In announcing my candidacy, and thruout my campaign, I declared my allegiance to the progressive principles and policies of government as interpreted and applied by the late Robert M. LaFollette thruout his entire public career. The platform upon which I was nominated and elected was that upon which he announced his successful candidacy for the senate in the republican primary of 1922, and upon which the republican members of the house of representatives from Wisconsin were elected at the same time.

"I shall, during my service in the senate, adhere to the letter and spirit of the platform upon which I was elected, and shall follow the independent course which I have marked out for myself.

"With these facts before the committee should they assign me to committees as indicated by the press I shall accept such formal assignments."

Old Guard Isn't Worrying.

After receiving the letter, the committee on committees met again and reaffirmed its previous action.

"LaFollette's letter didn't change the situation at all," said Watson later. "He will be assigned as a republican."

The assignment of LaFollette as a republican member of the committees on manufactures, Indian affairs and mining committees was later confirmed by the senate, without debate.

Special Constabulary Refuses to Follow Out Free State Dictates

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BELFAST, Dec. 15.—Ulster has what appears to be a first class rebellion on its hands.

Special constabulary who have revolted against being disarmed unless they are granted bonuses and special gratuities for their services on the free state border, refused an interview with Premier Craig.

Thus far the mutineers have been peaceful but they have issued warnings that they are heavily armed and will shoot to kill if any attempt is made to interfere with them. Announcement has also been made by the rebellious constabulary that when their present food and supplies has been exhausted they will make raids upon stores and private supplies.

CACHIN SPEECH SHAKES MORGAN BANK'S SCHEME

French Communist Hits U. S. Imperialism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 15.—Marcel Cachin, leader of the Communist fraction in the French chamber of deputies, threw a monkey wrench into the maturing plans of American imperialism to completely dominate the French people as it has done the German people under the Dawes' plan, in a speech attacking Wall Street and the Washington government yesterday in the French chamber.

Strikes Popular Note.

It happens that it strikes a popular note among all Frenchmen, for the French bourgeoisie resents the steady pressure of American financial imperialism, and the radical working class well know that everything will be taken out of their hides by some scheme similar to the Dawes' plan when once Wall Street gets its dominance officially established.

Thus it was that Cachin's speech drew applause from all sides of the chamber when he launched a vitriolic attack on the American government. In part he said:

Peculiar Example for Disarming.

"America reproaches us for not disarming. But do they themselves do anything toward the disarmament that, with supreme hypocrisy they wish to impose on the universe?

"Military expenditures in the United States in 1925 reached a total of $850,000,000. They have 16,000,000 men available and a conscript law to draft them forcibly to make war. Their fleets are worth $3,000,000,000. And that is the disarmament in America as the example they set for us!

Seeks to Yoke France.

"America is not only the factory for the world, but the banker. The Dawes' plan amounts to the subjection of Germany to America, and the Belgians had to modify their budget on the commands of America, the financier. What concessions did Italy make which we do not know? Is France herself not about to feel the yoke of Wall Street? They want to buy even our tobacco monopoly."

So forceful was Cachin's speech that it is the sensation of the day, some of those who applauded vigorously afterward considering that perhaps the whole outburst may not have been discreet if France wants to get American loans. But it has created a political opinion which makes it much harder for the French ruling class to surrender the French workers to the merciless exploitation of American financiers, for the privilege of being insured their part of the robbery.

Chicago Tuberculosis Society Endorses Tests for Illinois Herds

The Chicago Tuberculosis Society at its last meeting passed a resolution demanding that the city council pass the milk purification ordinance, demanding that all milk entering the city be carefully inspected and that the herds be submitted to the tuberculin test.

The farmers of Lake county met at Libertyville and formed the Federal Tested Herds Association of Lake county. Over 500 farmers owning 700 herds joined the association and endorsed the tuberculin test for cows.

The farmers of McHenry county, who have an injunction against the city of Chicago, prohibiting it from inspecting the milk and insisting on the tuberculin tests, declare they are in favor of the tests, but that as the state and the federal government refuse to reimburse them for part of their herds, it would mean bankruptcy for them and that as soon as the federal and state government make sufficient provision for them, they will submit their herds to the test.

ALBERTA COAL MINERS BEFORE CLASS JUSTICE

Canadian Court Denies Right to Picket

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CALGARY, Alberta, Dec. 15.—The class character of the courts of the Dominion of Canada has been fully displayed in the trial before Judge Boyd of nine of the twenty-four Drumheller coal miners, who are charged with "watching and besetting."

The jury, which is composed of reactionaries, who are eager to show their loyalty to their masters, in the first case found six guilty and two not guilty. A boy of fifteen, who was also convicted, was recommended to leniency. In this trial the defense was not allowed any peremtory challenges in the selection of the jury, but the state exercised the peremptory challenge right to exclude anyone who may be in any way sympathetic to the coal miners, who are fighting for the right to picket the struck mines in a peaceful manner.

The trial of the miners is divided into twelve separate cases. Nine of these cases have been refused the right to trial by jury, under what is known as the "Northwest Territories Act of 1874." The cases are pending jury trial for "watching and besetting."

Most of those that are indicted and are to be tried are held on twenty-seven charges. One working woman, Sadie Squires is being held on two charges. Eight of the men are charged with "unlawful assembly."

J. T. Shaw, ex-progressive member of parliament for West Calgary is the prosecutor and has used every red-baiting scheme that he could think up in convicting these that were tried in the first trial. In questioning the defendants, he has thrown slurs on their nationality and the activities of the Young Communist League have been discussed by this the lawyer for the prosecution giving the trial a political aspect.

The miners who were convicted in the first case are appealing their case.

Need More Funds.

The Canadian Labor Defense League, which is aiding the miners' fight for the right to peacefully picket has its headquarters at 211 Milverton Blvd., Toronto, Ontario, and is appealing for funds to carry on this case pointing out that it needs about $1,000 immediately to aid these striking coal miners of Alberta and that it has but $200 on hand.

Meat Trust Grabs the Two Dakota Supposed "Co-op" Packing Firms

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Press correspondents at the capitol have been circularized by Armour & Co. with a jubilant announcement that that firm has purchased the two great cooperative meat packing plants at Fargo, N. Dak., and Huron, S. Dak., which had been closed because of the farm deflation. They quote foes of the Nonpartisan league and other farmer movements in denunciation of the socialism which was represented by the cooperatives.

Painters' Union Is Voting Strong for a Five-Day Week Plan

CLEVELAND—(FP)—Union painters are voting overwhelmingly for the 5-day week in the national union referendum. Already 30,000 of the brotherhood's 120,000 members are working but 5 days a week. Many contractors favor the plan, claiming the Saturday half-day uneconomical.

RAILWAY LABOR BOARD AIDED IN ESTABLISHING A COMPANY UNON IN PLACE OF REAL LABOR UNON

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

That the dilly-dallying U. S. rail labor board plays right into the hands of the anti-union railroad interests appears in a decision involving wages of bridge and building painters employed by the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western. Five years after the case was brought to the board by the maintenance of way brotherhood and four years and eight months after the carrier refused to carry out the decision the board now decides to let the railroad have its way.

"Situation Has Changed."

The maintenance of way brotherhood made many attempts to have the board censure the railroad for refusing to obey the original decision and subsequent ones to the same effect. But the board delayed two years in answering the union's final letter. This long interval gave the management a chance to undermine the influence of the union.

When the case was revived the railroad was able to reply that since the original decision "the situation on the Lackawanna railroad, so far as it affects the painters in question, has been materially changed. These painters are no longer represented by the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes but are and since April 17, 1923, have been represented by the Federation of Mechanics & Helpers of the Engineering Department."

The abandonment by the painters in question of the real union was apparently the only new evidence on which the railroad and public representatives on the board, voting solidly against the labor members, rescinded the former decisions and let the road and its company union have its way.

Too Raw for Wharton Even.

This action is denounced in a dissenting opinion by A. O. Wharton, formerly president of the shop crafts federation and now a labor representative on the board. Wharton says, "On Nov. 20, 1925, or five years and fifteen days after receipt of this dispute, and after four times sustaining the contention of the employes, the board, without the introduction of any evidence not in its possession at the time the first decision was rendered, adopted a decision completely reversing its previous decisions."

The original case involved the application to maintenance of way painters of the 15 cent increase contained in the labor board's 1920 decision. The board decided March 4, 1921, that the 15 cent increase applied to the rates paid these painters on March 1, 1920. The railroad contended that on March 1, 1920, it was paying these painters a higher rate than prevailed for similar work on other roads and that the 15 cent increase should be applied to rates parallel with those paid by the other roads. It refused, on this ground, to carry out the decision.

Jockey for Time.

After hearing the railroad's statement of the case the board again decided Dec. 3, 1921, that the railroad must pay these painters in accordance with its previous decision. On April 14, 1922, the employes submitted detailed evidence of the road's failure to apply the decision.

The railroad again submitted its argument and the board again replied that the only legal course was for the management to apply the decision and thereafter, if it wanted a change, to create a dispute and bring the matter to the board.

Meanwhile, the Union Dies.

The road continued its refusal, the union wrote the board asking that the management be cited for disobedience, but the records show that this letter was not even acknowledged. Not until two years later did the board make an inquiry, reverse itself and sanction the road's defiance.

In other words, in the course of the board's delay the railroads induced these painters to leave the real union and join the company union. The board helped the management demonstrate to maintenance men that decisions make no difference when they favor a real union. The board's policy fostered the company union.

HIMSELF A CLASS WAR PRISONER, HE SENDS DONATIONS FOR I. L. D. BAZAAR AND SUB TO DAILY WORKER

(By I. L. D. Press Service)

We are filled with appreciation and admiration for our comrade as we publish his letter. You will feel as we do when you read it. It is written by a class war prisoner behind bars in an American bastille. Himself a victim of the class struggle, he contributed to the International Labor Defense bazaar in Chicago the few trinkets he possesses. He sent them to help other victims like himself. He asked a few dollars in return so that he might get a few little things that he cannot earn the money for. And among them is what: A subscription to The DAILY WORKER. But read the letter yourself:

Dear Comrade:

Your letter of November 27th reached me last night. I am pleased to be able to help you with the bazaar. Tomorrow I will ship you one solid beaded bag, two hair belts, and one hair hat band. I am also instructing my wife to ship you a hair hand bag which I have at home. The price I had originally held the hair bag at was $25.00. But as you are using it for a good cause I will be satisfied with $20.00. I know you can make a killing with it. It contains 4,529 hairs 27 inches long. I want $14.00 for the bead bag and $6.00 each for the belts. The hat band I will donate in full. I would gladly give you all the goods for the defense of those miners if I could. But under this system even a class-war prisoner needs a dollar or two occasionally. I know you will be pleased with the goods I am sending and anytime you want more I will be glad to send you any I may have on on hand.

Now please get this straight, pay for one year's subscription to The DAILY WORKER and have it sent to me. Deduct the cost of the subscription from the amount due me for the curios. I told you to do this the last time I wrote to you but evidently you overlooked that part of my letter. I want the paper so please don't forget.

Wishing you success and thanking you for your order I remain,

Yours fraternally,

Eugene Barnett.

President Wilson's Old Side Kick Now Fighting U. S. Seamen

CLEVELAND—(FP)—Newton Baker, one of Woodrow Wilson's cabinet members has been hired by the Lake Carriers Assn. a steel trust subsidiary, to fight the seamen's act in congress. Baker will try to kill provisions for manning boats with trained seamen and making the three-watch system compulsory. The Lake Carriers want permission to use green college boys during the height of the season and to institute the 12-hour day. Baker was secretary of war while 500 military objectors were subjected to brutality and inhuman punishment in army prisons during the war for democracy.

WILL MOVE U. S. JOBS TO ITALY AND TO GERMANY

Will Leave Workers Here Unemployed

Conquest of German economic territory by the American financial empire is proceeding at an amazing rate, according to a Berlin correspondent of the London Daily Herald. He cites conservative estimates indicating that American capital in Germany, exclusive of the Dawes loan, is rapidly approaching the half billion dollar mark.

These loans at high rates of interest will probably be converted into shares of stock because they cannot be repaid when they mature. Conversion to shares means control.

A recent example of this transfer of control to American financiers is the capture by Harriman-Anaconda copper interests of Germany's zinc production. The German government is still wrangling with Harriman over this coup but American bankers have the power to force a satisfactory settlement.

The Daily Herald correspondent also makes the important suggestion that along "with this American policy of economic penetration into Germany runs a definite Wall Street policy of using Germany as an agent for American economic penetration into the Soviet Union. It is no secret," he says, "that the $25,000,000 credit which was granted to Russia by German banks was partly provided by American banks."

The international outlook of American capital appears in an interview given to Mussolini's paper, Il Popolo d'Italia by C. W. Barron, owner of The Wall Street Journal and other financial papers.

Barron frankly favors the shipment of American ore and coal to Italy to be made into steel in Italian mills "because her people have a lower level of wages than we have in the United States and she could make steel cheaper than we can make it." Cheap transportation of the raw materials can be had by Italian ships because Italian sailors are also low paid.

Here is open advocacy of a shift of jobs from the United States to Italy. If bankers can't keep down wages here by importing Italian labor they can export some of our employment to Italian workers in Italy, financed, of course largely by American capital; for Barron believes "that financial and banking relations between the United States and Italy are going to be very much closer and that in due time millions more of American money will flow into Italy."

U. S. Imperialism May Punish Chile with a Bankers' Blockade

The government of Chile appeals to the league of nations against the refusal of Gen. Pershing, chairman of the Tacna-Arica plebiscite commission, to hurry up the election which will determine whether that disputed region of nitrate deposits shall belong to Chile or Peru. By challenging the supremacy of Washington as the arbiter of destiny for the western hemisphere, Chile may wreck the prestige of the United States in Latin America.

One of the consequences may be a financial boycott on Latin American governments that uphold Chile. In the past, Chile, has borrowed money in London, but in recent years many loans have been floated in Wall Street. Now she needs further loans. That is the trump card held by Washington. Nevertheless, the state department does not want the revolt to start. Chile might be able to get along, like Russia, without Wall Street money for a few years. And in that period she might create a strong anti-Washington entente south of the Rio Grande.

BIG BUSINESS IS EAGER FOR RUSSIAN TRADE

Demand Reopening of Trade Relations

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.— Sentiment for the development of trade relations with the Soviet Union is increasing among business men in this country following the gathering here of representatives of the biggest American banking and industrial concerns of the country and the representatives of the Russian Soviet government, at which Charles M. Schwab and the head of the Chase National Bank welcomed the Soviet mission to this country and expressed themselves in favor of commercial relations with the Soviet Republic.

Outspoken Recognition.

This gathering is looked upon as the first outspoken recognition by American finance and industry of the importance of commercial relations with the Soviet Union and an admission of the stability of the Soviet government.

Eager for Russian Trade.

In spite of the refusal of the American government to recognize the Soviets, the business interests are eager for Russian business and are literally breaking their necks in the mad scramble to gain some of the orders which the Soviet trade mission will place in this country. Many of the concerns are arranging long term and easy credits in order to induce the Soviets to trade with them.

Undoubtedly, the recognition of the Soviet Union will be one of the big issues in the coming sessions of congress as American business realizes that the fantastic hopes of an early collapse were nothing more than dreams induced by the feverish imagination of the capitalist press and demand that all barriers in the way of commercial relations be removed.

Reopen Relations Despite Coolidge.

Schwab in welcoming the Soviet mission in the name of big industrialists of this country pointed out the eagerness with which American business interests want to trade with the Soviet Union and declared that the trade relations between the American business interests and Soviet Union would develop greatly and rapidly despite all obstacles placed in the way of such development.

Schwab expressed satisfaction over the fact that Russia was again trading with America. Schwab said that the Bethlehem Steel corporation had sold much steel to Russia before the war, and hoped to sell more in the future.

Express Confidence.

Reeve Schley, head of the Chase National Bank, which financed the purchase of American cotton by the Soviet Union's textile syndicate and has largely and profitably participated in Soviet commerce with the United States for the past two years, took this opportunity of expressing his confidence in the Soviet trading institutions and urged the immediate reopening of trade relations with the Soviet Union.

Schley, spoke of the economic progress of the Soviet Union in the last two years in overcoming the effects of war, blockade and famine. He described a visit he made to the Soviet Union last summer, when he was greatly impressed with the general order, and especially the excellent condition of the railways.

Paul Ziev, president of the Amtorg Trading corporation spoke about recent developments in Soviet-American commerce and described the future possibilities of increased trade.

Among those present besides Schwab and Schley were William Ewing, member of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Charles H. Sabin, chairman of the Guaranty Trust company; Arthur Leasby, president of the Equitable Trust company, and Clarence Dillon, member of Dillon, Read & company; Morgan's chief competitor in foreign investments. There were also a number of representatives from such important firms as the Remington Typewriter company and the Chicago Pneumatic company at this gathering which voiced the desire of big banking and industrial capital for the immediate resumption of trade relations with the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Trading corporations that were represented were the Amtork Trading corporation, Textile Syndicate, State Bank of Russia and the Central Co-operative Society.

Japan Wants to Know Why Valiant Nordics Deported Mill Hands

SALEM, Ore.—(FP)—The Japanese government has demanded an official investigation of the deportation of Japanese sawmill laborers from Toledo, Ore., last summer. Unemployment was a factor. The $125,000 damage suit filed by the Japanese against several Toledo citizens will be tried in the federal court at Portland.

White men have been doing the work ever since the deportation Company officials had charged that whites were unwilling to do the work and Japanese had therefore been employed.

PULLMAN CORPORATION CLAIMS ITS COMPANY UNION ELECTION IS FAIR, BUT WON'T PROVE IT

NEW YORK—If a ku klux klansman had attended the last New York mass meeting of the rising Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in Negro Harlem his sense of the fitness of things would have been rudely shocked. For here were labor speakers with a poise and knowledge of affairs and above all with a merry wit that it would be difficult to match.

Roy Lancaster, general secretary of the union; W. H. Des Verney, field organizer, and Frank Crosswaith, secretary of the A. F. of L. Trade Union Committee for Organizing Negro Workers, put the case for organization in such a logical way that the unorganizde came forward with a rush to take out cards.

B. of L. E. Pledges Aid.

W. J. Orr, general organizer for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, had something to say. Now that the porters were beginning to do something for themselves, he said, the train service men in the old line brotherhoods would not take kindly to porters who refused to line up in their own union.

Des Verney, new field organizer for the brotherhood, since his union activities caused his resignation a few days ago, went over big with the audience. And he and Lancaster, another porter whose unionism terminated his Pullman service abruptly, both knew the company union inside and out and know it for a fraud.

"The brotherhood's membership is about 5,000," said Lancaster. "There are 12,000 porters. By January we'll have 51 per cent." The union expects easily to beat the employe representation plan, the company union, to the 51 per cent and to make the latter look foolish when it goes before the railroad labor board claiming to represent the workers.

Company Wants No Investigation.

Stories that Pullman porters are being forced to vote affirmatively at company union elections now being held to enforce the plan—forced under threat of discharge—caused the Federated Press to ask New York Superintenden Rittenhouse about it over the phone.

"The elections are quite fair," said Rittenhouse. "The men are free to vote as they please."

"Then may we send a reporter to watch the elections," we asked.

"Oh, no, we couldn't allow that," replied the superintendent.

Brotherhood men say they can prove election intimidation if the employe representation plan attempts to claim status before the railroad labor board.

Instead of "Getting the Kaiser" He Gets $300,000,000 Estate

BERLIN—(FP)—Wm. Hohenzollern, Sr. may no longer be the big boss of Germany by divine right, but by capitalist standards he is still Germany's biggest man, for the return of all his property, which the Prussian state is reported to have decided on, will make him the richest living German. The ex-kaiser's property is valued at $300,000,000. An offer of an annual income of $300,000 made by the Prussian government was curtly refused and the return of his whole property demanded. Wages of German workers average about $400 a year.

Grave Diggers' Union Buries Nobody for a Scab Scale of Wages

CHICAGO—FP)—Denials that the Cemetery Employees union are pulling an effective strike have been forgotten in a frantic plea by the superintendents of 5 Catholic cemeteries for police assistance to strikebreakers. The diggers of scab graves are few in numbers and it is feared that the storage capacity for bodies for which no graves are ready will be exhausted in short order. An 8-hour $6 day is demanded by the union, which is chartered direct by the American Federation of Labor.

Two of the World's Largest Stove Firms Combine in Michigan

DETROIT—(FP)—Close on the heels of the consolidation of Dodge Brothers with the Graham Truck Co. comes the consolidation of the Michigan Stove Co. and the Detroit Stove Works, two of the world's largest stove companies. Two years ago the Detroit Stove Works absorbed the Art Stove Co. These companies manufacture under the Laurel, Garland and Jewel trademarks. The new combination is to be known as the Detroit-Michigan Stove Co.

Manitoba Labor Party Strong in Winnipeg

WINNIPEG—(FP)—The Independent Labor party of Manitoba elected four aldermen to the Winnipeg city council and two members to the school board Nov. 29th. This was a net loss of one labor alderman.

Winnipeg will be represented in the next Canadian parliament by two Labor M. P.s, J. S. Woodsworth and A. A. Heaps. No other part of Canada elected any labor representatives to Ottawa.

Canadian Asbestos Trust Formed; Holds 80 Per Cent Supply

MONTREAL—(FP)—The directors of the various asbestos companies of Canada have completed plans for a merger and the price of asbestos has gone up. The consolidation will include all producing mines in Quebec, except three controlled by American firms which produce raw material and manufacture it into finished articles. The chief promoters of the merger, Dillon Read & Co., New York, have made "a satisfactory arrangement with the three independent firms to prevent dumping surplus products on the markets." Quebec furnishes about 80 per cent of the world's asbestos.

OFFICE WORKERS' PAY LOWER THAN FACTORY LABOR

Only Three-Fourths of 1914 Living Scale

The average wages paid office workers, including all grades up to office managers and superintendents, employed by factories in New York state in October, 1925, was $34.49 a week, compared with $33.58 in October, 1924 and $19.18 in June, 1914. The increase over last October amounts to 5.6 per cent. But the increase over 1914 is only 79.8 per cent while the average wage paid industrial workers in the same factories has increased 125 per cent in the same 11-year period.

Office wages and the wages of industrial workers in New York for each year were, according to the state labor commissioner's annual review:

Average weekly

wage	Office	Industrial
1914	$19.18	$12.70
1915	18.91	13.49
1916	19.58	15.51
1917	21.07	17.71
1918	24.11	22.34
1919	27.13	24.41
1920	31.06	28.93
1921	31.27	24.53
1922	31.20	25.61
1923	32.56	27.72
1924	33.58	27.53
1925	34.49	28.58

This lag in office wages meant a serious reduction in the living standards of whitecollar workers. In the winter of 1918-1919 they were forced to meet a 70 per cent increase in the cost of living with wages up only 26 per cent, in 1919-20 a 100 per cent increase in living costs with wages averaging only about 42 per cent over 1914. Such wages could purchase less than ¾ of the goods and services to which their prewar earnings had accustomed them. Today office workers have just about caught up with the prewar standard while factory workers have materially improved their position.

Capitalist Courts Again Prove Their Enmity to Unionism

CLEVELAND—(FP)—A former unionist has won a $6,000 court award against Structural Iron Workers Local 17 based on the Cleveland union's refusal to recognize him as a union workman. He had violated union rules and had been fined $999 by the local. A permanent injunction forbidding the union to interfere with his efforts to obtain work was also granted.

BORAH TO RAISE RUSS ISSUE IN COURT DEBATES

Fight Starts Next Thursday, Dec. 17

By LAURENCE TODD,
(Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.— Led by Chairman Borah of the senate committee on foreign relations, the battle in the senate against American adherence to the world court will begin as soon as Sen. Swanson, ranking democrat on the committee, shall have finished his speech in support of the court on Dec. 17. Such effective debaters as Norris, Reed of Missouri, Johnson of California and Brookhart will join in the attack. Lenroot will direct the defense on behalf of the Coolidge administration.

Borah's line of attack will be that the court is a creature of the league of nations, and as such is not an unbiased international court, but is controlled by the militarist powers of Europe; that it offers no solution to problems of international crime, because no offender can be brot into court without his own consent. Its political character makes it dangerous, he will argue, because the problem of Soviet Russia has not been squarely met.

Conference Will Fail.

In this connection the Idaho senator proposes to go into a discussion of the folly of the Hughes-Kellogg-Coolidge policy of refusal to negotiate with the Russian government. He will predict a failure for the arms reduction conference which the league is about to call, and to which the Soviet Union as well as the United States will be invited. With the Mohammedan world in a ferment and China in continuous unrest, he holds that it is childish to imagine that Britain, France, Russia, Japan or Italy will disarm. The most the western powers will do is to launch a commission to "study" possible future disarmament. Militarist imperialism will not commit suicide just yet. Even the smaller countries will demand security thru an increase in the power of the league, before they disarm.

Will Fight Conference.

President Coolidge has decided to put up to congress the decision as to whether he shall take part in a general disarmament conference under league auspices. Borah will oppose American participation, on the ground that the scheme is designed rather to aggrandize the league than to banish war. He again proposes American recognition of Russia as a necessary preliminary step to any dealings with league Europe.

Workers (Communist) Party

DETROIT TO HEAR WICKS NEXT MONDAY

Speaks on Locarno at House of Masses

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 15—Arrangements are being made for the lecture of Comrade H. M. Wicks next Monday (Dec. 21st) at the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin street at 8:00 o'clock in the evening.

Comrade Wicks has been well-known in Detroit for the past ten years, having first spoken here in 1915, and during the campaign of 1916 he addressed huge meetings for weeks at a time on the street corners and in halls. He was one of the first to organize the left wing in the old socialist party in Detroit, that finally helped build the Communist Party.

Detroit workers have not heard him for nearly two years.

The lecture for Monday is on "Locarno, a New Threat Against the Soviet Union."

New York Gets Ready for New Year's Eve. Red Mask Costume Ball

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—New York City will dance out the old year and dance in the new on the night of Dec. 31, and the morning of January 1, in two big halls at Harlem Casino, Lenox avenue, corner 116th street, in a Red Mask Costume Ball. The distribution of 6,000 tickets and 15,000 throw-aways is already begun thru the agency of three institutions, any one of which could make a New Year's Eve costume ball a success. These institutions are the Workers' School, the DAILY WORKER and the Young Workers' (Communist) League and all three organizations are busily engaged in the sale of tickets.

Typographical Correction.

Thru a typographical error, many tickets have gone out with the announcement "New Year's Eve, Friday, December 31," as the date of the big event. The tickets and throw-aways are now being corrected, but many are already in the hands of purchasers who are requested to note that New Year's Eve is Thursday night and not Friday night.

All Must be Masked.

An elaborate program of entertainment has been devised for the occasion including tableaux, a complete Young Pioneer program and many novelty features especially appropriate to the holiday season and to a "Red" New Year's Eve. A single ticket admits to both halls at the price of 50 cents in advance and 75 cents at the door. Unlike most mask costume balls where only a few mask and wear costumes, in this ball, it will be made unanimous. There will be red masks on sale at the hall and anyone found unmasked before midnight will be punished. The usual funeral black masks are strictly prohibited.

Make your slogan—"A sub every week!"

STATE POLICE PROPAGANDISTS ON CASH BASIS

CINCINNATI—(FP)— Ohio, the battleground for state police lobbyists and their hitherto victorious opponents, is being combed by a New York cash-and-carry gang calling itself the Publicity Bureau for State Police Inc. By patient use of the telephone books in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo, Columbus and other cities, the state police agitators are seeking from their New York offices at 2126 Broadway to separate every Ohio citizen of means from $50. In return for his $50 the Ohio gentleman becomes a member of "our honorary advisory board," as chairman Charles M. Averill puts it in his come-on letter.

Strikes and radicalism—by which any labor activity is meant—are given as urgent reasons for supporting the state police propagandists.

"We are engineering an important drive to sell state police to the entire nation," the $50 selling letter says. "Thirty three states have no state police whatever and 15 states about half enough."

An additional function of the state troopers is specified as acting "effectively in case of war or a radical outbreak."

Mella on Hunger Strike Is Removed to Prison Hospital

ible for the continued imprisonment of Mella and twelve others whose only crime is opposition to the American sugar trust. Mella is on hunger strike and if he dies he will be a victim of American imperialism. Our protest against this outrage will be heard thruout the United States at demonstrations arranged by us."

Demand Liberation.

Another cable to President Machado of Cuba reads: "In the name of two hundred thousands individual members and affiliated organizations we protest against the continued imprisonment of Mella and twelve other workers whose only crime is the defense of Cuban liberation from Yankee imperialism. We demand their liberation and release."

Both telegrams were signed by James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense.

Mella and twelve other Cuban workers were charged with setting off bombs in front of a Havana factory. This is a frame-up, is universal among the Cuban working class. American workers are well acquainted with this method of getting rid of labor organizers. Mella is a leader of the student elements who have demanded the repeal of the Platt amendment which gives the United States virtual control of Cuba. Mella first came inso conflict with the agents of the American imperialists in Cuba when he supported the exploited "colonos" in their resistance to the exacting conditions forced on them by the sugar trust.

Mella is secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba and of the Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League which has branches in several South American countries.

Manuel Gomez, the secretary of the United States section of the league has cabled a protest to the president of Cuba against the death by starvation of Mella.

Strike Ties Up Edison Plant's Production

which has been thrown in front of the plant is just as effective as on the day they walked out and the scabs have to hide their faces in the dark in order that they might not be recognized.

The men employed at the main plant have been fully informed of the true situation that exists in the struck shop thru the columns of The DAILY WORKER, which was distributed in front of the main plant yesterday. The strikers are now more than ever certain that their fellow workers employed in the main plant will refuse to scab on the strikers and thus will aid the sheet metal workers to win their strike.

Do Yeoman Service.

The Edison Electric company is a subsidiary of the General Electric company, which is notorious for its rabid open shop policy. The sheet metal workers that are now on strike are doing a yeoman service to the Amreican labor movement in starting to organize one of the many Cicero shops in this most important industry—the electrical industry—and if the labor movement, in general, will back up this struggle, this attempt will be crowned with success.

the transition period between capitalism and socialism. The most widely quoted argument against Russia, is that there is no democracy there. We freely admit that the workers and peasants dictate the policies carried out in Russia, but at the same time we assert that those classes comprise the overwhelming majority of the population. Some day the workers and peasants of the world will realize that they must choose between the dictatorship of the workers and that of the capitalists. There is no middle ground.

RUMORS of an understanding beween the right wing of the British labor party and that section of the liberal party that follows Lloyd George are current in England. This would not be at all surprising. George has a panacea for British capitalism in the shape of a land reform which may give McDonald the excuse for crossing the bridge. George has a war chest of five million dollars. That looks good to the McDonalds, Hendersons and Snowdens. Besides, the Trade Union Congress is now in control of elements far to the left of the leadership of the labor party. The liberal party is practically dead. What may develop is a split in the labor party with MacDonald and Co. lining up with the Georgeite section of the liberals and perhaps the facsist elements in general. This gang may hang out its shingle and offer its services as the savior of British capitalism, which is just now rather weak at the knees.

HENRI BARBUSSE, world renowned novelist, author of "Under Fire" and other stories, declares that the white terror is raging furiously in Hungary, Bulgaria, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and that the situation is more serious than those living in western countries imagine. He estimates that at least 15,000 workers and peasants have disappeared in Bulgaria since the advent of the Zankov regime. This means that 15,000 have been murdered. Yet, you will notice that our capitalist press is not developing goose pimples over the situation. If such a state of affairs existed in Russia what an outcry would be raised!

AN effort was made in Ireland to organize the opposition to the free state government into an anti-government bloc in the Irish parliament. The proposed bloc would be composed of the representatives of the Irish labor party, the republicans and the group that recently split with the government. The intransigent attitude of the DeValera followers made this impossible. Like the Aventine opposition in Italy the DeValerites refuse to participate in parliament, lest they should sully their pure political souls with an oath of allegiance to the king of England. This is the height of political folly and imbecility. The Irish republican party deposits $750 with the government in return for the privilege to contest the elections, thus recognizing the government but they will not enter parliament to overthrow the same government because in so doing they would recognize the treaty which created the free state.

AN interesting development in Ireland is the crystallization of a definite anti-papal sentiment among the catholic population. This movement rallies around. Father Michael O'Flanagan, one of the most eloquent orators in Ireland. In a recent speech O'Flanagan proved—what we have been proving for many years—that a pope of Rome sold Ireland to England for one penny per head and that Rome and London have always been in cahoots to keep Ireland in subjection. This is encouraging, tho some alleged revolutionists, who have more wind in their stomachs than brains in their heads, profess their devotion to the Roman church on the ground that it is the best of all religions. Irish students, artists, poets and novelists are also organizing, to fight the church and reaction in general. This is a healthy sign of the times.

Young Pioneers Hear How Russian Children Organize for Action

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 15.—About 150 Pioneers thronged the headquarters of the Young Workers (Communist) League last week to hear Comrade Anna Porter of San Jose, California, tell about her recent experiences in Soviet Russia, and especially about the Young Pioneers there. Thru the efforts of the Young Workers (Communist) League, Comrade Porter was also scheduled to speak at the University of California about "Education in Russia," but the goose-steppers in charge became horrified when they found out of her sympathies with the Soviet government, and hurriedly cancelled the engagement lest some of the students who were eager to hear her might be contaminated by "insidious propaganda."

December Is Economic Trade Union Month

Among the most important activities of the Young Communist movement is economic trade union work. By this is meant, the active participation of the Young Communist Leagues in the everyday struggles of the young workers in the shops, energetic activity in strikes and organized propaganda and agitation within the trade unions for the complete unionization of the young workers.

The young workers are among the worst exploited section of the working class and activity on the economic trade union field is an effective method of gaining contact with them.

The Young Communist International has set aside December as economic trade union month thruout the world. This means that the combined forces of the Young Communist International, which numbers two million, will concentrate their activities on every phase of this work.

The Young Workers' (Communist) League of America is carrying on the international campaign, adopting it to the specific conditions in America. Energetic drives for the unionization of the league members, proper functioning of Young Workers' League trade union fractions, general drive for unionization of the youth, special conferences of young miners and general factory workers and factory campaigns are all receiving the special attention of the league.

What Do the Young Communists Want During December, the Economic Trade Union Month?

This question answered in an entire page of The DAILY WORKER on WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23rd.

Special articles will appear on various phases of the conditions of the young workers in industry and their special activities in the unions and shops.

The page will be edited by tthe Young Workers (Communist) League.

Workers Write About the Workers' Life

MINER'S HOME DYNAMITED IN STRIKE FIELD

Bosses' Scheme to Pin Job on Strikers

By GEORGE PAPCUN.
(Worker Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 15.—A house of a union coal miner was dynamited at 9:30 in the evening at Westland. The house is owned by the coal company and was occupied by John Gillis a Scotch miner, one of the strikers on strike at the Midland mine, who had lived in that district for 22 years and for the past six years had resided in the house which was wrecked.

Bosses' Agents Cook Up Story.

The miners in the Midland mine have been on strike for the past two months. The company that owns the mine is the Pittsburgh Coal Co., who has tried to operate the mine on the 1917 scale. A score of detectives and deputies were brought on the scene, and each and every one of them is making discoveries and getting clues which always seem to point to union miners. The company is cleverly playing up the outrage against the union miner and is trying to get the miners to go to work. All the miners are of the opinion that it was nothing but a frame-up by the coal company to scare the fellows into starting to come back to work.

The company has issued a statement for propaganda purposes to fool the miners and the local papers are playing it up big. The statement says, "In view of the disturbance in Library and Westland, three facts stand forth as significant of the miner of the company. The number of miners at work this morning is greater than yesterday. The total number of miners working in the mines of the Pittsburgh Coal company in the Pittsburgh district, is greater today than at any time since the company resumed operations under the 1917 scale and the amount of coal brought from the mines and loaded in railroad cars was the largest since the mines have been reopened. The company regrets greatly the trouble at Library and the the dynamiting of a house at Midland mine last night, but is pleased to know that the occupants of the house, a union mine worker and his family, were uninjured. This man, tho he had declined to work on resumption of operations, had been permitted to continue to occupy his home. The company volunteered to shelter the family, including the children, last night."

Don't Fool Miners.

The miners are not so easily fooled, that the company has become so good that it is going to take care of the union miner and his family, after the blow-up. They know it is only a scheme to get the miners back to work.

The miners are sticking solid. The coal company is trying to import strikebreakers and to a certain extent is succeeding. Pat Fagan and his bunch are issuing statements, which is about all they are doing. The miners are more determined than ever to fight and are willing to go out on the picket line, only the union officials will not permit them. The union officials tell the miners to sit quiet and do nothing.

There is a sentiment among the miners that are out on strike and among those that are working, for action, that is for a general strike.

The coal companies are also trying to play up race-hatred among the workers and among the black and white.

COMPANY USES EX-CRIMINALS AS SCABS IN BOSTON CHECKER TAXI DRIVERS' STRIKE; MEN STAND FIRM

By SAUL WHITE, a Worker Correspondent.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 15.—The strike of the 600 checker taxi drivers for a closed shop is now in its eighth week and still going strong. The fighting spirit of those boys is wonderful in spite of the tremendous opposition they have to face.

The Line-Up Against Workers.

The deputy superintendent of police, Mr. Goode, is a shareholder in the Checker Taxi Corporation; Mr. Charles Innis, the company lawyer, is the republican boss of the city who elected the new mayor of Boston, Mr. Malcolm Nichols; what further explanation for the company's success in obtaining a very drastic injunction against the strikers. It also explains why men with criminal records, some of whom are out on parole, are given chauffeur badges and are pressed into strikebreaking service.

However, the picture would not be complete without the A. F. of L. officials playing their usual role of betrayals. And the medal, in this case, goes to John Kearney, secretary of the Cooks' and Waiters' Union, also president of the Boston Central Labor Union.

Agreement Agrees With Bosses.

Kearney was drawing wages from the strikers (obviously getting more than one salary from the labor movement) for serving on a settlement committee during the early stage of the strike. He fooled the men into accepting an agreement which meant suicide for the newly born union.

With this agreement giving them every privilege, the company officials began firing the most militant of the strikers as soon as they returned to work, apparently victorious, and the men, in the face of such betrayals, had to quit again to protect their fellow workers who were being victimized for having fought the hardest in the strike. At this stage the city fathers intervened to save the company and as a consequence injunctions, police, thugs—all the elements of a capitalist democracy were let loose.

Election Day is Far Off Yet.

Mr. James Moriarty, formerly president of the Boston Central Labor Union, who sits in the city council and appeals in every election for the labor vote, has also overlooked this strike.

"Luckily the union taxi drivers of other companies have a sense of solidarity and have assessed themselves $3 and $4 per week for the strikers. But this is not enough. We pay $10 and $7 to married and single men respectively. We are appealing for help but money comes in slowly. Organized labor must help us," Mr. Harry Williams, treasurer of the strike committee, told the correspondent.

This is a strike that deserves the support of every class-conscious worker. The strikers will run a smoke talk the end of this month at the Grand Opera House to raise money for the benefit fund and they hope to get the support of organized labor.

PREMIER TAXI DRIVERS TOIL LONG WORKDAY

Organized But Union Is Not on the Job

By A Worker Correspondent

The drivers in the Premier Taxi Co., the only 100 per cent unionized taxi company in Chicago, have working conditions that are worse than those in nonunion companies.

Wages are $28 per week providing a total of $60 is collected or booked. Under $60 in bookings the pay is on the commission basis of 35 per cent, and 35 per cent on all over $80 in bookings. Tips amount from $8 to $12 per week extra. If bookings are under $60 for one week and if repeated again the next week the driver is fired.

Ten and one-half hours is the length of the working day, the average is much more. Single shift drivers put in 14 to 16 hours and often more. Double shift drivers work 10½ to 12 hours. Extra night drivers who are also double shift men must wait 2 to 4 hours for a car which is not included in the working time. These hours are, sometimes, hardly long enuf when the "business" is poor and $60 has to be booked by the end of the week.

Every driver and garage employe in the Premier Taxi company belongs to the union and that's all. That the union is a fighting weapon is not a conscious fact among the members. No meetings are held, at least, announcements are not given out. The company is able to exist only because it is a union company. Make the company nonunion, it will collapse in competition with the Yellow Cab company.

Establish regular union meetings and a slogan of "All Taxi Cab Drivers Must Be Union Members" should be be the present program of action.

HALKETT BARS PROGRESSIVES FROM COUNCIL

Two Carpenters' Locals Disfranchised in N. Y.

By MIKE ROSS
(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 15.—Morris Rosen who was re-elected as delegate to the New York District Council of Carpenters at the last meeting of Local No. 376 so that the local could cast its vote for progressive candidates in the coming district council elections, was refused his seat by the administration.

A newly elected delegate from Local No. 2717, by the name of Feldman was also refused his seat. This is the third successive delegate which the machine refused to seat from that local. A scab by the name of Beren was appointed by Hutcheson's pet poodle Guirin, to cast that local's vote for Halkett.

Halkett Like Stuck Pig.

When Halkett, president of the New York Building Trades Council, saw the credentials, his liquor colored face grew redder and he yelled: "We don't want no reds or Communists here." He squealed so loud that all the windows had to be closed for fear that pedestrians would think that murder was being committed.

Progressive delegates tried their best to get the floor, but discussion was suppressed. Delegates Quigly and McGrath were forced to sit down, while Delegate Lihzis, who is candidate for 2nd vice-president managed to say, despite the terrorism prevailing, "Rosen must be seated or the district council elections are illegal."

Disfranchise Two Locals.

The credentials of both locals were ruled out of order. With Locals No. 376 and No. 2717 disfranchised, the Hutcheson district council officials are sure of re-election.

The officials did not even read the names of the progressive candidates on nomination night so that the delegates would be ignorant as to who is the opposition and so that the official minutes would not contain the names of the opposition candidates.

JERUSALEM, Dec. 15.— Egyptian newspapers today reported the killing of five hundred French troops and the capture of eighty in a battle with the Druses, south of Damascus on December 5.

SOCIALISTS SHOW TRAITOR FACE TO SILK STRIKERS

Only Communists Stand by Them in Struggle

By ALBERT WEISBORD
(Worker Correspondent)

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., Dec. 15. —The Hillcrest silk strike has had the very good effect of opening the eyes of the workers to the forces that are created to crush them. Federal government, local police, state courts, press, church and other bosses' institutions have become exposed to the silk workers for what they really are. But many workers still had certain illusions about the socialist party which at the beginning of the strike they ardently cherished and only towards the end were compelled to give up.

When the workers needed some money for the strike, they went to the socialist party but that "working class party" gave them no help to raise money—but advice. These skunks calling themselves "socialists" told the workers to drop their leaders who had faithfully been leading their strike for over six weeks, now on the eighth week, who had been physically threatened by the police and who had gone to jail for the strikers, in the middle of the strike. The traitors did not care that if the workers lost their organizers at this time the strike would be lost. Were they not aware that the reason why police, courts, press and church and boss had made such a bitter attack against the organizers was because they knew once the organizer went the strike would be lost? Sure these traitors knew that. The socialist party became exposed again to the workers, that it is the agency of the bosses to betray and confuse the workers in critical periods of class warfare.

But this time the socialist party did not suceed in its role of betrayer of the working class. The workers themselves knew how to answer them. They said to the socialist party that the question of what organization they joined was not the affair of that party but the workers' own affair, that the socialist party workers had been invited to work with the united front committee but had refused and now when the workers were sorely pressed and needed help and unity then the socialist party raised "conditions."

The workers have learned that only the Workers (Communist) Party fights unreservedly without "conditions" in the first ranks of the workers for their demands against the bosses.

Need Organizers to Unionize the Ford Slaves in Detroit

By A Worker Correspondent

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 15.— It is with pleasure that I read the articles written by the Worker Correspondents in The DAILY WORKER and the articles championing the cause of the striking miners. I was a miner myself and know what they have to contend with.

At present I am employed at the Ford Motor works here. Workers are treated like animals. Of all the places I've worked in, Ford's is the worst. There is no union to which the workers can appeal for protection from actual abuse. The only thing we can do is to curse them under our breath and this we do aplenty.

We are driven to our utmost and still we live in constant fear of losing our jobs. A new man breaking in is threatened, bull-dozed and abused something terrible. It is not uncommon for workers to give up and go home sick from exhaustion or to see dozens going to the hospital daily for treatment of cuts and wounds, the result of mad driving of human beings by the greedy capitalists for more wealth.

Yes, the eight-hour day is in force at Ford's but every bit of strength is squeezed out of the men during these eight hours. At the end of the day I am limp as a rag.

It is too bad there are no organizers here to organize the Ford workers, I am sure there are a great many who would be eager to join a union if a good campaign were started.

Worker Burns to Death; Widow Receives Nothing

By A Worker Correspondent

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 15.— Clothes soaked with oil from his job at the Stanley works in New Britain made Paolo Tiralongo, a bad fire risk. His clothes caught fire in the comfort room at the shop and he was burned to death. Then his widow, Teresa Tiralongo appealed to the compensation board and got nothing; again she appealed to the superior court of Connecticut and again got nothing. Judge Marvin argued that the accident was not "due to a risk of the employment itself." The company attorney thinks that his clothes were ignited by a cigarette, but there is no positive evidence.

FURRIERS WANT HIGHER WAGES, SHORTER HOURS

New York Agreement Expires January 31

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The 40-hour week with no overtime permitted, elimination of all piece work, and wage increases of $10 a week and more are leading articles in the full text of demands the fur workers' union is making on New York manufacturers in place of the existing agreement that expires January 31.

The first answer of the manufacturers' association was to refuse any changes in the old agreement and if this position is held to, a strike impends. The New York Joint Board recently showed its strength in a victory over the Greek manufacturers, bringing a large portion of the still unorganized section of the market under union control, and a confident spirit is in the air. Comparison of wages demanded with those now paid, shows:

	Minimum New Scale	Minimums Old Scale
Cutters	$57.50	$40 to $46
Operators	47.50	32 to 38
Nailers	45.00	30 to 36
Finishers	43.75	28 to 35

Plans for unemployment regulation call for the substitution of the 32-hour week whenever an unemployment emergency exists and unemployment insurance to which manufacturers shall contribute weekly sums equal to three per cent of wages paid, the fund to be controlled by the union. A similar insurance plan is followed by the capmakers.

All home work (a pernicious form of overtime) must end, says another clause. Manufacturers may only contract work out to shops that have at least 10 workers and agreements with the union. May day must be recognized as a holiday. Most of the fur manufacturing of the nation is done in New York and the union's 8,000 members here comprise more than three-quarters of the total membership.

Bombay Textile Labor Wins Strike Against Cut, But British Lose

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—With suspension by the British government of India of the 3½ per cent excise duty on cotton goods, the 150,000 cotton mill strikers of Bombay, India, win their three months' strike against 11½ per cent wage cuts. Word of the victory, cabled to New York, was received by the Friends of Freedom for India. The Indian cotton mill owners blamed the excise duty which taxed every yard of goods produced in India, for the wage cuts they announced.

The victory of the Bombay strikers indicates that industrialization of India will go rapidly forward, says S. N. Ghose, secretary of the Friends of Freedom for India. The tax had been imposed for the purpose of discouraging Indian industry and its repeal—a concession to the sentiment mobilized by the strike—gives Indian textiles that much more leeway in competing in the world market.

It may mean the entrance of new British capital into Indian industry In any case the situation for Lancashire, England, cotton mill workers, is not promising of anything but more unemployment. Cheap production of cotton goods in India, China and Japan have already seriously affected the Lancashire workers, who are well organized and have had comparatively good working conditions.

Take Coolidge Slogan, "Keep Government Out of Business," Seriously

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Led by Homer Ferguson of the Newport News Shipbuilding company and by leaders in the National Association of Manufacturers and other big business associations, a meeting of business men opposed to any and all business activities on the part of the government has just held two days of talk in the capital. Committees were appointed to carry on the work.

The substance of the demands made by numerous speakers was that the federal government should rid itself of waterpower plants and sites and all other industrial assets, including its merchant fleet; that no goods should be produced for sale in prisons; that cities should own no public utilities; that public operation should cease.

Customs Officials Can Bar Aliens, Says the U. S. Supreme Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The authority of American consuls to hold up papers and bar aliens for entry into the United States was inferentially upheld by the supreme court today.

The court dismissed a petition of Marcus Gruber, New York, for an order to compel Consul General Halstead of Montreal to visa passports for Rosa Porter, a Russian relative. Gruber contended the consul had no discretion.

Student Conference Wrecked by Jim Crow Spirit of Southerners

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 15.—The newly formed student federation, which was created at the National Collegiate World Court conference, was wrecked when the delegation of southern students bolted the convention following the election of Miss Mabel Halloway, a colored girl, to the executive committee of the federation.

The southern delegation objected to the presence of Negro students in the hall and when Miss Halloway was elected they bolted.

One of the proposals endorsed by the conference by an overwhelming vote was the world court.

CHINESE WHITE GUARD LEADER ASSASSINATED

Feng's Troops Rule in Tientsin Area

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 15.—The steamer President Pierce of the Dollar line was entering the harbor last night when the noted white guard Chinese commander who led the war on Canton recently, Hong Shao-lin, sailing under an assumed name from Hongkong, was shot by a Chinese worker supposed to be his servant. The worker then committed suicide. The general is not expected to live.

Reports from the north show that Chang Tso-lin's remnants of an army are still fighting desultorily near Mukden. Chang has seized and killed all of the relatives of Kuo Sung-ling, leader of the mutiny against him.

Dispatches say that Gneral Feng Yu-hsiang has sent word to Japan that the movement against Chang is not anti-Japanese and that Japan's present holdings will not be touched. Feng's troops still face those of Li Ching-ling, governor of Chihli, and the latter is sure of defeat if battle ensues.

American troops, acting as railway guards are said to be keeping the rail line open from Peking to Tientsin for mails and foreign passengers. Feng's troops fill all trains.

Senate Committee Says Insurgent Nye Has No Right to Be Seated

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The senate elections committee today adopted a report recommending that senator-designate Gerald P. Nye, insurgent republican of North Dakota, be denied his seat.

The report declared that Governor Sorlie of North Dakota had no legal authority to appoint Nye.

Wheat Gambler Makes $1,000,000 in Six Days

Following the spectacular unloading of over 3,000,000 bushels of wheat at the high price and then buying it back at 10 to 20 cents lower per bushel, Jesse Livermore was able to make $1,000,000 in a six-day gamble.

Professional trading in wheat, it is declared, has seldom been so enormous as it was during the past month.

Market prices on wheat were kept booming for over a month by the board of trade gamblers. Many small investors bought at top notch prices. Then followed the spectacular unloading of over 3,000,000 bushels throwing the small fellows into a panic and then when the price was forced down, Livermore stepped in and cleaned up.

It was claimed by the gamblers at first that crop damage in the Argentine and heavy buying of wheat in America caused the rise in prices to $1.77 per bushel.

Fraudulent Practices in Collecting Taxes Embodied in Charge

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—An attack on alleged irregularity in the administration of the income tax law against the Robert Dollar Steamship company was revealed today in testimony taken by the Couzens senatorial committee in its secret investigation of the internal revenue bureau.

The testimony showed that the committee's investigators charged irregularities had saved the company payment of $500,000 in taxes and given it a refund of $11,000 in 1918.

MILK DEALERS' CLUB GOES OUT OF BUSINESS

Association Is Charged with Bombings

The Good Fellowship Club, an organization of Chicago milk dealers, which the state's attorney charges has had a monopoly on the delivery of milk dealers, has decided to disband.

A dealer who was not a member of this association could not sell milk to any customers of members of the association All dealers were given a certain territory to cover and one dealer could not encroach on the rights of the other dealer. The Good Fellowship Club, it was pointed out, reprimanded any offender by tossing a bomb into the dairy plant of the dealer and in that manner force a member of the association into line and a non-member dealer out of business or into the association.

Retail Stores Penalized.

It was further pointed out that the small retail stores were restricted to sell milk at certain hours and could only sell the milk at certain prices. Failure on the part of a small storekeeper to follow out the rules laid down was met by a heavy penalty.

A number of the officials and business agents of the club are indicted and are charged with the bombings of a number of dairies. They will be placed on trial the early part of January.

Other Employers Indicted.

Not only are the milk dealer association heads under indictment, but also the heads of the hardware business men's association, the Master Barbers' Association and a number of real estate owners' associations.

Chicago Railroads Still Consider 15 Pct. Suburban Fare Raise

Chicago railroads operating suburban service will not act in concert on the 15 per cent increase on commutation tickets granted last week by the Illinois commerce commission, it was learned. While some of them are inclined to accept the commission's ruling and try out the temporary rate, others feel that it does not grant the relief they deem necessary and are contemplating appealing to the interstate commerce commission.

The Rock Island seems to be the only road reasonably certain to accept the state body's new ruling. The Illinois Central and Burlington are studying the case and have not made known their decision.

Hail the Russian Communists

The congress of the Russian Communist Party is now in session in Moscow. Congresses of the leading party of the Communist Interntaional are always of tremendous interest to all revolutionary elements everywhere. Every congress means a long step in the direction of socialism, as history has imposed upon it the task of guiding the destinies of the outpost of the world revolution—the Soviet Union. The party is the vanguard and the motivating force of that revolution.

At this congress reports will be made showing the most notable advance in the eight years of Bolshevist rule. The recent economic report, published in THE DAILY WORKER, proves conclusively that the nation has travelled far on the road toward Communism that the rule of capitalism is gone forever and that each passing year makes more and more impossible the return of the old system.

Not only is capitalist rule destroyed, but the very soil upon which capitalism thrives is being uprooted as the new economic system develops under the conscious direction of the Communist Party.

By way of diversion we have the usual barrage of insipid droolery of capitalist propaganda from the lie factories of Riga, where white guard exiles hover like hungry buzzards over the border of the Soviet Union, eking out a mere existence thru receiving doles from capitalist newspapers for the fantastic lies they spin regarding the condition of Russia. A convening of the Communist Party congress is always the signal for activity on their part. But intelligent workers never believe anything the capitalist press publishes bearing a Riga dateline.

THE DAILY WORKER hails the congress of the Russian Communist Party and assures the Russian comrades that we will serve their cause, which is the cause of the working class of the whole world, by striving to achieve in the United States the victory over capitalism that they have achieved in Russia.

Scouring the Earth for Peons

Christian imperialists with designs upon the Near and Middle East shed crocodile tears over the alleged deportation of christian populations by the Turks, in order to inflame prejudice against that country preparatory to a rapacious war, but they maintain a pronounced silence on a system of organized pirating of human beings that is in vogue in India.

On October 19, this year, according to reports of the United States department of labor, the government of Guatemala and the Mexican and General corporations, limited, entered into a contract which permits the corporation to bring natives of India to Guatemala to work as laborers on the corporation's plantations. Of course, they will have to work until they pay for their transportation.

Needless to state they will be confronted by conditions similar to these existing in certain coal regions in the United States where the workers are paid in company script and kept in debt to the company so they remain in a perpetual state of peonage.

That which is imposed upon white people in this country will be intensified against the slaves transported from Indian to Guatemala.

The fact that these peons are secured in India is evidence that British capitalists are behind the thing.

If this practice is permitted to continue it means that large numbers of the seething masses of India will be deported to all parts of the world to furnish cheap labor power for British imperialism.

It is about time world unity of the labor movement is established to forcibly prevent slave ships sailing the seas. Only the power of labor can stop this contemptible traffic.

Registration of Aliens

A definite policy in an effort to place laws upon the statute books compelling the registration of alien workers has been adopted by the Coolidge adminitration. The Coolidge message to congress wherein he said, "If investigation reveals that any considerable number (of aliens) are coming here in defiance of our immigration restrictions, it will undoubtedly create the necessity for the registration of all aliens," was simply a more mild formulation of the vicious statement of Secretary of Labor Davis, in his report to congress:

> "No one knows how many agents of anarchy there are in the United States today. They come in divious ways and operate by stealth and concealment. That they should be found and deported no true American can deny."

This means that foreign-born workers will be subject to arrest and deportation any time they participate in a struggle against the capitalists. The government of Wall Street will declare their activity in the struggle, whether it be a strike for better conditions or a political demonstration against some intolerable abuse, to be illegal and evidence that they are "anarchists," hence they are in the country illegally because of restrictions against what the government interprets as anarchy.

Whether the victims ever heard of the bourgeois philosophy of anarchism is of no concern to the government. What Davis interprets as anarchy cannot be questioned, tho it is contrary to all known facts. This threat is not aimed against the radical worker alone, but against any worker who dares challenge the despotism of the employer of labor.

It is only a step from registration of alien workers to registration of all workers, American-born as well, on the pretext that registration must be complete to determine who are aliens.

This means registration for industrial conscription and the governmental establishment of a black list, so that any worker who has the courgae to rebel against industrial despotism will be terrorized and hounded into submission to the domination of the exploiters.

It means a complete registration to enable the capitalist class and its executive committee, the United States government, to prepare the ground for military and industrial conscription of every worker in preparation for the next world war that is now being provoked by the clash of imperialist interests.

All workers must resist this assault with every weapon at hand.

The Convention Is Over, What Next?

FOR six days the battle at the furriers' convention lasted. Left-wing delegates fought—the right-wing played in accord with the instructions of the imported socialist advocates. On the seventh day, the convention really entered upon its work. The report of the general executive board satisfied the committee, which was appointed to accept it. The majority of the committee had no word of criticism.

Six locals had returned their charters—had no more locals. The majority of the appointed committee had no word of criticism on that. Among those locals which exhaled their last breath of life under the right wing leadership was local Cleveland. The committee raised no question about it. The furriers know the history of Cleveland. For weeks the tom-tom was beating about the gigantic struggle at Cleveland. The "strongest" forces, headed by the president, led the strike at Cleveland. And the holy Forwards proclaimed the final triumph—why worry? Why? There is no local in Cleveland! What happened! The local has been "dissolved!"

Waste Union Funds.

In Mount Vernon, two first-class organizers led a shop of twenty on strike. The strike cost about $2,000. And it was given up.

In Chicago the pressers and dyers were organized in a local—the local has been "dissolved."

The organizers visited the great out-of-town scab shops where skilled workers toiled ten hours a day for $18 a week, they reported—well—they had visited. What else?

In St. Paul, there is a struggle going on for the past three weeks for a ten per cent raise in wages. Two years ago the president himself conferred with the president of the bosses' association. The general executive board acted upon it. Messages and messengers ran back and forth; mass meetings were held, and the decision was made—to delay until the next season. Finally—it's being delayed again.

In Boston, the international forced a boss to abide by the union conditions! The international took out an injunction against the firm. This, of course, was done by the able counsel of the socialist lawyer. The report showed few gains—but chiefly defeats. Above all—the report says nothing about work that has been neglected. No attempts were made to organize the thousands of unorganized.

Forget New York.

The successful organization work of the New York Joint Board is not even mentioned in the report of the general executive board. Why? They are left wingers—damn them!

The successful strike and gains of the 1,200 Greek workers is not mentioned, just as tho the international officers felt ashamed of it. The committee reports everything is alright and recommends its acceptance. Only Comrade Schneider had a great deal to oppose in the report.

"Injunctions O. K."

The ex-president answers in a long speech. Injunctions are O. K. As a practical labor leader, he recognizes that capitalists fight workers with injunctions—but, workers, too, may employ them. A very good means to cure a boil! About the locals that did not wish to become locals, it is the fault of the rank and file. A fact! Milwaukee workers do not want to be organized. The rank and file is a double crosser. It wants benefits in time of strike. The rank and file is a traitor. Leaders are alright.

Oh, in what cynical relations are the leaders to the workers! Oh, what a joke, what a pun! Can one believe his own ears. One wonders is it a convention of workers' representatives? "The rank and file is a double crosser; has a greed for money, is a traitor"—and the leaders, the socialist lawyers, they are "alright."

Financial report reads: $33,000 were spent for organization work. Over $23,000 in benefits to the double crossers—the rank and file. Over $50,000 were paid out to the holy and pure international employes.

"Rank and File Ignorant."

The rank and file, bursts out the president, is dumb and ignorant, it does not want to be organized.

Don't worry, the Forwards will educate it. The Fur Worker, organ of the international, will stimulate their conscience. Over $10,000 were spent on the Fur Worker, to slur the left wing and throw mud at Soviet Russia.

Just examine the Fur Worker and see what sort of educational work you find there. What a shameless band led it! Mr. President, Secretary and Organizers sought $110 weekly wages and their expenses, quite legally, but vented their spleen on the workers, when they wanted benefits while on strike. The right wing delegates felt at ease when the president rubbed it into the rank and file. They laughed heartily. "That's right, give it to them, and at the same time hand it to those left wingers, who still have faith in the rank and file." How can the rulers be the representatives of the workers, when they have no faith in them? How can one represent workers, when one would eat them alive? The relations and feelings between the workers and the leaders forced upon them are quite mutual! No wonder, the labor movement makes such progress!

Mock Workers' Resolution.

To the proposed resolutions, the leaders had a mocking tone—cynicism, full of mockery. The tone was of defeat, of used-to-be's. Their only revenge—a petty sarcasm. Be it their consolation. The convention is over.

It was no usual convention. Everything did not ride along as smoothly as usual. Wherever there are left wingers, there must be strike, life and soul. Cynicism and petty sarcasm made no effect on the left wing delegates. Resolute and certain of the final triumph, have the left wing led the struggle against the old, degenerate, mould-breathing pests of the labor movement. The maneuvers and the deals did not help. Even the joker did not aid much.

Saved For Short While.

Only for a short while has the machine saved itself from complete annihilation. Here and there, it has smuggled in a few on jobs; but no positions, because the membership paid them in return with the same coin—hate and disgust. Of what value is the machine without the trust of the workers? Of course, the machine may avenge itself on the workers and throw down their resolutions and fail to bring into action their desires. But it is not as in the days gone by. The force of organized membership has shown how it may combat its enemy! Let them try to challenge the furrier workers. Furriers know no half-way battles! The fight against Kaufmanism will be brought to its completion.

At the meeting in Cooper Union, the membership has shown its rage against Kaufmanism and the Forwards, supported by the socialist party lawyers, which is proof enough that the workers will not tolerate any oppressor. The good old days are gone, the right wing in the needle trades, should learn a lesson from the history of the Furriers' Union.

LABOR IN THE FAR EAST (JAPAN) -

By TANI

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Trade Union Educational League offers to American workers a series of articles on labor in the Far East, the present series being on Japanese labor by Comrade Tani, member of the Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions for Japan. The first told of the split forced by reformists in the Japanese General Federation of Labor, the formation of the left wing center, the Nihon Rodokumial Hyogikai and its class struggle program. The second, told of this organization's activities on the serious problem of unemployment. Today we read of the problem of forming a labor party, called in Japan the "Proletarian Party." This has been realized since the article was written, but Comrade Tani tells of the struggle put up for it by the left wing. The next series will be on the labor movement of Indonesia.

ARTICLE III

AGAINST such an attack of the reformists the Nihon Rodokumial Hyogikai has come out with energetic propaganda, mercilessly criticizing the attempts of the reformists and calling for the solidarity of all proletarian elements for the realization of a unified national political party. The slogans of the Hyogikai are:

1. Stick to class-conscious leadership.
2. Mass organization of workers and tenant peasants.
3. Political party of daily struggle."

ON July 7th the Central Executive Committee of the Nihon Rodokumiaia Hyogikai issued a manifest to the affiliated unions. It begins with the following words:

"On June 21st the Japan Peasant Union issued a call to organize a preliminary organ for the foundation of a proletarian party.

"We, the workers, have hitherto declared that we are the vanguard of the toiling masses and are by duty bound to lead the peasants and others. In spite of it, certain of the leaders of trade unions have forgotten to lead the proletarian class on the political field. . . . We accept with great pleasure the call of our peasant brethren, who have taken the initiative upon themselves. We must now rectify with redoubled energy the negligence of some leaders among us and hasten the realization of the proletarian party."

AT the Executive meeting of July 12th, the Central Committee of the Hyogikai issued the following instructions as to the task of organization of the party:

"1. The District Political Bureau of the Hyogikai shall direct the political committees of local unions in respective districts and shall organize a special committee—committee for the organization of the party.

"2. The said committee shall be organized with two or three members from each affiliated union together with the members of the District Political Bureau. These members of the committee shall devote their time entirely to the assigned task.

"3. The work of the committee is: a) to hold local conferences with other labor organizations; b) to conduct agitational and propaganda work such as mass meetings, placarding and broadcasting leaflets, etc.; c) to assist the Peasant Union in carrying out its program; d) to fight against the tendency to organize scattered local parties; e) to carry on discussions on the program of the party.

"4. The Central Political Bureau shall issue a draft of a program and organizational plan. The local committees shall discuss them in the light of the specific local conditions.

"5. The local committees shall send weekly reports to the Central Political Bureau."

ON the 10th of August the preliminary "Conference for the organization of Proletarian Party" was held in Osaka. 11 labor organizations, two peasant organizations, one political organization (the Seiji Kenky Kai) and two Suiheisha (parish) organizations were represented in the conference by 56 delegates.

The more important of them were the Japan Peasant Union, the Japanese Federation of Labor (the federation joined the conference in spite of its advocation of local parties), the Government Factory Workers' Federation, the Nihon Rodokumiai Hyogikai, etc. The conference resolved to establish a permanent preliminary committee for the organization of the Proletarian Party. This committee was elected.

The drafting of the party program, the outline for the future tasks of the committee, the program for the second conference, the financial affairs, etc., were also decided on.

BEFORE the opening of the conference, a certain amount of uneasiness was expressed as to the possibility of the flaring up of friction once again between the split Sodomei and the Hyogikai, thereby endangering the conference. This fear, however, was unfounded and through skillful maneuvers of left wing delegates the conference closed with victory on their side. The appearance of a national party of the proletariat has thus been assured at this memorable Osaka conference.

The left wingers will endeavor to put the following demands among others in the platform of the Proletarian Party. How many of these points will actually be adopted is a matter of future interest, for it will show the relative strength of the left wing in the movement.

1. Down with imperialism and its wars.
2. Self-determination to Korea and other colonies.
3. Hands off China.
4. International unity of labor.
5. Those who toil the earth shall own it.
6. Eight-hour work day and full maintenance for unemployed.
7. Workers' control of industry.
8. Universal suffrage to all from 18 years of age.
9. Freedom of press, speech, assembly and organization.
10. Abolition of all gag-laws (peace-preservation law etc.).
11. Abolition of Upper-House, Privy Council, "Genroes", etc.
12. A workers' and peasants' government.

AMONG other activities of the left wing minority of Japanese labor, we must count its international activity first. When the Chinese textile workers started a colossal fight against world imperialism early this year, the Japanese revolutionary workers at once responded to the call of the Chinese workers and started an energetic protest movement against their own imperialistic government. The movement was relentlessly suppressed by police and gendarmerie, but it has succeeded in awakening the sense of international solidarity of the working class, even amongst the most backward masses.

The invitation issued by the Nihon Rodokumiaia Hyogikai to the delegates of the Russian unions and consequent visit of the delegates to Japan is also a topic worthy of mention. It has been a long cherished dream of the Japanese working masses to shake hands with the Russian workers who have accomplished their revolution.

THIS desire had no opportunity to express itself for eight years owing to the complete blockade set up by the bourgeois government. The burst of enthusiasm manifested by the Japanese workers in meeting the Russian delegates on their way through Japan is quite understandable in consideration of these facts.

At the same time the contemptible attitude and laughable confusion of mind manifested by the Japanese police authorities regarding the unwelcome guests is also quite understandable, when we remember the high tide of the revolutionary labor movement in the country. There is nothing more fearful for the Japanese bourgeois government than the international solidarity of the revolutionary elements within the country. The new "peace preservation law" which imposes ten years' imprisonment upon revolutionary workers is aimed at discouraging their international activities.

IN spite of all such measures of suppression and obstacles, the Japanese working class is more and more closing up its ranks with the international labor under the leadership of the left wing minority. It has already declared its intention to join one international when it will be formed.

It refrains at the present from joining either to the Amsterdam or to the Moscow Internationals. As a matter of fact, this is the result of the tactical move on the part of the Japanese left wingers to nullify the recent attempt of the right wing leaders to push the Japanese organized labor into the mire of the Amsterdam International and thereby firmly establish the rule of reformism in Japan.

A Letter on the Amalgamated and a Reply

DEAR Brother Editor:

I take this opportunity to express my opinion thru the columns of your paper on the present situation in the Chicago locals of the Amalgamated. Tho I don't agree with your ways and tactics, since I express the opinion of hundreds and perhaps thousands of other workers I would like an answer to my questions in The DAILY WORKER.

Now to the point. Ten years ago we, the workers in the men's clothing industry revolted against the corrupt and bureaucratic administration in the United Garment Workers' Union. The revolt against the policy of selling out to the bosses, against czarism in the union and for the interests of the rank and file was successful and we founded the A. C. W. U.

BUT, like many other fights, we now find that we have won the battle, but not the war. While we defeated the bureaucracy in the old union we failed to build the new union on such a basis that we would prevent the rise of another bureaucracy.

In the beginning the A. C. W. U. was a fighting organization, but that only lasted until our own Hillmans, Rosenblums, Harry Cohens and Levins intrenched themselves in power and now we have the old story in a more brutal, more corrupt, and more ugly form.

And I write this to you because you, the lefts, are unconsciously doing your best to prevent history repeating itself today.

Here are some facts to which I expect an answer:

1—The members have lost confidence in our leaders and every time a movement starts to refuse to finance these officials by refusing to pay them dues you help the officials thru your press and the organized group in the T. U. E. L.

2—At the last wage cut conference called by the progressives, to which I was invited, where we were supposed to find a way to stop wage reductions that are being put into effect thru conspiracies between the manufacturers and the officials of the union, a gang of thugs led by the scum of our union, Novak Brothers and Cooper, raided the meeting with guns and blackjacks and slugged the men and women present, blinding Brother Hirschler and wounding many others. You can rest assured they got well paid for the job. Hundreds of workers, when they heard of the incident, were enraged, and were ready if the only organized opposition in our union, the T. U. E. L., would start a movement against having an assessment of twenty-five dollars levied that will certainly be used against us instead of against the bosses. We were ready to line up and give our machine the proper answer that they deserve.

But when we came to the local meeting one of your members, M. Berson, gets up and makes a speech that we should pay the twenty-five dollars assessment. The officials laughed in their sleeves at such an opposition.

3—These thugs are known to the police because of the many crimes charged against them. When they attack us they know that no matter what they do you will protect them against the police, and in this way give them a free hand to terrorize the membership.

4—The rank and file have lost confidence in the elections carried on by the Amalgamated. The know that no matter for whom they vote it is the machine that takes care of the election and will decide who is elected. Instead of boycotting the election and carrying on a campaign against such fake elections you go ahead this year again and put up Brother N. Green to run as manager of the joint board and in that way recognizing the legality of the election.

We proved in 1914 that the way of open revolt, and defiance of the fake leaders is the only way to fight successfully. You have shown in 1923-24-25 that your tactics of maneuvering has helped the bureaucracy to create for themselves such a power that the membership is terrorized to the extent of being afraid to come to a local meeting.

In conclusion of this letter I have the following to say: If your tactics are correct I challenge you to print this letter and answer my questions. If the letter goes into the waste basket I will understand that you have nothing to say and that it is time that we organized a real progressive group that don't believe in your Jesus Christ tactics.

Hoping that you will answer me as well as the hundreds of others that hold my opinions I remain,

Fraternally yours,
L. Marcus, Local No. 39.

The Error of the Splitting Tactics.

Brother Marcus makes a mistake in tactics which has been committed often—much too often—in America. That mistake is the idea that the progressive and left wing members can defeat the reactionaries by refusing to pay dues. But the reactionary officials cannot be defeated that way. The blow falls against the union as a whole, divides the membership into two camps fighting one another, and thus gives a new lease of life to the old officials, who come before the members in the role of angels of peace pleading for unity.

The left wing will rally the membership for the support of class struggle policies as against the class-collaboration policies of Hillman, Levin & Co., and any attempt to rally the membership only on the destructive platform of non-payment of dues would wreck the left wing and the union. So the proposal of Brother Marcus cannot be accepted.

That does not mean, of course, that when the membership has given its support to the left wing program and to left wing leaders, that then the membership must submit if tricked out of its victory by the old officialdom. No, in such a case the left wing will not hesitate in following the glorious history of the foundation of the A. C. W. of A. in the struggle against Rickert and the scabbing U. G. W.

As for the struggle against thuggery, which is now a burning question in the A. C. W., the left wing is not pacifist, and it does not subscribe to the doctrine of Jesus, to "turn the other cheek." Resistance must be organized to meet and defeat gangsterism. But this must be done by the members themselves. The police will not do it for us. And while we have no interest in protecting the gangsters from the police, neither have we the slightest idea that we can expect any police protection, nor does the left wing solicit it. The left wing depends upon the organized power of the membership.

In both the points raised by Brother Marcus, the left wing has only one objective toward which it struggles—that is, to rally the membership to fight for correct policies, and for militant leadership. When the members are drawn into that fight, then these problems can be solved—and in no other way. The great weapon of the reactionary officials is to get the members fighting against one another instead of fighting against the wrong policies and wrong leadership. Brother Marcus should not fall into their trap, but should stand shoulder to shoulder with the left wing, and build up the fighting power of the rank and file.

Slave Awaking

(Tune—It Ain't Gonna Rain No More)

Oh! the days were dark and dreary
While in slavery they were spent,
When the workers stood at their machines
Their bodies bathed in sweat.

Oh! we 'aint gonna slave no more
no more.
We 'aint going to slave, no more;—
What in hell will the bosses do
When we 'aint gonna slave no more?

They appealed to Calvin Coolidge
When the shops, to picket we went
And to protect their interests
The Army and Navy he sent.

Oh! we 'aint gonna slave no more
no more.
We 'aint going to slave any more;
They can shoot and club, and torture us
But we 'aint gonna slave no more.

We will join the Workers Party;
Strive with all our might.
We'll weld the chains of Labor
And abolish the parasites.

Oh! we 'aint gonna slave no more
no more.
We 'aint going to slave, no more;—
We Workers will take control of the earth
And we 'aint gonna slave no more.

SIGMAN MACHINE DENOUNCED ON CONVENTION FLOOR; MEMBERSHIP WILL REPUDIATE FAKE MAJORITY

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 16.—The Sigman machine's paper majority was strained almost to the breaking point today in the vote on that portion of the officers' report dealing with the expulsion policy in general and the New York situation in particular.

After a show of hands the tellers announced that the vote was 154 for and 112 against, but a roll call cut the machine vote to 140 and raised the left wing strength to 114 with 14 delegates abstaining and 6 absent. One member of Local 89, Antonini's local, voted against the machine while Antonini and the rest merely voted present.

The machine suffered badly in the debate and Sigman, in a two hour speech, was unable to repair the damage. Hyman, following Fineberg, who raised again the issue of good and bad Communists by accusing Zimmerman and others of not being "true disciples of Trotsky," delivered his best speech of the convention. The speeches of Fineberg and Sigman attacked the Communists and were evidently intended to split the non-Communist left wingers from the Communists. The ineffectiveness of this tactic can be seen by the vote.

Marks enlivened the proceedings by calling the attention of the chairman to the provocative activities of Levinson of the socialist New Leader among the delegates, whereupon Sigman announced that Marks had two comrades present "who should have been thrown out the first day." He referred to the correspondents of The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit who were at the press table, but not even among the right wingers was there any enthusiasm displayed for the suggestion of President Sigman.

Sigman's speech consisted of a hectic justification of his activities and his vehement and oft repeated protests that he wanted no credit for himself were convincing evidence

REACTION IN I. L. G. W. U, VIOLATES THE NEW YORK PEACE AGREEMENT

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 16.—The Sigman machine today violated the peace agreements concluded with the New York locals and carried a recommendation of the law committee which changes nothing. The committee on law, gave locals of 300 and less two delegates and locals of 1,000 three for the first 1,000 with one delegate for each additional thousand.

Local 2 with 10,000 members now has 12 delegates in this convention. Katolsky of Cleveland, speaking for the committee report, admitted that the New York locals had a majority of the membership. Hyman showed that the out of town locals were being used by the Sigman machine against their own interests and that the New York membership, which the machine ruled by an artificial majority, were the ones who supported financially all organizing work in cities outside of New York.

Hyman termed the machine's proposition an insult and warned the Sig-

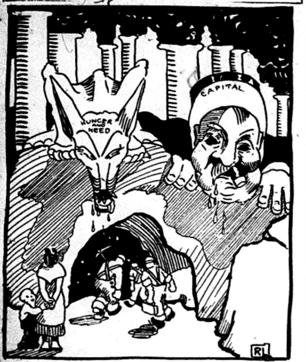
DAILY WORKER HELPS CAMBRIDGE SHOE WORKERS BETTER CONDITIONS

Workers all over the country are realizing more and more the value of The DAILY WORKER. In one issue of The DAILY WORKER, an expose of the rotten conditions existing in a Cambridge factory was printed. The workers organized a demonstration before the state board of labor and industries and the board was forced to "cover up" the violations of the shoe company.

In every city in the country, there are factories where workers have grievances and struggles with the bosses. There are important issues before the workers in the factories, such as lengthening of hours, speeding-up, cutting of wages. The DAILY WORKER staff is not able to get this news. The workers in those shops should write their stories to The DAILY WORKER, order a bundle in which the article appears and distribute it to the workers.

It is in this way that The DAILY WORKER can become a living force in the every-day struggles of the workers. Every worker a WORKER CORRESPONDENT!

The Dream of the Coal Barons



Drawn for The Daily Worker by R. Logan.

DEATH RATE MOUNTS HIGHER AND HIGHER IN NON-UNION MINES

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 16.—The death rate in the non-union mines mounts higher and higher. In the month 54 coal diggers laid down their lives. Nearly 25 per cent of the fatalities in West Virginia occurred in McDowell county where union miners are scarcer than hen's teeth.

According to the state department of mines one miner pays with his life for every 245,129 tons of coal mined.

The non-union coal operators violate as many of the safety laws as they want to with impugnity. The law is in their hands in most of the mining regions and all attemps at organization are squelched by these servants of "laws and order."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 16.—An appeal is being sent out not to forget that the union miners of West Virginia are still in tent colonies and that they need shoes, clothing and other necessaries of life.

The miners refuse to go to work in the mines under non-union conditions.

LANDIS AWARD RECRUITS SCABS FOR EDISON CO.

Pickets Threatened by Drunken Deputies

By A Worker Correspondent

The Edison Electric Appliance company, 52nd Ave. and 19th St., unable to get any of the workers in the main plant, located at 56th and Taylor Sts., to go to work in the struck plant are now using the Landis award office, 219 North Clark street, to recruit scabs. Yesterday morning the union pickets suceeded in pulling out one of the men, who had gone out with the sheet metal workers at the time the strike was issued and turned back a worker who was sent from the Landis award employment office.

Bosses Make United Front.

The Landis award committee, which represents the bosses in the building trades and maintains an employment office for the building trades bosses, is now using this office to send scabs to the Edison Electric Appliance company.

The worker, whom the pickets informed of the strike, had come from Council Bluffs, Iowa, where he has a wife and family. He as out of work and when he arrived in Chicago, he went to the Landis award office to get a job. They sent him to the struck plant, not telling him that the plant was on strike. When informed of the strike he refused to enter the plant.

Union Votes Assessment.

The Sheet Metal Workers' Union, Local No. 115, has voted a $1 assessment per member to be used to pay strike benefits. This local is conducting the strike and is determined to continue the fight until the strike is won.

Drunken Deputy Pesters Picket.

One of the deputy sheriffs or pluguglies, hired by the company to guard the scabs, attempted to intimidate one of the pickets and then threatened to arrest the picket and send him to the county jail. This deputy was so well lit up, that when he ate his dinner in one of the nearby restaurants the waitress kept her eye on him for fear that he might drown in the bowl of soup which he had on his table. He had great difficulty in keeping his head out of the bowl. These deputies are armed and stagger around the entrance trying to pick fights with the pickets.

LEVIN THROWS THREE WORKERS ONTO STREETS

Machine Attempts to Terrorize Militants

By A Worker Correspondent

Sam Levin, manager of the Chicago joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, removed three needle trades workers from their jobs because they distributed sample ballots to the workers in the shops on which it urged the workers to vote for the progressive and left-wing candidate, Nathan Green.

Joseph Kistelek employed at the Baucek Tailoring Co., Abe Lerner employed at the Myer & Co., and Ethel Fiegel employed at Baumer Tailoring Co. were are removed from their jobs at the instructions of Sam Levin, manager of the joint board.

Prefer No Charges.

The removal of these members of the union was done in a purely arbitrary manner. No charges were preferred against them. The only reason given by Levin was that they distributed sample ballots containing the program upon which Nathan Green, his opponent, is making his campaign.

Vote For Green!

The following is the text of the handbill, urging the workers to vote for the candidate of the progressive and left-wing group:

Vote For Nathan Green for Manager of the Chicago Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. He is endorsed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Group of the T. U. E. L. Mark your Ballot like this: N. GREEN [x] — S. LEVIN [ ]

Progressive Program.

A Vote For Nathan Green For Managed of The Joint Board Is a Vote For

1. Genuine Unemployment Insurance.
2. Organization of the Unorganized.
3. Freedom of Minority Expression.
4. Reinstatement of Members Expelled Because of Differences of Opinion.
5. Amalgamation.
6. Shop Delegate System.
7. International Trade Union Unity.
8. Labor Party.

Against.

1. Wage Cuts in the Form of Readjustments.
2. Expulsions.
3. Slugging.

When some of the members of the union appeared before Levin and asked for an explanation of their removal from the job, he declared that he does not object to the plugger announcing the candidacy of Nathan Green, but that he objects to the program printed on the other side. He declared that they will not be allowed to go back to work until he prefers charges against them to their respective local executive boards.

Violated No Rules.

The members, who were taken off their jobs, have not broken either the discipline or the rules of the union by distributing the handbills as the machine itself is distributing sample ballots marked for its candidate urging the members to vote for Sam Levin, who is responsible for the slugging and expulsion policy in Chicago.

LABOR PARTY SPEAKER IS SENTENCED TO SIX MONTHS' HARD LABOR

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The Belfast city commission sentenced Samuel Patterson, a member of the Belfast labor party, to six month's hard labor for making an alleged seditious speech at an open air labor party meeting.

A police constable quoted extracts from the speech containing the alleged seditious utterances, but Patterson strongly denied making these statements.

Three other witnesses, including the chairman of the meeting corroborated Patternson's evidence but the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

The government first attacked the Communists; now it is jailing labor party speakers.

SCOTLAND YARD HEAD ARRESTED FOR RAPING GIRL

Red-Baiter Gives False Name to Police

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Sir Basil Thomson head of Scotland Yard and advocate of the use of armoured tanks against striking workers, was arrested during the week-end in Hyde Park, charged with raping a young girl.

Sir Basil Thomson when arrested gave the name of Hugh Thomson. The woman's name was given as Felma de Lava. Both were taken to the Hyde Park police station and were bailed out. They failed to appear at the Marlboro street police station on Monday and the police are now seeking them.

Sir Basil Thomson was Great Britain's assistant commissioner of police from 1913 to 1919, and was a prominent figure at Scotland Yard during the world war when he was in charge of "rounding-up" spies in Great Britain. He was made director of intelligence in 1919 and continued to hold that office until 1921. He was created a knight in 1919 in recognition of his

REPUDIATE THE WAR DEBTS, URGES MARCEL CACHIN IN HIS SPEECH IN FRENCH CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 16.—In a speech before the French chamber of deputies, Marcel Cachin, the leader of the Communist fraction, voiced the opposition of the French workers to the payment of the war debts to the United States and the attempts of American imperialism to place its yoke on the French workers, when he declared, "We (the Communists) do not agree to deliver into the hands of American financiers part of our public fortune. We do not desire that to the exploitation of French capitalism, which is already hard enough, there be added the exploitation of a capitalism with whose methods we are familiar. . . . . . The working men and peasant classes of this country will never accept the additional sacrifices imposed during sixty two years in order to give American industrialists whose methods we know, those 150,000,000,000 (francs) asked of us today."

The following speech made by Cachin and loudly applauded in the chamber, is filled with biting sarcasm and bitter irony, when he exposes the aims and methods of American imperialism in France and other sections of the world:

"The question of interallied debts seems to me sufficiently vital for our country to be again discussed in this chamber. Our country is asked to make the sacrifice of 150,000,000,000 francs in favor of our two former allies, the United States and England. We are asked for two generations to make a sacrifice which is all the more to be apprehended because it is impossible to conceive of a worse financial situation than ours. Our allies' demands are absolutely incompatible with the situation of this country as well as with the most elementary morality. France paid with her blood, said M. Louis Marin. This formula must ever exercise full weight in the minds of all honest men.

"From the beginning of the war I watched closely the purchases France made in the United States. M. Denys Cochin, who was entrusted with them on behalf of the government, carried out his task with a conscientiousness all those who knew him must recognize. With what suppressed anger did he not analyze those veritably

BRITISH WAR LIARS BUSY AS WAR CLOUDS GATHER BECAUSE LEAGUE ASSAILS TURK CLAIM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Dec. 16.—Turkey tonight sent an official letter to the league of nations' council announcing its refusal to recognize the league's authority to award Mosul to Irak, under the British mandate. This letter creates a situation that may easily result in warfare between Great Britain and Turkey. Great Britain will insist upon the league of nations enforcing its decision, which means that all other countries that are members of the league will be expected to furnish their quota of fighting forces and equipment to throttle Turkey in the interest of Britain.

In spite of the fact that Turkey had announced that it would not abide by the decision of the league, which is known to be under the domination of Britain and which everyone knew in advance would grant the Mosul territory to that country, the league of nations deliberately provoked Turkey in the most vicious manner.

Turkey Is Mobilizing.

Turkey is already mobilizing her forces, according to information from Constantinople, and Britain is known to have been preparing for war with Turkey ever since the defeat three years ago of the Greek armies which were subsidized by Britain. Bases for naval supplies have ben established in the eastern part of the Mediterranean sea by Britain and at any moment open warfare may break out, starting a conflagration that may inflame all Europe and the world.

The Turkish delegation has flatly refused to attend the session of the league council after the awarding of the decision to Britain.

War Liars Busy.

In order to create a proper setting from which to launch atrocity stories one General Laidoner submitted the report of the Mosul investigation commission to the league of nations. The decision had already been prepared, but Laidoner had to be called in so that the reptile press of Britain could begin the publication of atrocity stories.

With war with Turkey looming Britain refrained from pressing France regarding the coveted mandate in Syria and the present Briand government of France leans towards Britain. It is questionable if the Briand government can stand long enuf to come to the aid of Britain in

PROTEST GROWS AGAINST ATTACK ON JULIO MELLA

Big Demonstration in Chicago Sunday Night

Calling upon the forward-looking workers of Chicago to demonstrate their solidarity with Julio A. Mella and the other victims of American imperialism in Cuba, Haiti, Central America and the Philippines, the All-America Anti-Imperialist League (U. S. section) has combined with International Labor Defene in arranging a monster anti-imperialist protest meeting, to be held Sunday evening, Dec. 20. The meeting will take place at Northwest Hall, corner North and Western avenues, and the doors will open at 7 o'clock.

William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, will be the principal speaker. There will also be Negro, Cuban, Filipino and Chinese speakers. Manuel Gomez, secretary of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, will be chairman.

Protest is Nation-Wide.

Both the All-America Anti-Imperialist League and International Labor Defense are mobilizing all their energies to draw the workers to this demonstration, which is only one of a number of similar demonstrations to be held in the principal cities of the United States within the next few days.

It is pointed out that quick action is necessary if the protest of the American workers is to be heard before it is too late to save the life of Mella, who is in a critical condition in the prison hospital, at Havana, where he is continuing his brave hunger strike. He was imprisoned with twelve others, because of his activities against the big American sugar combines.

Not only in the United States, but thruout Latin-America, the protest is swelling against the latest imperialist exploits of Wall Street and Washington. Meetings have already been held in Mexico and Colombia. Everywhere attention is called to the fact that the new brutalities in Cuba come close on the heels of campaigns of wholesale

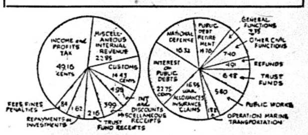
THE WAR BUDGET



EACH circle represents a dollar, divided so as to reveal the source of income and the proposed expenditures for the next year. The income and profits tax, most of which is borne by the workers, constitutes 49.16 per cent of the income; miscellaneous and internal revenue adds still greater burdens, amounting to an additional 22.85 per cent, making a total from this source of 72.01.

In the circle to the right we discover that propesed expenditures for wars, —past, present and future—reach the enormous total of 70.38 per cent of the total. This includes interest on public debts, public debt retirement, war allowance insurance claims and national defense.

Who says the United States is not a militaristic nation?

Compare this with the special dispatch of a Daily News correspondent who reveals the fact that in the budget of the Soviet Union 32 per cent of the total appropriation is to be spent for education.

The government's appropriation for education, according to the Moscow dispatch is $57,000,000, which is less than 40 per cent of the total amount spent on education, the remainder being paid by districts.

Every wide-awake worker should study the above designs and show it to his shopmates.

LOREITES FIGHT AGAINST LABOR PARTY DEMAND

Yellow Gang Joins Food Workers Reaction

By BERT MILLER.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 16—A resolution calling for the "Formation of a labor party pased upon the trade unions and including as affiliated sections all other political organizations of a working class nature, upon a local, state and national basis" was defeated by a combination of the followers of Ludwig Lore and the most reactionary forces in the Amalgamated Food Workers' national convention, held at the Labor Temple on Sunday, Dec. 12 and 13.

Three points of view manifested themselves on this question. First there were those who demanded that the union have nothing to do with political questions. Second, there were those who thot that the worker should be free to choose from among existing political parties of labor. Third came the view of the left wing which fought for a labor party to carry on the struggle of the worekrs on the political field. Delegate Hegener, of Bakers' Local 3, who thruout the convention had been actively allied with the Lore forces, led by Burkhardt and supported him on practically every proposal, supported the recomendation of the majority of the resolutions committee which called for the rejection of the labor party resolution. Hegener declared that the workers' political parties had already made trouble enuf and that there were plenty of them.

Delegate Gerber, of Bakers' Local No. 1 was of the same opinion. He thot that workers should be free to support any political party, but that the convention had been called for organization purposes only. Gerber is known in political circles as one of the leading supporters of Ludwig Lore.

Against this the left wing delegates conducted a valiant struggle for independent political action, thru the formation of a labor party. The fight was begun by Delegate Kalfides, representing the Hotel Workers' Union who pointed out the necessity of a political party of labor to "fight the battles of labor." He further declared that every economic struggle is a political struggle. He showed that while the bosses discouraged the workers from forming their own political party they organized themselves into powerful trusts and at the same time they did not fail to use the forces of the government to their own advantage, thru their control of political parties. In this way they use the courts, the police, injunctions, against the workers as in the great Broadway strike of the Rector company.

Kalfides also pointed out the dangers of recent legislation, finger printing and the repressive legislation against foreign-born workers as another reason for the immediate formation of a labor party. Delegates Christian and Obermeier of the Hotel Workers' Union, Foders and Rosenberger of Bakers' Local No. 164 ably supported the resolution for a labor party. General Secretary Burkhardt, who is a recognized leader of the Lore forces at the convention took no part in the discussion, even tho he was pressed to state his views.

For World Unity.

The convention also went on record for world trade union unity, but referred the matter of sending a trade union delegation to Soviet Russia to the various locals to pass upon. The resolution for world trade union unity was not accepted without a struggle, for the majority of the resolutions committee consisting of Lore sympathizers had voted it down by a majority vote of four to one. But upon the minority report of Delegate Kalfedis, demanding that the resolution be accepted, the ranks of the Lore delegates were broken by General Secretary Burkhardt, who spoke for the adoption of the resolution sensing the serious blot that would be placed upon the organization if the resolution were not accepted. The majority of the resolutions committee then withdrew their recomendation, and the proposal made by Delegate Kalfedis was carried.

Had Kalfedis not taken up this fight, there is no question but that the resolution would have been snowed under. A considerable part of the convention was devoted to a discussion of the Free Voice, official organ of the union. The paper was severely criticized for its failure to carry organization material and suggestions for building up the Amalgamated Food Workers and for developing a spirit of solidarity and activity in the organization. It was pointed out of the left wing delegates that the paper simply reprinted clippings from the capitalist press and from other workers' papers.

Thruout the convention the left wing forces were led by Delegate Obermeier, who stressed particularly the inficiency and the lack of activity on the part of the present administration in all phases of its work. Resolutions were carried for recognition of Soviet Russia, the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, and for the organization of the cafeteria and lunch room workers. Resolutions were also carried against the policy of class collaboration, and for the amalgamation of all the food workers' unions into one powerful union in the foor industry.

Recomendations for carrying the amalgamation resolutions into effect were deferred until a later session next Sunday.

Another struggle during the convention was around the question of the composition of the incoming executive board. Delegate Obermeier proposed that each section of the industry be represented by three delegates on a central executive committee of nine selected from the general board of 26. Under the former procedure of the Amalgamated Food Workers concerned itself little with the broad problems of the entire industry. In the discussion, it was brot out that the new form of committee would be of great advantage in organizing the unorganized, and handling the problems of all sections of the food industry. A resolution was passed taxing each member $1 a year, which money should be spent as follows: Sixty per cent for the purpose of organizing the unorganized, 40 per cent for educational purposes. The next session of the convention will be held on Sunday, Dec. 20.

Early Trial Demanded for Cook County Jail Heads Caught Grafting

An early trial for Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman, Wesley Westbrook, former warden of the Cook county jail, and five others indicted with them in proceedings growing out of unusual privileges accorded Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, millionaire bottleggers, while they were serving terms for prohibition law violations will be asked by the district attorney.

The indictments, returned by a federal grand jury yesterday, charge the seven with bribery, with acceptance of bribes, and with conspiracy to ob struct justice.

Millionaire's Son Fails to Surrender and Finish Jail Term

Chicago police received word that Ira D. Perry, Jr., whose father believed he would surrender himself, in order to terminate discussion aroused by his parole, had failed to meet officers sent to rearrest him. He had served only three years of a life term at Joliet for murder when he was paroled under a new law that permits freedom for prisoners any time after conviction and sentence.

COOLIDGE GETS JOLT IN FARM BUREAU POLL

New Head Is Not Real Farmer

By CARL HAESSLER.

CHICAGO—(FP)—All the way to Chicago from the white house in Washington, and all in vain is the bitter pill Calvin Coolidge is digesting as he scans the election results of the American Farm Bureau federation. He had come west to help keep the reactionary big-business leaders of America's largest farm organization in power and he had failed.

A new man, not dazzled by the Coolidge bunk about "higher" things in farming than money, not impressed by Cal's advice to go to the usurious bankers for help, not overawed by the presidential frown on government export corporations, now sits in the presiding chair of the American Farm Bureau federation in place of the railroad-packer-banker ally, C. E. Bradfute. The new man is Sam H. Thompson.

Tried to Save Old Guard.

Coolidge was summoned to Chicago, not to tell indifferent farmers that "agriculture in America has been raised to the rank of a profession," as he stated Dec. 7. His real mission was to save the old guard in the farm federation from defeat at the hands of enraged and awakened delegates who had come from 31 of 40 organized states for a new deal. It was thought that when Coolidge declared against a government export corporation to handle surplus farm products his stand would discredit the opposition that had crystallized around Sam Thompson and would float Bradfute back into power. But Thompson got 24 votes for president, Bradfute only 19 and 1 scattering. Coolidge proved unable to deliver.

The new board of directors immediately went on record for the very export corporation that Coolidge had personally branded as "dangerous and not helpful." Bradfute returned to his broad Ohio acres in the bitterness of defeat while Coolidge in the white house is nursing his severely stubbed agricultural toe and wondering what farm policy will keep the western states out of the insurgent column in the November elections.

New Head Is Banker.

Too much should not perhaps be expected of Thompson in his new job. Though born on a 40-acre farm near Quincy Ill. 62 years ago and father of 7 children all living on Illinois farms he is now a substantial banker, heading the Broadway bank of Quincy, and only nominally farms the 500 acres he holds in Adams county. He has been a member of the Illinois house of representatives at Springfield and has been active in farm federation work since 1915, heading the Illinois section, known as the Illinois Agricultural Assn. since 1923. This is the second biggest unit in the federation with 63,000 members, Iowa leading with 75,000.

Thompson has been close to Frank Lowden, former Illinois governor and Pullman son-in-law whose lieutenants sought to buy his way to the republican presidential nomination in 1920.

Both Lowden and Thompson opposed the $26,000,000 so-called co-operative Grain Marketing Co. of which Gray Silver was president and which went up in smoke when the farmers refused to bite and buy its stock. It was later admitted by the principal promoter of the corporation that is was an unloading scheme by grain gamblers like Armour and Rosenbaum who wanted to get rid of their elevators and equipment at a generous price if the McNary-Haugen grain export corporation bill passed congress as then seemed likely.

Workers Lose Many Fingers Thru Bosses' Criminal Negligence

ALBANY, N. Y.—(FP)—Workers in woodworking factories could be saved many fingers and serious injuries if their employers provided them with better workplaces, analysis of woodworking accidents by the New York state labor department shows. The study of accidents in 300 factories employing 15,805 of the 71,500 workers in the industry proves again that the percentage of permanent injuries is higher than in any other industry. Most of the accidents were amputations of fingers or hands by saws, especially the circular saw. "There is only one machine in industry on which more accidents occur than the circular saw and that is the power punch press," the labor department bulletin states.

GITLOW SPEAKS IN NEW YORK AT SUNDAY MEETING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Benjamin Gitlow, just released from Sing Sing prison, will make his first public appearance at the celebration of the 1905 revolution to be held on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 20 at 2 o'clock at the Central Opera House, 67th St. and 3rd Ave.

The meeting is held as a triple celebration. This month marks the 100th anniversary of the Decembrist uprising, which was the first attack upon feudal autocracy in Russia. It also marks the 20th anniversary of the Moscow armed revolt of December 1905, which was the high point of the 1905 revolution and which first brot the proletariat into the field as the definite revolutionary force destined to overthrow czarism. With this has been combined the welcome to Gitlow and the celebration of his release from prison as a response to the demands of the working class.

Benjamin Gitlow will address the meeting. Other speakers are Alexander Trachtenberg; Moissaye J. Olgin who participated in the 1905 revolution; William W. Weinstone; Chas Krumbein, Pascal Cosgrove and K. Radzi. Radzi will speak in Russian and Olgin in Jewish. An excellent musical program with appropriate revolutionary music has been prepared The numerous veterans of the 1905 revolution residing in New York will be considered guests of honor on the occasion of this celebration. A presidium of veterans of 1905 will be chosen to officiate.

Admission to both concert and celebration is 25c and all the workers in the city are urged to attend. The celebration is under the auspices of the Workers Party, District No. 2, and the Young Workers League. One half of the proceeds will go in the form of a donation to the International Labor Defense.

Wall Street's Bankers Have Sufficient Votes to Win World Court Fight

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the fight in the United States senate, to secure adherence of this nation to the world court, starts in Washington. International bankers, profit petted church dignitaries, peace-time pacifists, labor reactionaries of the Gompers school, the finance-controlled daily press and college presidents subsidized by Wall Street, or its connections, all join in the demand that this country resume its place as the "moral leader of the world." It is claimed that this was lost when Coolidge did not send his diplomats to assume open leadership of the anti-Soviet Locarno conference.

It is going to be an interesting fight; probably the most revealing in this session of congress. Senators will talk according to the note of the clinking dollar that sounds best to their ears.

• • • •

Secretary of State Kellogg stated the position of the Coolidge administration in New York City at the dinner of the Council on Foreign Relations at the Hotel Ritz-Carlton, reiterating that it is its fixed determination "to avoid participation in purely European political matters." This comical statement indicates the low intellectual level on which the White House hopes to press its fight, which will be opened in the senate by Swanson, a democrat. It has even caused the anti-court Hearst press to scream:

> "What do European countries want from the American people today? Higher ideals, cleaner politics, nobler aspirations, unselfish morals? No such things. As regards them all, Europe feels herself to be generations ahead of us.
> "There is no dividing line in Europe between politics and business. In Europe politics is business just now and business is politics. No such line as that drawn by Secretary Kellogg exists in Europe . . . .
> "What dictates Europe's politics in Persia? Business in oil. What dictates Europe's politics in Mosul? Business in oil. What dictates Europe's politics in China? Business, coal, iron and markets. What dictates Europe's politics in the Pacific? Business—commerce—trade—markets."

• • • •

This is a rather naive confession coming even from an "expert" on the financial pages of the Hearst press. It is not sufficient to say there is no dividing line between business and politics in Europe. That applies to the whole capitalist world, including the United States. The international bankers want this country in the world court and in the league of nations as a business proposition. When the league hands over the Mosul oil fields to the British, that creates envy in the profit heart of the Standard Oil company. The world court said the league had the right to make this decision. And if it has, that is an organization worth while for American dollars to control.

• • • •

Government is but the instrument of business. It is capitalism's dictatorship for the suppression of the working class at home, and the oppression of people's abroad under the naked fist of dollar diplomacy. The political policies of the government are the business policies of great greed. It is easy to understand why the democratic senator, Swanson, opens the world court fight, when it is remembered that John "Wallstreet" Davis, Morgan's personal lawyer, was the democratic candidate for president last year. It was under the democratic president, Grover Cleveland, that the United States seized Hawaii, and began developing its imperialist policies in the Pacific. And it was the republican president, McKinley, who continued those policies in launching the war against Spain.

• • • •

Advance estimates say that 15 senators in both the old parties will oppose entrance to the world court. All the rest, both democrats and republicans, a sufficient number, are in favor. That is sufficient testimony to show that finance capital controls both the big political parties, and dictates its policies to the United States government, of which congress is the oratorical wing.

JAPANESE LABOR GETS LOW WAGES FOR LONG HOURS

If you knew that thousands of workers in your trade were being exploited 11 hours a day for wages averaging less than $6 a month and that this was leaving you only partly employed, wouldn't you do something about it? If you found that these workers were organizing to free themselves from this slavery wouldn't you make common cause with them?

That's how the case for world trade union unity presents itself to British trade unions. Figures recently issued by the Japan Cotton Spinners Assn. show good ground for such action. They show the huge expansion of the Japanise textile industry and the rapid gains of Japan in the world cotton cloth market, all based on wages that would hardly feed a horse here.

Average Japanese wages on a yearly basis appear so low when translated into American money that they might easily be mistaken for the monthly wages of an unskilled laborer or the weekly wages of a skilled tradesman in this country. The figures for male and female employes in the spining mills are:

Japanese Cottonmills

Year's pay	Male	Female
1914	$24.55	$15.95
1915	24.75	16.10
1916	25.00	16.70
1917	27.25	18.55
1918	34.30	23.80
1919	55.80	43.50
1920	78.35	55.98
1921	73.15	55.67
1922	77.20	62.15
1923	74.15	55.90
1924	76.20	60.30

Women workers outnumber the men 3 to 1 in the spinning mills and 5 to 1 in the making of cloth so that the average wage in the Japanese cotton industry is less than $65 a year. These workers keep Japanese textile machinery working 22 hours a day in two 11-hour shifts.

Cotton cloth from Japan goes to China, India, the Dutch Indies, Australia, the Philippines and in considerable quantities even to the United States. The value of these exports increased from $3,437,474 in 1903 to $21,701,705 in 1914 and to over $163,000,000 in 1924. Taking Alexandria, Egypt, as a typical foreign market we find Japanese goods offered at $5.90 per piece in competition with the product of American mills at $7.65.

REED ASSAILS ITALIAN DEBT CANCELLATION

Wall Street Bankers Denounced

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Under a broadside attack from western republicans and democrats, the administration lost its first skirmish in the senate this afternoon to obtain ratification of $3,000,000,000 worth of war debt settlements.

Led by Senator James A. Reed, (D.) of Mo., both republican and democrats forced administration leaders to abandon an attempt to get the agreements before the senate for immediate consideration.

In a furious debate, which lasted over an hour, a dozen senators denounced the Italian agreement as certain to cost the American people billions of dollars in taxation.

Morgan Assailed.

"The House of Morgan has sought to influence the settlements of these debts," Reed of Mo., charged. "The international bankers have steadily preached a doctrine of cancellation and I for one, will do my best here to defeat them."

"I want to call senate's attention," said Senator Johnson, "that as soon as a settlement was made of the national debt, a loan was made to Italy by Morgan at 7 per cent interest while the interest paid by Italy to the people of the United States is only one twenty-eighth of that given to the House of Morgan."

Slams Mussolini.

"The difference is that we had our money in and Morgan had his money in his pocket," retorted Reed, of Pa. "If our government was going to lend Italy money now, I would ask for even a higher rate of interest and I might not want to take a chance no matter what the rate of interest was." This is a direct slap at the fascist bandit.

When Smoot asked the senate for its consent to an immediate consideration of the settlement, there was a flurry of objections.

Reed, of Mo., protested against hasty consideration of any of the settlements.

"These settlements involve billions of dollars and those billions of dollars will come out of the pockets of the American taxpayers or out of the pockets of the people of foreign countries who made a contract to pay them. I for one, will not give my consent to a hurry-scurry haphazard handling of these settlements.

Senator Johnson and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leaders, also objected.

GERMAN TRADE UNIONS SUFFER HEAVY LOSSES

Still 3,000,000 Less Than in 1922

How the skyrocketing of German finance produced by the attempt to enforce the Versailles treaty has reacted on the German trade unions is shown by 1924 membership statistics in the year book of the General Federation of German Trade Unions. A continuous and rapid decrease in membership reduced the total from 7,905,904 at the end of 1922 to 3,975,002 at the end of 1924.

The rapid decline began in the last quarter of 1923 after the currency crisis had put down production, causing wide unemployment. In that quarter trade union membership fell off by 1,297,932. Throughout 1924 it continued to fall, the loss in that year totaling 1,766,125 members. But in spite of these heavy losses amounting to 3,330,902 members, the federation membership at the end of 1924 was nearly 2,000,000 ahead of 1913.

The average annual membership in 1924 was 4,564,163 compared with 2,573,718 in 1913. For 16 of the larger organizations composing the general federation the membership figures were:

German Unions	1913	1924
Agricultural workers	19,077	147,650
Building trades	343,152	362,481
Carpenters	62,069	87,049
Clothing workers	53,874	99,261
Factory workers	211,718	394,394
Food industry	51,537	65,981
Metal workers	560,644	885,063
Mine workers	104,113	229,956
Printers	68,682	69,370
Railroad men	—	302,689
Shoeworkers	44,902	91,756
State and municipal workers	52,996	187,205
Textile workers	141,484	425,510
Tobacco workers	34,191	73,066
Transport workers	235,663	310,948
Woodworkers	199,199	323,175

The other organizations composing the general federation are the bakers and confectioners, barbers, bookbinders, butchers, chimney sweeps, chorus singers, coopers, coppersmiths, engineers, firemen, gardeners, glass-workers, hatters, hotel and restaurant employes, leather workers, lithographers, moving picture employes, musicians, painters, pottery workers, porters, printing trades helpers, roofers, salaried employes and saddlers.

With the end of 1924 the downward movement in membership stopped and the first quarter of 1925 showed an increase of 210,000 over the number enrolled in December, 1924. The General Federation is the most important factor in German trade unionism but there are also the so-called Christian trade unions and the Hirsch-Dunker (company) unions with combined membership of about a million.

DRIVE FOR RECOGNITION OF SOVIET UNION GROWS!

THE upper photo shows the city of Moscow as it is today. In the lower left-hand corner is a picture of a number of Russian peasants and workers looking at a tractor that has arrived from the United States. Russia needs many more tractors and as soon as the Soviet Union is recognized many more tractors will be bought in the U. S. with opening of full commercial relations. In the lower right-hand corner is a picture of the unofficial Soviet Union representative, Boris Skvirsky, who is in Washington, D. D. One of the big issues before the coming sessions of congress will be the recognition of the Soviet Union. Powerful business combines eager to do business with the Soviet Union are urging that trade relations be opened immediately so that they can get some of the contracts for agricultural and industrial machinery, which are now going to those nations that have recognized the Soviets.

BROOKHART WILL KNOW FATE BY CLOSE OF WEEK

Final Arguments on Contest Saturday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The contest between Senator Smith Brookhart, insurgent republican, and Daniel F. Steck, democrat, for the junior senatorial seat from Iowa, will be closed Saturday, it was announced today. Both sides will complete their cases before the senate elections' committee with oral arguments Friday and Saturday.

The committee then will determine the legality of contested votes. If it decides that some 4,000 Brookhart votes, now contested by Steck, were legally cast, the present senator will be seated for a full six-year term.

Mangus Has Contest.

A scheduled meeting of the senate elections sub-committee to hear evidence filed in the contest of former Senator Mangus Johnson, of Minnesota, against the seating of Senator Schall, of Minnesota, was postponed today because of the absence of Johnson's attorneys.

The sub-committee, comprising Senators Deneen, of Illinois, Goff, of West Virginia, and Neely, of West Virginia, will convene it was said, whenever the attorneys arrive. Johnson will be represented by Donald Hughes and George Edgerton, of St. Paul, while E. Smith, and John Rees will appear for Schall.

Urges Repudiation of War Debts

usurious contracts which America, profiting by our distress, imposed upon us.

"Certainly there were other usurers at home exercising their cupidity in those same contracts. But that is only part of the question. On supplies bought in America the French government lost nearly 8,000,000,000. Before approaching the taxpayer it is the government's duty to turn toward those who dilapidated those supplies and make those disgorge who profited by that dilapidation.

Military Expenditures Increase.

"The American newspapers repeat that their country is burdened with taxes, while the French pay insufficiently. We are told that we extravagantly maintain an army of 800,000 men, the upkeep of two simultaneous wars. Agreed. But I would like to ask America whether she herself is taking the road toward disarmament which with supreme hypocrisy she would force upon the whole universe. The army and navy budgets absorbed 17,000,000,000 francs this year in the United States. The Americans talk of disarmament while they double their land forces. Their navy is estimated at 3,000,000,000 francs, while so cleverly worded was the Washington convention that it allows them to build light cruisers and submarines. They have 13,000 military aviators and periodically mobilize the country militarily and industrially. This year on one of those days of military preparation, 16,000,000 men were called up. I am glad the French government is being invited to disarm—but I should like the invitation to come from a country giving an example of disarmament, not a contrary one.

"Does the United States really require the 150,000,000,000 francs they are asking us to pay? Every one knows they are almost suffocating beneath the weight of gold as if paralyzed by their own immense fortune. The country produces 60 per cent of the cotton of the whole world and manufactured in 1923 43,000,000 tons of steel, which represents a profit of four or five billions. It produced 31,000,000 tons of pig iron. 600,000,000 tons of coal and three-fifths of the copper of the world. Its shipping tonnage has trebled since 1914. Its railroads represent a capital of 575,000,000,000. Its electrical industry is queen of the electrical industries of the world; in 1923 it sold 7,000,000,000 worth of material.

U. S. Has Gold Monopoly.

"Since the war the United States has absorbed 45 per cent of the world's gold. Her income equals two and a half times the incomes of England, France, Germany and Japan added together. That is American distress.

"In order to maintain the gold standard of the pound the city of London for the first time has been forced to bow down before the magnates of Wall Street. When one speaks with the tone you are aware of to a country which is as financially worn out as ours, it is the duty of our government to protest with energy and compare our infinite distress with the magnificent prosperity of the interlocutor.

Accomplishing Ambition.

"The United States is now accomplishing the ambition of her financiers fifty years back—'We, the world's granary, will become its workshop, but shall only be really victorious when we become its banker.' The United States has become our banker. With the Dawes plan she has enslaved Germany. We ourselves are marching with big strides toward financial dependency to American capital. A typical example is Belgium, which shows its government and parliament are at the mercy of American financiers.

"Mention has been made of the success of Italy, who obtained favorable conditions for her debt and who increased the value of the lire. But we would like to know whether no secret conventions were signed, whether Italy is still mistress of her industrial and economic forces. Poland recently obtained a small loan of 35,000,000 but the contract stipulates that if within agreed periods Poland has not executed all its clauses her creditor will lay hands on her railroads and exploit them.

Overture Being Mode.

"To Norway the same language was spoken in regard to her telephone. As for France, Morgan's bank helped her in 1924, but when the United States again aids us, will she not try to obtain certain guarantees? Will not we, too, feel the yoke of Wall Street? Already a certain section of the press tells us to utilize the state monopolies and advises the sale of tobacco to a company which will give you billions.

"We (the Communists) do not agree to deliver into the hands of American financiers part of our public fortune. We do not desire that to the exploitation of French capitalism, which is already hard enough, there be added the exploitation of a capitalism with whose methods we are familiar. One exploitation more than suffices us.

Never Accept Additional Burden.

"We do not desire to see part of our riches fall into the hands of foreign capitalists. The working and peasant classes of this country will never accept the additional sacrifices imposed during sixty-two years in order to give American industrialists, whose methods we know, those 150,000,000,000 asked of us today."

'PROGS' WANT TO GO BACK TO OLD TRUST BUSTING

Long for Days That Are Gone Forever

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.— A congressional inquiry to determine whether there has been a complete collapse of the government's prosecutions under the anti-trust laws is being considered by senate progressives, it was learned today.

The department of justice, it was disclosed officially, has lost nearly every anti-trust action instituted in the federal courts since July 1, 1924, excepting those in which pleas of guilty or the so-called "consent decrees" have been entered. Most of them have been removed from court dockets since the advent of John G. Sargent as attorney general.

Want Trust "Busting".

The record of the last year and a half is in marked contrast to the "trust busting" days of the Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson administrations, when such great combinations as the Standard Oil, Eastman Kodak, Dupont's, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, National Cash Register and others came under attack.

The senate progressives contend the laws are still the same and the combinations are greater than ever, and they are planning to inquire why there are no prosecutions.

Since July, 1924, twelve major anti-trust actions have been dismissed or decided adversely to the government. Three consent decrees were entered. In four other cases a number of defendants entered pleas of guilty and were assessed fines.

New York Italians Protest Freeing of Matteotti Murderers

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(FP)—Italian workers overflowed a mass meeting called in a big east side hall to protest the freeing of the men who murdered Giacomo Matteotti, Italian socialist deputy. The New York local, North American Anti-Fascist Alliance, sponsored the meeting. All stood a moment in silent tribute to the slain deputy and then vigorously boooed all reference to Mussolini and proposals that this dictator be made "Roman emperor."

HOUSE AND SENATE QUARREL OVER WHO SHALL RATIFY DEBTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. — The agreements for funding $3,000,000,000 of America's wartime foreign debts have aroused a keen controversy in congress, it was learned today, with administration leaders of house and senate clashing over the question as to which branch has the legal right to ratify the settlements first.

The controversy may delay final ratification of the settlements and result in one of the most unusual clashes over legislative prerogatives that has ever cropped up in the history of the congress. The issue has settled upon the right of the senate to ratify the settlements before the house has taken that action.

House leaders, democrats joining alike with the republicans, contended the bills were revenue measures and that under the house's constitutional powers, the bills must "originate" in the lower branch of congress. Senatorial leaders deny the bills are revenue measures and that therefore, the upper branch has the right to act upon them whenever it desires.

MACHINE MINING TO BREAK UNON IS BOSSES' PLAN

Few Men at High Pay; Rest Can Starve

Negotiations in progress in a joint commission composed of representatives of the Illinois mine workers and the operators of the state may soon result in considerable changes in the lives of Illinois coaldiggers. According to a report on the Illinois mining institute by the Coal Age, pressure is being exerted to hasten action by the commission in order that rapid introduction of machine loading may meet nonunion competition.

"Mechanization of coal mines is at our door", said J. A. Garcia, of the institute executive board. "We are confronted with competition from other states whose favorable running rates are enabling them to take our markets. This has put our industry in Illinois in a most deplorable state and in my judgment the crisis can be met only by the mechanization of our mines."

Other speakers, cited by the Coal Age, asserted that because a reduction in wage rates could not be expected, "a complete new order of producing coal must be made if the state is to maintain itself. Many changes will be noted in the next 5 years, especially in the cleaning of mechanically loaded coal."

"Machine loading", according to the Coal Age, "reduces the number of men in a mine and cuts down by 60 per cent the number of working places required under hand loading. Concentration of working force such as this reduces the length of entry so be kept up, and the investment for rails, wire and supplies. It was estimated that in a period of 3 years a mine can be fully equipped with machine loaders bought with the earnings of those first installed."

This description brings out the revolutionary change in the coaldiggers' position the loading machines will produce. It is similar to that produced in the lives of independent craftsmen by power machinery and the factory system in the 19th century. It takes away the freedom enjoyed by the craftsman working in his cottage or the miner working alone with his buddy in his underground room or place. It substitutes the discipline of the factory with its constant supervision by the boss and its regular hours of work. The machine must turn out its quota of production every day to produce the return on the investment. The freedom of the miners will be subject to this investment demand of the machine.

Another important feature of the change is that most of the saving through machine loading must be a saving in wages. This will not necessarily mean reduction in the wages of the individual loaders, which may be protected by the agreement as to the machine scale, but reduction in the number of miners employed. It will reduce the total wages paid by a given mine even if the machine loader is not cut, though the companies would like to slash his individual pay as well.

A sub a day will help to drive capital away.

ENGLAND HAS SIX BRANDS OF FASCISM

Government Aids the Unofficial Scabs

LONDON—(FP)—England has six main strike-breaking organizations preparing for next spring, according to the British Labor research department. They are not commercial scab-herding agencies after the American model (a model which has been imitated in France, as revelations at the recent trial of the Douarnenez gunmen have shown), but socalled patriotic organizations enrolling volunteer scabs. They resemble the German Technical aid with a large admixture of Italian fascism, and are recruited chiefly from the middle-class. One of the six organizations listed is formed directly by the government—the Army Supplementary Reserve (transportation section)—and the government has made it clear that it will collaborate with the unofficial organizations in a big strike.

The five unofficial organizations are the O. M. S. (Organization for the Maintenance of Supplies), National Citizens union, British Empire union, British Fascists and the national guard. As an example of the government's strikebreaking tactics a reminder is given of how, during the railway and coal strikes of 1919-21, it ordered that unemployment doles were not payable to anyone who refused to do transport work, and how it asked local authorities to form citizen guards.

The professional scab is quite a familiar specimen in America, just as the middle-class "patriotic" or fascist scab has long been familiar to European labor, but that the former exists also in Europe has come as a surprise to many people. In the recent trial in France of strike-breakers and stool pigeons for violence during the strike of sardine packers at Douarnenez last winter, it was revealed that all three accused were professional scabs employed by an agency with headquarters in Paris, which exists by grants from employer associations. It had even received a secret grant of 25,000 francs from the city of Paris at the instigation of ex-president Millerand, it was revealed. One of the accused boasted of having broken 30 strikes.

Fascism is the historic example of the development of scabbing into a social creed. The women's section of the British fascisti has recently threatened disciplinary action against its members if they do not "state plainly exactly what duties they are prepared to perform with the British Fascists," in the event of "serious industrial trouble in the spring." Such duties include automobile drivers, nurses, cooks, waitresses, stenographers and messengers.

Women fascists unable to perform these jobs are told they can render service by offering hospitality to fellow fascists, or "by feeding a limited number of fascists (scabs) should the need arise."

Senate Fight Looms Over Move to Deny Seat to Gerald Nye

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—A sharp fight over question of seating Senator-designate Gerard P. Nye, republican of North Dakota, was expected in the senate today when the report on the senate election committee, denying him a seat, reaches the floor for debate. Administration leaders predicted the report, adopted by a vote of 9 to 2, would be accepted finally by the senate, because both democrats and republicans united in its adoption.

PHILADELPHIA ON RECORD FOR PARTY UNITY

Factional Efforts Are Decisively Rebuked

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16.—The Philadelphia organization, which was a hotbed of factionalism during the pre-convention period, has swung into line for unification of the party and the throwing of the party organization into mass work. This decision was registered at a District Executive Committee meeting held on Monday and a membership meeting held on Tuesday.

The District Executive Committee, after a six-hour debate on the unity resolution of the Central Eecutive Committee voted nine to seven for the resolution.

The membership meeting, held on Tuesday night, voted 134 for the unity resolution and 74 against, with seventeen abstaining from voting.

The small opposition in the party which is endeavoring to continue a factional struggle made every effort to mobilize its forces against the unity resolution in Philadelphia. False rumors in regard to the party situation and underground documents were widely circulated in an effort to give the membership a wrong impression of the situation.

Try to Befog Issue.

These efforts even went so far as to endeavor to discredit the greatest recent achievement of the party in securing the unanimous support of the Finnish section convention for the reorganization of the party, unification and mass work. After the Finnish convention discussed the party situation and reorganization, which was a big issue among the Finnish comrades, for three days, they with the representatives of Central Executive Committee arrived at an unanimous decision for the party and against all elements which were trying to draw the Finnish workers out of the party, the opposition to party unity in Philadelphia raised the issue that this great victory for the party was secured thru terrorism or mechanical means. These factional rumors are circulated at a time when the press of the Finnish section is filled with resolution and letters from the branches and members expressing their joy at the results of the Finnish section convention and the whole leadership of the Finnish section is working to draw all the members of that section into the party as members of shop nuclei and street nuclei.

The Philadelphia membership repudiated these efforts to stir new factional struggle in the party and took their stand for the liquidation of the struggle within the party and for throwing the whole party energy into the work among the masses.

services at Scotland Yard and his frame-ups of active leaders in the British trade union movement.

Sir Basil was born in 1861, and is the son of the late archbishop of York. He was educated at Eton and Oxford. He has served as governor of Dartmoor prison and also of Wormwood Scrubs.

It is a curious coincidence that English society was shocked some two years ago when Sir Almeric Fitzroy, an official of the privy council, was arrested in Hyde Park, also charged with an offense against a woman. He was later acquitted.

The conditions which prevail in Hyde Park at night have long been a matter of protest in some London newspapers, which state that it is not safe for decent people to enter the park after nightfall. The attitude of the police in Hyde Park has several times been bitterly criticized by the newspapers.

PAUL DOUMER IS BRIAND'S NEW FINANCE HEAD

Loucheur Resigns to Save Cabinet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 16.—Senator Paul Doumer tonight accepted the invitation of Premier Briand to become finance minister, replacing Louis Loucheur who was forced to resign yesterday, because of his inability to draft a financial program suitable to the chamber of deputies.

Loucheur and the big capitalists as well as the Briand cabinet are known to be in a conspiracy to ruin the franc in order to wipe out the internal debt so that outside capital will invest in the country's industries. On the other hand the capital levy proposed by the Herriot group will work to the advantage of the big capitalists by imposing such tax burdens upon the small fry that they will be ruined.

Fascist Threat.

Both groups try to force the workers to shoulder the tax burden, with the result that discontent is increasing at a rate that alarms the capitalists and not a few of the nationalist papers are openly speaking of a fascist dictatorship. As against this the Communists are prepared to challenge the capitalist government itself and try to arouse the workers to a struggle for its destruction and the establishment of a workers' government in its place.

manites that they had gone far enough and would be allowed to travel no further in the direction of minority dictatorship. Earlier in the session another blow at the majority of the membership was struck by the machine when it increased the per capita tax from 10 to 15 cents.

Dubinsky Official Terrorist.

The resolution calling for general elections of business agents was also defeated. The role of Dubinsky as the official terrorist for Sigman was disclosed during the debate and while Dubinsky was in the chair. Delegate Horwit stated to the convention that Dubinsky had told her that unless she voted for the expulsions her local would get no aid from the international.

It is by such methods that the out of town locals are whipped into line by the machine. They must either line up or be broken up.

The conventions will probably adjourn sine die tonight unless the debate on the referendum election of officers is prolonged.

SIGMAN MACHINE DENOUNCED ON MEETING FLOOR

Members Will Reject Fake "Majority"

that he was trying to play upon the sympathies of the delegates; added to this was a vituperative onslaught on Hyman and a denunciation of the Communists and their official organ. He told of his early affiliation with the I. W. W. and apologized for it by implying that he was an ignorant immigrant boy at the time.

Blames Membership.

He blamed the membership for the bad conditions in the industry and proved that he reads The DAILY WORKER and Freiheit by quoting liberally from their editorials. Borocovich opened the debate for the left wing following Shelley, an "impartial" delegate whose request for the floor was greeted by a storm of laughter aroused by a delegate quoting from Zimmerman's earlier speech in which he said that impartial people were found only in the cemetery. Borocovich quoted from Justice and proved that while the left wing joint board was fighting to save the union in New York after election by the largest majorities ever polled, Yanofsky as editor and spokesman of the machine, had carried on an unscrupulous campaign against the rank and file officials.

Expose Machine.

Hyman's speech was the most complete exposure of the crooked practices of the machine in New York that had been heard at the convention. None of his statements were denied nor was Sigman able to answer a single one of his arguments or accusations when he closed debate. Fineberg had mentioned an article dealing with Perlstein in the Freiheit and Hyman stated that if there was one thing in the Freiheit in which he had been in full accord it was this particular article. He told how the machine had planned to have the strike committee raise the dues, disband and leave the membership unable to lodge a complaint against any permanent body. He told how Perlstein had been both for and against a raise in dues in order to confuse and divide the membership and how the left wing had found the unions bankrupt when it came into power. He stated and proved that the machine had attached the funds of the locals and tied them up so that they could not even pay tuberculosis benefits as they fell due. He cited the case of the worker who is dying a slow and painful death as a result of injuries received from machine gangsters and the case of the six gunmen hired by the Sigman machine who beat up the workers in the Solomon shop.

Flays Sigman.

Hyman sketched with bold strokes the background of corruption, gangsterism and irresponsibilities which forced the revolt of the New York membership and told the Sigmanites that it would do them little good to raise the Communist bugaboo. "You claim a victory in this convention," he said, "and that men like Yanofsky is responsible for your victory. Give us more Yanofskys. You delegates who are afraid to face your membership come to New York when I give my report on this convention and see what they think of your victory. You have slandered us until you have discredited yourselves—when you slandered us our people say 'Well, they must be honest men.'"

Many admissions made by Sigman in his effort to overcome the effects of Hyman's speech are most interesting. Among them were the approving statements that "most of our membership voted for Governor Smith," that it was the other officers who employed gangsters, that he had no objection to Communist opinions but only to their actions, that is their fight against union reactionaries, his ridicule of the membership aroused by the receipt of a telegram demanding his resignation from a mass meeting of garment workers in New York last night called to discuss the use of police in the convention Saturday.

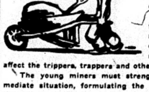
Following the close vote on the New York situation the convention endorsed the proposition of the left wing that no raises in dues or assessments be made without the consent of the membership, approved the merger of three New York locals and the peace agreement which reinstated the expelled left wingers. The convention rose for one second in memory of Gompers and after arranging for the nomination of officers at two o'clock Wednesday adjourned.

The minority report on the officers' report read by Zimmerman in the name of the progressive bloc this morning has created a sensation among the delegates to whom mimeographed copies were distributed. It is a complete indictment of the Sigman machine and a history of the recent struggles together with the left wing program and argument for it. The minority statement put the machine on the defensive and instead of the aggressive attack on the left wing which it had intended to make it found itself forced to make some sort of an effort, but an unsuccessful one, to refute the detailed charges bulwarked by facts and figures in the minority report.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

START THE CAMPAIGN FOR THE YOUNG MINERS' CONFERENCE



THE conditions of the young miners in eastern Ohio and vicinity, who form a strong section of the miners' movement, are such that it is necessary for the young miners to meet and discuss the situation and formulate immediate demands. Many of these young workers are employed at jobs which require speed and dexterity. The bosses take advantage of the young miners and have introduced a speed-up system which requires the young miners to haul from a greater number of miners, with no other consideration.

The desire on the part of the bosses to increase their profits leads them to neglect the necessary maintainance work of the mine, with a consequent large number of accidents, many of which affect the trippers, trappers and other young workers around the mine.

The young miners must strengthen themselves and discuss their immediate situation, formulating the necessary immediate demands to meet the situation. For this purpose a conference of young miners is being called for the end of February. This must receive the support of all the young miners of the district.

Workers Write About the Workers' Life

DULUTH WASHING MACHINE MAKERS HAVE NO UNION

Many Other Workers in City Are Unorganized

By A Worker Correspondent

DULUTH, Minn, Dec 16.—The conditions of the Duluth workers may be judged from the following information gleaned by the inquiring worker correspondent:

A young worker in the Hirshey Co., a subsidiary of Marshall-Wells, one of the largest employers of labor in the city. This branch makes washing machines. There are about 85 men employed. About one-half of the workers are from 17 to 25 years of age. The rest average up to 60. Piece work prevails. Work begins at 7:30 a. m., and 12:30 after lunch. They work until five and a half day on Saturday. The workers receive about $3.00 a day. There is no union, damned hard work and frequent accidents.

A hotel worker related the following: There are 12 girls working in the hotel she works in. They receive $50 per month and room. Have to board themselves. All rooms are inside and the only air inlet is thru a transom. Only one light is allowed to a room. Each girl has about 20 rooms to look after. Sometimes they work overtime and have to do it gratis. Most of the girls are recruited from small towns and the outlying country. It never dawns on them to better their conditions collectively.

The local fakers are too busy throwing bouquets at William Green and the unlamented Gompers to do any organizing. Some of them are on the chamber of commerce as well as the trades assembly. Until a strong left wing develops here the outlook isn't very promising.

Contractors' Greed Responsible for Death of Hammond Worker

By HENRY VICTOR.
Worker Correspondent, Student Chicago Class.

HAMMOND, Ind., Dec. 16. — The greediness of the bosses in their desire to gain the maximum of profits has cost the life of John Hojek, a laborer of Hammond, Indiana.

A predominance of cheap concrete used in the construction of the piers which were to support a building caused the accident at 14 Plummer Ave., Hammond, Ind. The foundation slipped pinning John Hojek against an adjoining house and crushing him to death.

Contractors Wiens and Rosenwinkle—who, in their chase after large profits have wholly ignored the safety of the laborers by substituting a cheap grade of concrete for the necessary grade, may be pointed out as those directly responsible for the death of the victim.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EDUCATION NOT FREE IN GIRARD

Must Pay $5 and $8 Per Month for Each Child

By W. J. WHITE.
(Worker Correspondent)

GIRARD, O., Dec. 16.—We are supposed to be having free public schools in Ohio but in this town we have the following facing the workers. Sending a child to school after it passes the 7th grade will cost parents $8.00 per month while the education of children from the first grades up will cost parents $5.00 per month for each child. The above was announced at a meeting of teachers and parents. Some of the parents left the meeting in a rather strange frame of mind.

Portables for Poor Children.

It is known to all that recently we built a $300,000 high school for the purpose of boosting real estate. Elementary schools are not being built and children of the workers are confined in portable fire traps but, we sport a $300,000 high school to boost real estate plots. And to pay for this the worker will have to dig deep in his jeans.

At the same meeting the following was announced to the parents: Out of 774 pupils examined physically, 237 had bad teeth, 134 had bad eyes: 153 have to have their tonsils removed; 2 were ordered taken out of school because they were tubercular; 18 were treated at the school clinic because parents were too poor.

Babbits on School Board.

The school board has only one member who believes in evolution and fights the ku kluxers, Mr. Moore, a dentist. The fundamentalists, the old fossils and the Babbits have easy sailing and have the backing of the ku klux. Old principal Mr. Cash, had the knees in his pants reinforced so that he could pray long and loud to the lord. Bible study is obligatory in the public schools.

AMERICAN GIRL TELLS OF RUSSIA AS SHE FINDS IT

Impressed with Workers' Well Being and Comfort

By GUSSIE KRUSE,
An American Worker Correspondent in the Soviet Union.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—(By Mail.)—Since I came here, I am working in the English press section of the Communist International. The conditions under which we work here are very pleasant. The hours are from ten till four thirty, with time allowed at noon when we go downstairs to the club rooms for a glass of tea and a sandwich or piece of cake. Days before holidays we go home at four o'clock instead of four thirty. All in all I find things very pleasant.

How Russia Looks Today.

Conditions in Russia have improved very much. There are many new buildings now and many more being repaired. The streets are clean as are the trains, street cars, etc. In fact, conditions have improved so wonderfully that there is now a splendid motor bus service on many of the principal streets of Moscow. We rode from Riga to Moscow in a third-class compartment and it was just as clean as it could be. Some comrades told me that when they came three years ago the third-class compartments were terrible to ride in as the peasants threw everything on the floor. All this has been stopped and a porter comes into the train twice a day and sweeps out anything that might have been dropped accidentally.

Meetings Are Inspiring.

Since Bill and I are here we have been invited to attend meetings and social affairs at several of the small clubs. I only wish that each one of you could attend one of these affairs—the way they are organized would be a credit to any organization the world over. First they have speakers representing trade unions, youth organizations, peasants, etc., which lasts about two hours. Then they have a ten or fifteen minute recess and then a concert. Most every club has its own band and then they generally have a short play a recitation or two, some singing and now they are starting to give revolutionary dance interpretations.

The clubs of the workers here are a delight to visit. Each one has its Lenin corner, which is decorated with either a picture or bust of Lenin, some of his sayings, and always flowers. Then each club has its library and sutdy room, its social hall, its refreshment room, etc., and all scrupulously clean. Practically each factory nuclei has a club of its own so that the lives of the worker are bound together not only at work but also at their study and play time.

Truly a Workers' Country.

I have spoken to many visitors since I am here, and there is one thing that all agree on and that is the fact this is really a country of, for and by the workers. This fact is felt no matter where you are or what you are doing, and unless a person can get this fact into his or her head nothing here can be understood.

Being a woman, naturally, one thing which impressed me very much was the clothes of the working people here. To say the least the people here are very well dressed, not in the height of fashion as we are accustomed to seeing them in America, but in good, substantial clothes that would be a credit to people anywhere.

Another thing that is very noticeable in Moscow to anybody who has traveled around in Chicago and New York is the absence of children on the streets. I almost began to believe there weren't many children until the day of the November 7 celebration when the children were brought out from the schools and nurseries in trucks and automobiles, the larger ones, of course, marching in the parade. The first chance I get I will visit some of these schools and then I will write again and let you know just how they are conducted and how they work and play.

'LIVING NEWSPAPER' IS PLANNED BY THE CHICAGO WORKER CORRESPONDENTS

Tonight at 8 o'clock the Chicago worker correspondents' class meets in the editorial room of The DAILY WORKER. Many important matters are to come up. Among them are the organization of the "Living Newspaper" and a discussion on how the Pravda developed its worker correspondents. Every student of the class must not fail to be present.

Imagine The DAILY WORKER read by over a half million workers. Pravda, the Communist daily of the Soviet Union, has over a half million circulation. The worker correspondents made that possible for the Pravda. The worker correspondents can make it possible for The DAILY WORKER.

Have you been reading the articles appearing every day on this page? That valuable work has been done by workers who take The DAILY WORKER seriously. That they are achieving something that we may all be proud of, you must agree. You can do it, too. It is only necessary to get started.

Take this work seriously. Attend the worker correspondents' class tonight. Don't put it off for another night because tonight is important!

"Living Newspaper" to Be Out Saturday, Dec. 19.

The third issue of Prolet-Tribune, he living newspaper issued by the 'hicago worker correspondents of he Novy Mir, will be out Saturday, Dec. 19, at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St.

ALL TAXICAB DRIVERS MUST BECOME MEMBERS OF THEIR TRADE UNION

In this section devoted to worker correspondence there appeared an item yesterday "By a Worker Correspondent" declaring that, "The drivers in the Premier Taxi Co., the only 100 per cent unionized taxi company in Chicago, have working conditions that are worse than those in non-union companies."

This sentence may create a wrong impression unless the whole item is carefully read, especially the last paragraph, demanding the organization of the unorganized taxicab drivers, reading as follows:

"Establish regular union meetings and a slogan of, 'All Taxicab Drivers Must be Union Members' should be the present program of action."

Since the writer is a taxicab driver himself, he is doubtless familiar with the conditions prevailing under the different companies. Better conditions, however, are a temporary antidote to unionism offered by some corporations, until the danger of organization has been overcome, when rotten conditions are restored. The union among the drivers for the Premier Taxi Co., however weak and lacking in aggressiveness, offers the basis for struggle for the unionization of all taxicab drivers. As our "Worker Correspondent" pointed out, the union of the Premier drivers must be strengthened by making it a live, militant organization, and the slogan must be raised: "All Taxicab Drivers Must be Union Members."

BANKS MAKE ENORMOUS PROFITS ON FARMERS FORCED UNDER MORTGAGE

By BENJAMIN D. LEVINE, a Worker Correspondent.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass, Dec. 16.—The Federal Land Bank of Springfield, Mass., reports that net earnings for the year was $334,520,331, more than double those of a year ago, while loans during the year total $6,697,200, which is one million more than the total loans in the previous year.

Banks Take 16½ Per Cent.

Farmers from every state in New England and also New York and New Jersey numbering 3,581 have applied for loans of over $15,000,000 of which only the above amount of $6,697,200 has been granted. The average rate of earned interest has been 16½ per cent.

Thus farmers are forced to apply for loans and to pay such an enormous rate of interest, practically handing over their belongings to these "money sharks." Bank presidents characterize this state of affairs as "very good" and as "all that can be desired."

What Is Left For Farmer.

Farmers get their share of these enormous profits as follows: Every farmer applying for a loan is forced to buy stock in the bank to the extent of 5 per cent of the loan received. This stock is his property on which he receives such dividends as the bank is "able" to distribute.

After the reserve fund will swallow up $200,000 of the net earning and all other "funds" will be amply covered, how much will be left for the farmers?

An interesting feature of the bank is the selling of stock to the farmers at a 4½ per cent profit while their own rate of profits on the same money borrowed to the farmers is 16½ per cent. No wonder the president of the bank talks of "prosperity"—prosperity for whom?

Some Results of the A. C. W. Readjustment Policy

By A Worker Correspondent

IN the year of 1919, when Chicago clothing workers were organized 100 per cent into the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, we made it a rule that foremen are not to do any work on a garment. A foreman's job consisted of looking after the floor, taking care that the garments were made according to specification and in many cases acting as the direct representative of the employer. It was strictly understood that foremen must not handle a needle or a shear.

And our union did not tolerate the violation of these rules. Many trade board cases were fought on this issue, with good results as far as the union was concerned. It was part of our agreement and our officials valiantly fought for this rule. That all happened during the good old days of 1919 to 1922-23.

Workers Lose Out by Change.

But today, tho our officials tell us that under this new agreement that was signed last May we retain the same union and shop conditions as of 1922, the actual facts prove the contrary.

In most contracting shops we find that the foreman not only does the bossing, but he actually takes away the work from a union man. For example: In the shop of Schafner and Halperin, when the readjustments took place on one operation, sleeve trimming, the worker who did this work was dropped and the foreman did this work in addition to being foreman. When this worker complained to his deputy, his reply was: "Don't ask me for the job, ask the foreman, and if the foreman is willing to give it up, all right, if not, I can't help it. The firm can't afford to keep the foreman unless he saves a man's wages."

This is one of many concessions given to the bosses when readjustments are made.

In the International, when the workers came back to work after 19 weeks of strike, they found that one of the scabs became an assistant foreman with privileges to do another man's work. He did the job of cutting buttonholes and the people in the shop had to tolerate it. Not only that but also scabs. In the pressers' section a scab became an examiner.

Injustices Exist in All Shops.

During the last nine months I had the misfortune to work in practically every small shop in town because in town the employment exchange has only such jobs to give out. (As explained is a previous article our deputies control the better or steady jobs.) That gave me an opportunity to see the conditions in many small and contracting shops. And the above is true of all of them.

In 1920 our organization fought bitterly against contracting shops because they are nothing more than sweat shops. But today this has all been changed and our organization is giving concessions to the contracting shops to assure their existence.

And the people who work in the big shops are by no means immune from these evils of readjustments, as I pointed out in the case of the International which is a big shop.

The only way to do away with all injustices in our industry as well as in our union is to return to the old Amalgamated spirit of 1919. Then no concessions were granted to bosses and the bosses had to behave themselves according to the specifications in the agreement. Then we had a union and we felt like good union workers

WHITE GUARDS TRY TO SPOIL REVOLT CELEBRATION

Attempt to Draw Away Crowds on Sunday

The local counter-revolutionary white guards, masquerading as the "progressive club," have arranged a dance for this Sunday in order to interfere with hte revolutinary celebration of the 20th anniversary of the 1905 revolution and 100th anniversary of the Decembrists uprising. Usually they charge 50 cents or 75 cents admission to their affairs. This time, in order to draw away as many as possible, they charge only 30 cents admission.

All the anarcho-monarchist elements of the Russian colony are grouping around this counter-revolutionary outfit, but they will not succeed in breaking up the celebration of the class conscious workers. All will come to Schoenhoffen Hall, corner Ashland and Milwaukee Aves. this Sunday at 2 p. m.

Come yourself and bring your friends along. Give the counter-revolutionists the proper answer they deserve by crowding the hall to capacity!

Turkey Defies the League of Nations

the impending struggle over Mosul oil.

Laidoner told the usual lies about Turkish atrocities; how women were ravaged before their husbands, how priests were humiliated, how wholesale deportations of christians were ensuing, etc.

Since the recent expose of the British publicity agents during the war who admitted that they falsified stories of German atrocities in order to inflame the population of the neutral and allied countries the old gag has lost its effectiveness. Laidoner is a person of shifty reputation and is known to be a paid liar of mediocre achievements, but quite as good as any one else for the job of parroting the lies written by the agents of British imperialism.

Britons Fear Workers.

British statesmen and the attaches of the British group here are hesitant about advising an immediate declaration of war as they fear the wrath of the working class of Britain and also fear that a war against Turkey may be the signal for wholesale outbreaks in all the Asiatic and African colonies. At the same time she dare not back down on the Turkish question otherwise her action will be interpreted as weakness and that will also encourage the suppressed nationalities now restless under colonial despotism and the mandates system of the league of nations.

The meeting Sunday night will expose the moving impulses behind the ruthless advance of American imperialism in Latin-America and also in the Far East. It will demonstrate the community of interests between the working class in this country and all the oppressed peoples of the American empire struggling against Wall Street. And it will voice a protest that cannot be ignored.

Leaflets advertising the meeting will be ready as soon as the presses can turn them out. Several thousand of them will be on hand today at the office of International Labor Defense, 23 South Lincoln St. Workers interested in securing a wide distribution for them can secure a bundle by calling there. J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, will address the members of Workmen's Circle, Branch No. 519, this Friday night, Dec. 18, at Humboldt Hall, 2229 W. Division street, on "What the Left Wing Wants in the Unions."

Ulster Govt. Dickers with Its Armed Thugs

BELFAST, Dec. 16.—The members of the special constabulary which revolted against the order to disarm here and in other parts of Ulster were still in control of the Belfast barracks.

The Ulster government was seeking to break up the revolt by treating with the various groups separately. The forces of the government have not yet made any attempt to recapture the barracks now being held by the rebels.

RAILWAY WAGE FIGURES SHOW A SLIGHT RAISE BUT NUMBER EMPLOYED DECLINES 141,847

By LELAND OLDS.

Increases in railroad wages in the last 2 years have been won by a wholesale sacrifice of jobs, the wage report of the interstate commerce commission covering operations in September reveals. This report shows the average earnings of all hourly paid employes at $130 for the month compared with $126 in September, 1923, two years previous. This is a gain of about 3%. But in the same period the number of workers earning these wages decreased from 1,821,345 to 1,679,498, a drop of 141,847 or about 8%.

These figures mean that by sweating a little more work out of each worker remaining on their payrolls the railroads could raise wages to avoid unrest while reducing the total paid in wages from $255,217,195 in September 1923 to $244,281,920 in September, 1925. This is a decrease of nearly 5%. In the last 6 months in spite of paying slightly higher per capita wages than in 1923 the railroads have actually spent $102,000,000 less in wages. This huge sum represents the employes' extra contribution to this year's record profits.

The effect of this policy on 13 representative groups of railroad employes appears in the following figures showing the number employed and average earnings in September 1923 and 1925:

Rail employes in September	Number employed 1923	Number employed 1925	Earnings 1923	Earnings 1925
Clerks (class B)	139,589	134,209	$124	$128
Section labor	233,818	224,481	73	72
Freight carmen	108,406	86,367	137	141
Electrical (class A)	6,994	6,756	159	159
Machinists	68,392	59,602	154	152
Shop helpers	135,009	111,347	105	106
Common shop labor	65,829	57,998	80	79
Telegraphers	27,764	23,840	141	147
Freight handlers	42,922	40,938	90	93
Freight conductors	27,403	25,510	223	237
Freight brakemen	66,869	61,457	165	178
Freight engineers	34,587	31,470	251	269
Freight firemen	37,105	33,457	174	190
Employed on hourly basis	1,821,345	1,679,498	126	130

The shop forces as a group have been hardest hit by this process. The number of shopmen fell from 577,412 in September, 1923, to 495,369 in September, 1925, a drop of 14%. The total wages going to shopmen in the month fell from $70,383,264 to $60,619,123 or about the same percentage.

The number of train and engine service employes declined from 347,398 to 327,170 or nearly 6% while in spite of the general wage increases negotiated by the brotherhoods the total paid them in wages increased less than 1% from $64,566,592 to $65,088,465.

The number of workers in clerical occupations was reduced from 239,621 to 230,629 while their total wages remained practically stationary, amounting to $28,857,745 in September, 1923, and to $28,644,891 this year. Maintenance of way forces were reduced from 445,204 to 424,025 and their total wages from $39,624,334 to $37,747,928. The large miscellaneous group including dispatchers, telegraphers and station employes decreased from 192,537 to 185,404, their combined wages remaining practically stationary at about $29,000,000.

Desperate to Hold His Job

One of the most despicable tricks ever indulged in by a labor faker, desperately fighting to hold his job at the expense of the membership of the union, has come to light in the present elections now going on in the Chicago locals of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union.

Sam Levin, present manager of the joint board, ordered three members of the union who were distributing pluggers for the opposition candidate, Nathan Green, removed from their jobs in the shops. Levin instructed the chairman of the shops to send the men over to his office. Arriving there he informed them that they could not distribute the pluggers. He said he didn't object to one side of the plugger which advocated voting for Green and against him, but that he did object to the program which advocates progressive reforms in the union.

This may seem strange to members of unions that are conducted along decent lines, especially those older unions of Chicago where bulletin boards are maintained in the shops and it is the duty of the shop chairmen to post all publicity matter of any nature when campaigns for election of officials are going on. But so low is the officialdom of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers that they actually remove from their jobs workers who dare support opposing candidates.

The Amalgamated used to proclaim its progressivism and sneer at the reaction of the A. F. of L. unions, but should any member of one of the oldest, avowedly conservative and most powerful of the A. F. of L. unions, the International Typographical Union, indulge in such antics as those performed by Mr. Levin, he not only would be removed from the ticket, but expelled from the union.

It is about time the gangsters and self-appointed dictators in control of the Amalgamated were removed, and the organization be brought back to the path of ordinary unionism.

World Court Debate Opens Today

According to schedule the long awaited debate on this country's participation in the world court will open today in the United States senate. Put forth as the proposition of the republican administration, first sponsored by the Harding-Hughes group and now considered the principal issue of the Coolidge-Kellogg administration in the sphere of international relations, the senator who will introduce the proposition is not a republican, but a democrat.

A prepared speech of 25,000 words is to be delivered tomorrow by Senator Swanson, a democrat from Virginia, who is ranking member of the foreign relations committee. Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee and a republican, will be the leader of the fight against the republican administration. He will be supported by such republican gladiators as Hiram Johnson of California and Moses of New Hampsire, both veterans of the historic league of nations fight that sent Woodrow Wilson into retirement, a defeated and discredited lackey of Morgan, after his spectacular performance at the Versailles "peace" conference.

While the situation looked favorable for Coolidge's proposal a few weeks ago, as the time of convening congress approached the ranks began to waver. Formerly depending upon the solid democratic support in the senate, with the exception of Reed of Missouri, it now develops that Reed has a number of others with him. The total estimated opposition is now 15, while 32 is the number required to defeat ratification.

Events transpiring in Europe, which reveals the role of the league of nations as the machine thru which the imperialist nations pave the way for future wars of conquest, will do much to strengthen the opposition.

The working class of the colonies and the home countries of imperialism are potential pawns in this game of imperialism. The world court proposal is the demand of Wall Street. The working class of the United States, instead of supporting the futile opposition engineered by the industrialist group around Borah, should in no uncertain terms let it be known that the warlike preparations now proceeding in this and other countries will be fought with the utmost energy. Workers conscripted into imperialist wars must learn how to turn the tide in their own interest instead of permitting themselves to furnish banquets for buzzards on foreign battlefields.

France Nears Cabinet Crash

For the third time within less than two months the government of France faces a crisis. The ineluctable position in which it finds itself as the result of the collapse of the franc makes impossible the continuation of the present chamber of deputies for the simple reason that no one party is strong enough to put a competent revenue program into effect. The right, under the Poincare Bloc Nationale can never solve the problem. The Herriot left and the Painleve left group both failed. Briand, the wily strategist, who has steered the ship of state thru many raging seas of political strife cannot avoid crashing upon the rocks of disaster.

Tuesday Louis Loucheur, the millionaire finance minister who tried to solve the problem that baffled the now discredited Caillaux, the "finance wizard," resigned in despair. Where Caillaux pulled the cabinet down with him, Loucheur by resigning tried to save the rest of the Briand cabinet.

But the franc continues to fall, closing yesterday around 28 to the dollar. Not even the patched-up agreement with Britain over the Syrian and Turkish struggles can save the present government.

Soon there must come new elections when the Communist Party of France will conduct a drive to expose the bankruptcy of the parties of the bourgeoisie and rally the workers against the capitalist government itself.

Mussolini is absent from the front pages of the newspapers lately. His reception at Locarno and his display of cowardice in remaining away from London have not contributed to make him good newspaper "copy."

Mr. Mellon Hands out Christmas Presents

By H. M. Wicks

DONATES FIVE MILLION DOLLARS TO TWO OF HIS FRIENDS AND REMEMBERS HIMSELF.

IMMEASURABLE is the contempt in which the ruling class of this country holds the working class when it can get away with such a flagrant fraud as the Coolidge-Mellon "tax reform." The government, which is the executive committee of the capitalist class, knows that the average worker merely reads the headlines in the reptile press on such questions as tax reduction and if those headlines solemnly assure him that the "common man" has been benefited thereby he immediately proceeds to whoop it up for the grand and glorious republican party that is so considerate of the workers that it reduces his taxes.

While many workers can and do accurately keep track of the percentages of the base ball scores during the season and while they have no trouble figuring up the averages of their favorite bowling teams, when it comes to solving problems that directly affect their own economic condition they leave that to the headline writers, who see to it that the reader gets thoroughly saturated with misinformation.

Three Chief Beneficiaries.

THE chief gainers as a result of the Mellon tax reforms are the men who have the largest incomes. According to last year's returns, based upon the 1924 tax law with a surtax of 40 per cent, three taxpayers made returns on incomes over $5,000,000. Their combined income was $27,955,319, and they paid in taxes the sum of $11,000,000. Under the proposed Mellon plan which cuts the surtax 20 per cent these same three, if their income is identically the same as it was last year (and it will be much more), will get away with a combined tax of $5,244,464.32.

It is interesting to know precicely who these three taxpayers are. Mr. Mellon, himself, is one of them. The other two are Henry Ford and John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The reduction these three received was more than the total reduction realized by the 2,000,000 taxpayers commencing at the $4,000 bracket down.

Then we may take the next three highest taxpayers and we get interesting figures. These three reported incomes over $4,000,000 each and less than $5,000,000. They paid in taxes for last year a total of $4,274,317. Under the Mellon plan the taxes of these three will be reduced $2,616,701.12.

Other figures prove that the 3,000 richest exploiters of labor in this country will receive reductions totaling more than $100,000,000 next year—that is figuring their income on the basis of last year.

Mr. Mellon's "Reform."

MELLON and the supporters of his plan contend that it is the most farreaching tax reform ever proposed to a United States congress. They claim that only one who is well trained in the mysteries of finance capital could have conceived of such a bill.

His plan should not be considered a real reduction in revenue. Any half-wit on earth can bring about a simple reduction in revenue by simply slashing all taxes, both direct and indirect.

For instance it would be a simple thing to take taxes off all necessaries of life, knock out taxes on all incomes under $5,000 a year and make everyone receiving above that amount pay it all out in taxes. But such a proposition would be nothing less than suicidal for Mr. Mellon and his class and, besides, it simply isn't being done under capitalism.

Much more ingenious is the scheme of Mellon. In his testimony before the committee on ways and means he said:

> "In determining what taxes should first be reduced, it is important to bear in mind the distinction between a reduction in taxes which simply reduces revenue.
> "A reduction of the lower brackets in itself means no increase in taxable income. A man with a $5,000 salary does not carry funds in nonproductive investment, and a reduction in his taxes does not therefore create additional taxable incomes.
> "A reduction in the surtax, however, increases the amount of capital which is put into productive enterprises, stimulates business and makes more certain that there will be more $5,000 jobs to go around."

It is with such sophistry that the Coolidge administration donates hundred million dollars to three thousand plutocrats. The government belongs to these three thousand, or at least the most powerful of this number, and still they object to paying for the conduct of that government.

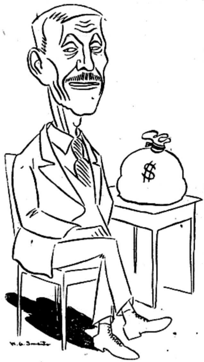
Mr. Mellon's proposals simply mean that the financial magnates of the country are to be relieved of paying heavy taxes in order that they may have more to invest in profitable industry. In other words so that they will have more capital with which to exploit labor. The only manner conceivable in which profits can be made is through the exploitation of labor. Nothing has any value whatsoever until labor-power has been applied to it and its value is determined by the amount of socially-necessary labor-time required to reproduce it.

But Mellon evades this plain fact by stating that with this money invested in industry more men will have $5,000 jobs and since these five thousand a year men do not invest in nonproductive securities (tax-exempt securities) they will pay sufficient in income taxes to make up for the loss on the great incomes.

ANOTHER illusion being disseminated by Mr. Mellon and his gang of imperialist yegg-men is that of every person having an "interest in the government." If people pay income taxes they will feel that they have a share in the government and will therefore defend their "investment." Surely no one who sees the manner in which the petty bourgeois shopkeepers hire jay-bird lawyers to show them how to evade taxes can be induced to believe that taxpaying increases love of government. The average taxpayer has about as much respect for the government as a bootlegger has for a prohibition agent when they try to cheat him out of his share of the graft.

The few workers who have had to pay income taxes look upon the government as a brigand, a highwayman, who squanders their money in the same reckless manner in which members of the cabinet squander oil lands. They consider the government a pack of thieves. Unfortunately they do not understand how intelligently to combat the thing.

In his tax proposals he presents a contradictory argument by excusing his flagrant exemption of great fortunes by stating that the millions of dollars "saved" by the big capitalists will be reinvested in this country. Instead of employing American workers some of it will go to Italy to enable Mussolini to weld more firmly the shackles of slavery upon the working class of that hapless nation; some of it will claim its toll from the suffering of the working class of Germany; another part of it will be used to support the rapacious assaults of Major General Leonard Wood against the Filipino people; it will pay the gunmen of imperialism in China in order that the millions of workers there may be brought under the domination of Wall Street. It will create peons and slaves, and mighty



The Secretary of the Treasury

Cuts down the taxes of himself and his pals Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Ford by more than five million dollars.

AS for the reinvestment of the profits of the richest people of the country in industry so there can be more $5,000 a year men, everyone knows that this profit, for the most part, is of late years being invested in foreign countries. Industrial development in this country is so advanced that but a very small portion of that which is piled up as surplus is ever reinvested within the borders of the United States. In Mr. Mellon's report to congress he emphasized the enormous plethora of gold now in the country and the necessity of disposing of it in a profitable manner. Then in few $5,000 a year men. Those that it does create will be merely the vile lackeys and thugs enabling the ruling class more effectively to throttle the working class. Most of the $5,000 a year men are those craven creatures known as "efficiency experts" and "industrial engineers" who spend their energy devising more bestial ways of taking from the wage slaves the last bit of vitality within their bodies in a given period of time.

Much noise is being made over the fact that by raising the exemption to include all incomes under $3,500 for heads of families more than 3,000,000 persons who paid last year will be exempt from paying income taxes this year. Since the total number of income tax payers last year was 4,270,421, that means there will be but 1,270,421 or less, paying income taxes this year. For these people we hold no brief. They are either big exploiters of labor or petty bourgeoisie, with a sprinkling of labor fakers whose incomes place them definitely in the bourgeois class.

Nor do we rejoice over the exemption of the 3,000,000. For the most part they are the lowest, the vilest, the most filthy of the petty bourgeoisie—small shopkeepers, country bankers, lawyers, preachers, university professors, and salaried petty slave-drivers in industry. They are the chief benefactors aside from the top-notch capitalists.

Then in between the two extremes there is an upper strata of the petty bourgeoisie who didn't get any tax reduction. Those with incomes from $11,000 to $44,000 a year do not get any relief (?) from the Mellon tax plan. They are for the most part industrialists who resent the encroachments of finance capital, and Mr. Mellon, the Pittburgh banker, has no sympathy for them and he knows they have but little power and are few in number, so they must bear their affliction in impotency.

The Rest of Us.

AS for the rest of us, who did not pay income taxes last year and do not pay them this year, we cannot get excited over the tribulations of any of the income tax payers. But there are points to the Mellon tax bill that amount to a reduction in the standard of living by placing taxes upon necessaries of life. For instance, more than $250,000,000 is paid in taxes on tobacco, while for amusement and recreation where an admission fee is charged, more than $750,000,000 will be collected to defray the expenses of the capitalist instrument of subjection, whose one reason for existence is to hold the workers in slavery in order that the capitalist system may continue.

According to the last census (1920) there were 41,500,000 wage earners in the United States. There were something over 21,000,000 families of wage earners.

The last census proves that there were in this country more than 36,000,000 wage workers who received less than the previous exemption limit. It means that most of these received less than $2,000 a year.

Mellon's tax report gives the lie to the much vaunted prosperity talk in the bourgeois press on the one hand and on the other it reveals the financial barons of the country as unwilling to finance their own government and striving to devise means of transferring the tax to the middle class in the form of direct taxes and to the workers in the form of indirect taxes, which act to reduce their standard of living.

The Red Versus the Black Agrarian International

By T. DOMBAL, Moscow.

IN the coming events which are going to determine the fate of laboring mankind, the peasantry will doubtless play a tremendous historic part.

In the fight between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie at the present revolutionary epoch, it will be the peasantry that will decide the outcome of the struggle one way or another. Although, the peasantry, for a good many reasons, will not be able to become the leading factor in this struggle; nevertheless its role will be tremendous, even if only because on a world-scale it comprises over a billion human souls, which means from 60 to 70 per cent of the entire race. Since the peasantry used to be considered as the most conservative and backward element in society, the bourgeois ideologists have based all their hopes for the preservation of the capitalist order upon the political neutrality of the peasantry. Now, after the imperialist world war a sharp change has taken place in the peasantry.

FIRST of all, there has grown in the peasant the consciousness of the antagonism between his interest and those of the bourgeoisie and the landlords, secondly the class differentiation has grown among the peasantry. Thirdly, ever increasing masses of the toiling peasantry are beginning to realize the community of their interests with those of the proletariat.

The importance of the peasantry in the coming world-events is taken into account not only by the revolutionary proletariat but also by the bourgeois and landlord reaction.

The slogan launched by the proletarian vanguard, "The revolutionary alliance of workers and peasants for the fight against capitalism and landlordism" has met with vivid response among the peasants. Ever since the time when the more advanced and class conscious elements of the peasantry have created the Red Peasants' International under the name of the International Peasants' Council (Krestintern), this slogan has begun to assume organized forms. The bourgeois is fully aware of the fact that it would prove unable to resist the united front which is growing among the workers and peasants, and it therefore tries to hinder the formation of such an alliance, to gain over to its side the prosperous and even the middle elements of the peasantry, and by their aid to subjugate to itself the village. It may safely be stated that the coming revolutionary events—the decisive encounter between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie will be preceded by the fight between these two classes for this mighty ally, for the peasantry.

THIS fight for the peasantry is growing in extent thruout the world, assuming a more and more organized character.

On the one hand, the Krestintern is gathering under its banner ever increasing numbers of the existing as well as of the newly arising economic and political organizations of the toiling peasantry, besides establishing contact with the left-wing and radical groups of those agricultural organization which are still dominated by landlords, wealthy peasants or petty-bourgeois leaders. On the other hand, the bourgeois and capitalist reaction, in league with the wealthy peasants, is trying to capture the peasant movement and to direct it into its own channel, not only nationally in the different countries, but also internationally upon a world scale.

Already before the formation of the Krestintern, the capitalist and landlord reaction had endeavoured to create a "black agrarian international." On their part, the wealthy peasant, upon the initiative of Stambulisky, created the "people's green agricultural international," which to this day retains its Slavonic character, not having made any considerable headway.

Along with these attempts there could recently be noted the reports of the social-reformists of the menshevist type to draw the peasantry into the sphere of influence. It was not gratously that Otto Bauer published his book "The Fight for Land, Field and Forest," neither is it by mere accident that the Second International is convening shortly at Paris a conference on the agrarian and peasant question. But by far the most brilliant proof of the growing struggle for the peasantry and at the same time to us the most dangerous manifestation of the black reaction, is the fact of the decision of the 12th international congress at Warsaw last June to create its own black agrarian international as a counterpoise to the red Krestintern. Every emphasis should be put upon the undoubted fact that since that very moment the fight for the peasantry between the world reaction and the proletariat has assumed an organized character on either side, and that henceforth it will be waged chiefly under the banner of the two internationals: The red Krestintern and the black agrarian international.

The agrarian congress at Warsaw was convened by the so-called international agrarian commission created at the world exhibition of Paris in 1889, upon the initiative of the then premier of France, a member of the Paris Commune.

Under the slogan of "professional" unity of all the agriculturists, beginning with the large landowner and ending with the poorest peasant, in the spirit of the antiquated doctrine, "The plough becomes the symbol of civilization," was founded the international agrarian commission, which has since convened congresses (there were twelve agrarian congresses, including that at Warsaw) and acted as their executive organ. At first the participants of these congresses consisted of representatives of the different agricultural associations (almost exclusively of landowners) professors and other specialists, and later on they were attended also by delegates of about thirty governments (ministers of agriculture and higher officials), who have established close contact with the international agrarian commission of Paris and with the International Agrarian Institute at Rome, which had been founded under its auspices in 1905.

Ostensibly these congresses have pursued scientific aims and have been convened for the exchange of information on agricultural progress, but in fact, they have helped the large landowners to bring pressure to bear upon their respective governments in the furtherance of their particular interests. The Warsaw congress attended by about 250 delegates representing 25 countries, and also by representative of the league of nations, constitutes the most important of all the organized offensives of the world's agrarian capital against the toilers in general, and the peasants in particular.

The actions of the landlords cannot be considered as isolated. Before starting the attack, they have reached an agreement with the big bourgeoisie and secured the support of both industrial and financial capital. Extremely characteristic for the whole tactcis of the landlords is the fact that, upon the demand of the bourgeoisie, they have agreed to some concessions on the land question.

ART REVIEW -:- By Georgiana Bonita

HAVE you been to see Antonio? If not, you still have a chance. The annual exhibition of American painters and sculptors now open at the Art Institute will continue until December 13. We have visited the exhibition on several Sundays and each time we have come away with the conviction that if we were permitted to take away the picture of our choice out of the scores of interesting paintings, we would take Antonio, Number 189. You will find him away in the corner of the last room at the right, sitting on a park bench, his head resting in his hand. There he is, the itinerant worker. You see that he has nothing in the world but the clothes upon his back. You see in his face the weariness, the disappointment, and the hopelessness, not of his own life alone, but of the age-old experience of his class. Life has robbed him of everything but one. What is it—a memory or a dream? Decide for yourself. Go and see him and bring away with you the love of the memory of him as we have done.

But if we could not have Nikol Shattinstein's Antonio, we would take Miners, by Knute Heldnar, Number 87, in a room on the left side. Workers are issuing from the mine, their dinner pails in their hands. They seem to bring something of the damp and darkness of that other world of theirs back with them, and even the dusky light of evening—or is it morning—seems too bright for their eyes. Heavily they walk, their shoulders drooping, their spirits sagging. They are tired. Too tired to care. See if you do not love the Miners. And let's be glad that an artist of so true an appreciation and so penetrating a sympathy has given us this picture.

THERE are other pictures of direct interest to workers. Some because of their working class interpretation, others for their beauty of theme and color. Among these are Planting Potatoes, by Ross Moffitt, Number 141; A Valencian Morning, by Arthur Rider, Number 175, showing oxen bringing in the boat. There is a wonderful picture of a Mexican herder, by Henning, Number 91. While you are looking at this you will notice that the lovely lady in black beside [illegible] is by the same artist who painted Antonio. As you pass down one room on the right you will notice Randall Davey's Cowboy—simply beautiful. So true, so fine and big and strong, so saturated with the spirit of the out-of-doors, of the mountains and the plains—so all but alive! Yet we heard a man say in passing: "I don't like that—his shirt is all open." Wouldn't you have smiled, too?

Be sure not to miss Beneker's From the Soil, portraying a worker leaning on his spade. The hardened soul-benumbed features recall inevitable lines from Markham's Man With the Hoe, and especially those from Josephine Peabody's Singing Man:

"Perished thot and halting tongue—
(Once it spoke—once it sung!)
Live to hunger, dead to song.
Only heat-beats loud with wrong
Hammer on, How long? How long?
How long?"

The institute is open without charge on Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and all legal holidays. Ask a guard to direct you to the rooms where the annual exhibition is held.

WA LOOMS OVER LEAGUE VERDICT

SIGMAN DRIVES TOWARD SPLIT, FORCING LEFT TO LEAVE HALL, BUT IS COMPELLED TO RETREAT

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 17.—The Sigman machine late this afternoon abrogated the most important provision of the peace agreement, the section providing that the question of proportional representation should be submitted to a referendum vote and the left wing delegation, following the lead of Hyman, left the convention.

The crisis was provoked with coldblooded deliberation by President Sigman, Dubinsky and others, and was evidently part of a preconceived plan to place the blame for a split on the left wing. This plan failed, however, because the spokesmen for the left wing immediately issued a statement repudiating any suggestion of a split and voicing a determination to stay in the union in spite of all maneuvers by the real disrupters—the Sigmanites.

Force Sigman Retreat.

So raw was the provocation of Sigman and so obvious the violation of the fundamental basis of the unity agreement that even capitalist papers here, like the Evening Ledger, place the blame for the crisis upon Sigman. At nine o'clock negotiations opened between the administration and the left wing and an agreement was reached that the administration would urge the convention to adopt the referendum provision upon the return of the left wing delegates to the convention. The convention will resume its sessions at 9 a. m. The situation is critical and much depends upon the manner in which the Sigman machine carries out the agreement.

After the left wing had walked out the machine attempted to reorganize the convention, read the left wing out of the union and proceed with the business of the convention but opposition to this policy came from a number of administration delegates who were not close enough to the machine to be blinded to all reason and who still retained some loyalty to the union.

These unexpected defections forced Sigman to change his policy. After stating that he would crush the New York locals in two months after the convention, even the promised support of Green and the A. F. of L. could not counterbalance the decreased morale of the machine followers. The situation was a very dangerous one, not only for the left wing in the I. L. G. W. but for the entire American minority movement.

The split in the I. L. G. W. was not only imminent this afternoon, but it had actually occurred. The maneuver

SIDNEY HILLMAN, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, is running a race with President William Green of the American Federation of Labor for the class collaboration stakes. Green is swallowing Hillman's dust. The labor faker who nods patronizingly at the class struggle has put it all over the labor faker who preaches the doctrine of unity between capital and labor. Green is touring the country theorizing on the advantages to be gained by "both" labor and capital from co-operation instead of struggle, while the members of his own union are engaged in a life and death struggle with the anthracite operators in Pennsylvania.

WHILE Green is peddling his green goods to the capitalists, Sidney Hillman, who recognises May Day as the international holiday of labor, yet [illegible] new laurels to his class collaborationist crown, tho he never even once mentions the hated term or anything suspiciously like it. The current issue of the Advance, official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, unofficially edited by the word juggler J. B. Salutsky—now Hardman because the "sky" sounds too Muscovy—tells a story that may well mark a milestone in the degeneration of the A. C. BRITISH TRADES UNION HEAD PRAISES ELECTRIFICATION PROGRAM IN SOVIET UNION

By WALTER M. CITRINE

(Acting Secretary of British Trades Union Congress)

Our train had jogged its persistent way from Leningrad thruout the night and now with the daylight we were approaching our destination.

Visit Volkhofstroy Power Station.

A few minutes before 9 o'clock in the morning we came in sight of the bend of the Volkhof River. There, rising like a gigantic monument against the background of woodlands and green fields, was the famous Volkhofstroy Electric Station.

There seemed something incongruous about this evidence of twentieth-century scientific development right in the heart of the wild beauties of nature.

Here all was solitude and repose, and it was wondrous to think that the ingenuity of man had harnessed the flowing might of the great Volkhof River to his service.

To Supply Leningrad.

Yet we knew that in a few months' time this rapidly flowing water would be supplying the inhabitants of Leningrad and its surrounding districts with the electricity, to light their streets, homes, and buildings, to drive their tramcars, to turn the whirring wheels of factory machinery, and to preform the numerous functions which electricity is so well able to accomplish.

A wondrous agent truly, and one which has been transmitted to the present generation thru the assid-

EDISON PLANT IS UNABLE TO PROCURE SCABS

Armed Deputies Seek Unemployed Workers

By A Worker Correspondent

When the worker from Council Bluffs, Iowa, who had been sent to the Edison Electric Appliance company, 52nd Ave. and 19th St., by the Landis award employment office to scab in the struck plant and who refused to work after learning of the sheet metal workers' strike, went to get his kit of tools, he was refused admittance to the shop. He was taken into the office and there attempts were made to induce him to stay and scab. Despite the fact that he had been out of work and had a family dependent on him he told them to "go to hell" with their job and demanded his tools.

The armed deputies were then told to give this "guy" his tools and let him "get the hell out of here."

Chase After Unemployed.

It has been the custom of the plug-uglies calling themselves deputy sheriffs in this plant to run a couple of blocks after some worker whom they thought needed a job and get him to come to the office and make offers to the unemployed worker to scab. The deputies strenuous efforts to recruit scabs are not getting them anywhere.

The deputy who was so well lit up yesterday, that the waitress in the restaurant he ate in watched him out of the corner of her eyes so that he woudn't drown in his bowl of soup, came swaggering out of the plant yesterday, shouting "Where in hell is that god damned DAILY WORKER."

Daily Worker Aids Strike.

The DAILY WORKER has become a real weapon in this strike and the blows that it lands are telling on the scabs and the armed plug-uglies. Copies of The DAILY WORKER are being distributed in the neighborhoods where those that are scabbing live, so that their neighbors can know who and what their "respectable" neighbor is doing.

Threats of violence have been made by the deputies that they are going to "get" The DAILY WORKER'S correspondent on the picket line for his telling the truth of the strike situation.

TURKEY BREAKS DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH IRAK OVER LEAGUE DECISION ON MOSUL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 17.—Turkey has severed diplomatic relations with the kingdom of Irak as the result of the award of Mosul to Irak by the league of nations council, it was learned here today. This is the first step toward war between Turkey and Great Britain as the league mandate over Irak is administered by Britain and the country administering the mandate is supposed to defend the territory against aggression. Under article 16 the other nations of the league are also supposed to aid in warfare against any nation violating the covenant of the league.

Paris opinion is that the refusal to recognise a decision in relation to disputed borders is not a violation of the covenant and therefore France will not be called upon, in case of war, to aid England. In London, however, the opposite opinion prevails and the papers supporting Baldwin are to state this evening that the action of Turkey does constitute a violation of the covenant of the league, and that France should aid Britain in case of war.

Rushdi Defiant.

Tewfik Rushdi Bey, Turkish representative at Geneva, stated this morning that his government would break diplomatic relations with Irak "whose sovereignty over Mosul, Turkey will refuse to recognize."

When questioned he said he did not care to venture an opinion on whether or not this action would change the relations between Turkey and Great Britain.

CUBAN RULERS OUT TO CRUSH LABOR UNIONS

Mella Ends the Second Week of Hunger Strike

A partial list of the other victims of American imperialism arrested in Cuba with Julio A. Mella at the behest of the American sugar trust was made public today by the United States section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League. The list, just received from Havana, includes some of the best-known labor leaders in Cuba: Alfredo Lopez Arencibia, Manuel G. Frenandez, Sandalio Junco, Antonio Penichet, Octavio Garcia, Rafael S. Marrero, Francisco M. Breteau and Manuel Landrove.

Mella, who is general secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba, is entering upon the fourteenth day of his hunger struke. The Machado government of Cuba, always a ready tool of Ambassador Crowder and the sugar barons, shows no sign of relenting.

Colonos Still on Strike.

The strike of the colonos against the big American-owned sugar centrals in Cuba still goes on, despite the repressive measures of the government. Military "supervisors" have been placed at all strategic points of the affected district. Some of the centrals (or grinding mills) have regular detachments of soldiers assigned to them.

"The case of Mella and his comrades involves more than a mere strike," warns Manuel Gomez, secretary of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League, in a bulletin issued today. "It makes urgently necessary a united front between all the oppressed peoples of the 'American empire' with the forward-looking workers of the United States against the ever-widening menace of American imperialism. The oppressed peoples are suspicious of all Americans, and with reason. It is up to the American workers to show that they have no part in the imperialistic schemes of Wall Street and Washington, and to lend support to their exploited brothers abroad. With Julio A. (Leader of the fight to join the World Court)

THE permanent court of international justice is an additional instrumentality to be used by the United States, when adhered to, for the settlement of international differences and the preservation of world peace. I believe the president of the United States is earnestly advocating it and believe the world court resolution will be adopted. The subject will be debated and will be kept before the senate as continuously as possible until disposed of. There is no disposition on the part of its proponents not to have a full, fair and open debate of the subject, and I have seen no disposition from any source toward a filibuster. If a filibuster should develop, there will be sufficient time to determine upon a counter course and bring about ratification of the world court plan.

By SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH

(Leader of the opposition to the World Court)

MY contention is that the world court should be divorced from the league of nations. As it is now, it is a component part of the league, a department of the league, and there is no possible way, as a practical proposition, to avoid becoming identified with the league if we join the world court as proposed. Whatever may be said in favor of a world court, an independent judicial tribunal, that is not the proposition which we have before us. We are asked to join a tribunal which is the legal adviser and counsellor of the league and whose opinions and judgments, including its advisory opinions, are to be enforced by the league, even by military force if necessary. It seems to me utterly untenable to contend that in joining such a tribunal we do not become in all practical effect a member of the league.

SWANSON, the democrat, speaks for the Wall Street banking combine that controls the democratic party. Instead, of guaranteeing peace, as Swanson contends, both the league and the court stimulate new wars. The republican party also supports Wall Street's proposal that the United States enter the court. Borah is an insurgent, speaking for the middle and far west industrialists. He thinks the court would be all right separated from the league. This is utopian, because every court must have its policemen to enforce its decrees. In this case the nations affiliated with the league constitute the armed force and the court is the legal cloak for imperialist pillaging. As against the capitalist league of nations and world court we propose the world revolution in order to establish a league of proletarian nations upon the ruins of capitalism.

WAR LOOMING OVER VERDICT BY THE LEAGUE

Turkey Breaks with Irak Over Mosul

tice of breaking of relations between Turkey and Irak have reached the foreign office here. Possibilities of war with Turkey, however, as the result of the league of nations council awarding Mosul to Irak, under British mandate, are frankly discussed by sections of the British press today. A conciliatory attitude is seen in the press today, all newspapers agreeing that a 25-year extension of the mandate is "too great a burden" and the opposition newspapers are vehement in their attacks upon the policy of the Baldwin government in bringing Europe to the brink of another world holocast.

Times Apologetic.

The Times, which is the voice of the government, points out that Great Britain is not committed to remain in Irak for twenty-five years and is hopeful that Irak "will be able to defend herself and establish her own government in a much shorter time than that, permitting the British to withdraw." This is the old gag of pretening to aid suppressed peoples establish self-government, which literally means when they are completely under domination of imperialism. The Times statement means that after Turkey is defeated it might then be possible within a much shorter period than 25 years, to grant self-determination (?) to Irak.

Fears Parliament.

The Baldwin government, in an official statement, declared that it would not be necessary for the government to submit the proposed new treaty with Irak, providing for an extension of the mandate, to parliament, but that it might be ratified by the king.

The government fears to throw the question of ratification into the house of parliament for fear the discussion would cause its fall. It promises, tho, that it will discuss it in the house next February.

While exerting every ounce of energy toward war preparations the government still claims that it hopes to adjust the dispute in a peaceful manner.

This fink agency head together with two other sluggers in the automobile kidnapped Gorecki and W. Seidman, head of the Seidman Detective Agency, and who participated in the third degree given John Werlik, then drove under the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad tracks, which adjoin the Cribben, Sexton & company plant where they beat him up. After they had beaten him, they threw him out of the automobile onto the street.

They then drove up to Joseph Krason, leaped out of the machine and severely beat him under the very eyes of the Cribben, Sexton bosses.

The strike against the scabby manufacturers of the Universal stoves, ranges and furnaces continues with the bosses getting more and more desperate. Contract after contract, which called for early delivery has been cancelled. It has also been learned that many dealers have refused to handle the products of this scabby concern.

Several large Chicago building contractors have refused to install the products of the struck plant. The striking metal polishers have been assured the co-operation of the building trades workers in their struggle against the Cribben & Sexton plant.

Workers Will Celebrate 20th Anniversary of 1905 Revolution and Decembrist Uprising Sunday

On Sunday, Dec. 20, the 20th anniversary of the 1905 Russian revolution and the 100th anniversary of the Decembrist uprising will be celebrated in a number of the larger cities in this country.

In New York the workers will celebrate these two memorable events at the Central Opera House, 67th St. and 3rd Ave., where Benjamin Gitlow, recently released from Sing Sing, will speak Sunday afternoon.

In Chicago there will be a celebration at the Schoenhoffen Hall, corner Milwaukee and Ashland Aves., on Sunday afternoon. Comrade J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, will be one of the speakers.

The DAILY WORKER issue for Saturday will contain many special and interesting articles commemorating the anniversary of the 1905 Russian revolution and the Decembrist revolt. Order a bundle of this special issue.

The World Court Fight Is On.

floor continuously until disposed of—and few believe that it can be disposed of before March.

Surface indications point to a vote at the end of these weeks of oratory that will put the United States into the court on such terms as will emphasize non-adherence to the parent league of nations. The democrats, with few exceptions, are for the court; the republicans, with a good many exceptions, are rather grudgingly for it.

Undaunted by the seeming odds against them, the remnants of the old "Battalion of Death" of league days will oppose it savagely The opposition makes up in ability and resourcefulness what it lacks in numbers.

Opposition Has Hopes.

Borah, Johnson and their associates do not believe their fight is a hopeless as surface indications would make it appear.

While conceding that if the vote were this week they would be defeated, it is nevertheless contended that in the weeks of debate ahead sufficient votes can be weaned away from the court to make the issue exceedingly close, if not decided in their favor.

The opening of the fight was accomplished by demonstrations in Washington such as have seldom been seen in connection with an issue current in congress. Liberally financed by Wall Street many organizations are sending delegations to attend the opening speeches, and do "missionary work" including bribery among members of the senate who are considered to be "on the fence."

Wall Street Confident.

The Wall Street supporters of the court claimed at the outset today about 75 votes.

The opposition counts at the outset some fifteen votes as certain against the court. There are perhaps a score of senators who are nominally "for" the court, yet not sufficient warm about it to be considered absolutely certain. It is to be the task of the opposition to win these wavering ones.

The opposition will center its attack on the court on the ground that it is a creature of the league of nations, and wholly under the domination of the league; that the league elects and pays for its officers; and that for the United States to adhere to such a court is merely a "back door" entrance to the league.

Senator Borah plans to point out that there is no code of recognized international law today. What law, then, he will ask, does the court interpret and proceed upon? He answers his own question by stating "league law."

Imperialist Pacifists Swarm.

The opening of the battle attracted a tremendous crowd to the capitol. The galleries were filled at 11 o'clock, an hour before the senate convened, and the police turned away hundreds.

Dlegations representing women's clubs, peace organizations, anti-war organizations, and church societies in the service of imperialism poured into Washington last night and and this morning, and there was a grand rush for seats when the doors were opened. Only a fraction of them could get in, however, and there was much confusion in the corridors.

The debate drew only a scattered attendance from the diplomatic corps, however.

On the stroke of noon, Vice-President Dawes called the senate to order and read the agreement adopted last March, laying before that body the Swanson resolution for American adherence to the world court. Swanson immediately rose and was recognized by Dawes. A quorum call intervened, summoning absent senators to the chamber, and Swanson then formally launched the world court fight.

Fight Opens.

America will have to join the world court organized by the league of nations or never join any court, Senator Swanson, democrat, of Virginia, declared today in opening the senate debate on the three-year-old controversy.

"The issue can not be evaded," he said. "It is either this court or none other."

Swanson's speech was one of the longest, most tiresome and stupid ever delivered in the senate outside of a filibuster. He harrangued at length about the formation of the tribunal, extolled its work, praised the league of nations, tried to review each decision the court has made in international affairs, denied that any "sacrifice of the Monroe Doctrine" was embodied in American adherence answered the court's critics on moot points, and concluded with a combating challenge to both parties to "make good" on their oft-repeated endorsements of a world court.

"Let us conform our practices to our preachments," he declared, repeating Coolidge's drivel. "For more than half a century we have been the leading advocates of a world court. Are our efforts in this direction sincere, or mere empty lip service?

"The league of nations today is the most potent factor in the world for peace," Swanson said, in predicting that the United States will eventually join.

"The day will ultimately come," he said, "when the United States will desire and be compelled to join.

"However much any of us may desire national isolation, the time is past when this can exist."

Replies to Borah.

He anticipated and answered Senator Borah's argument that there is at this time no recognized code of international law, and that, therefore, the court will administer "league law."

"International law can only be codified and made operative by treaties and international agreements. To get the 48 nations now members of the court to agree to codification would require years to accomplish. To wait upon codification is to postpone the matter indefinitely, and would properly be considered a refusal to join."

Praises Mosul Decision.

Every decision that the court has rendered, he said, has been "fair" and furnished proof of the court's ability and conscience, including that just handed down in the case of the Mosul dispute between Great Britain and Turkey.

"The question is given us whether we shall be one of the nations aiding the peace and progress of the world by adhering to this court, or whether we shall stand aloof and refuse to aid the world in its efforts for the settlement of international disputes by justice and law and not by force," concluded Swanson at the very moment Turkey broke off relations with Irak, preparatory to armed struggle over the decisions of the court and the league. The comedy will continue with other speeches in favor of adherence today.

since 1919, and instead of recognizing a union he hired a good press agent and transformed himself into a miniature Henry Ford. His business grew to large proportions. He was making money, but rumor has it that he was a little bit jealous of the profits made by Hart, Schaffner and Marx, the boss tailors that Sidney Hillman worked for—as an employe—some fifteen years ago. Hillman no longer works for them—as an employe.

SUDDENLY, Nash saw the light shining thru Sidney Hillman. The Sidney that he had hitherto thought responsible for the unpleasantness that open shop golden rulers sometimes have to endure, turned out to be a different kind of a girl. The end of the picture finds Nash asking his employes to join the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and Hillman telling the same body of workers that the Amalgamated was always hungry for the opportunity to co-operate with Nash. Sidney makes it quite clear that Hillman was the kind of a fellow he would like to see in charge of an orphanage.

HILLMAN'S speech to Nash's employes is given in full in the current issue of the Advance. Nash's speech is suspiciously "edited." Newspapermen who know the tricks of the trade would like to read everything that Mr. Nash said to his workers when he urged them to join the Amalgamated. Of course, every worker will be glad to see an increase in the ranks of the Amalgamated, but radicals are suspicious of "Greeks bearings gifts." When leopards begin to change their spots capitalists may begin to change their skins. So far the leopard has maintained the status quo. Ditto for the capitalists. In actual life "Golden Rule Nash" is no different to a Judge Gary. Class conscious members of the Amalgmated would feel happier if Nash's employes were brought into the union by other means than Pollyanna pourparlers between Nash and Leo Wollman or other Greenwich Village barnacles who now hibernate on the payroll of the A. C. W. of A.

THE Advance boasts that "the unionization of the thousands of workers of the Nash Co., is particularly gratifying, because it was achieved without an industrial conflict." And "it is a victory for the Amalgamated's ideals which aim to introduce industrial democracy into relations between employers and workers in the clothing industry." And again "bringing civilized methods into relations between the employers and workers . . ." Which is very fine but very impossible. All kinds of stunts are tried to achieve this end—that is the elimination of class conflict—but the velvety hand of Hillman will be as futile as the mailed fist of a Mussolini.

IF anybody thinks there will be no conflict of interest between "Golden Rule Nash" and his employes, they are due for a rude awakening. Where is Nash going to get his profits from unless from the unrequited toil of his employes? Either Nash must haggle with his employes over the price of their labor power like his competitors and beat them down to the lowest penny or he will be put out of business by those who will. He will not be put out of business because of any compunction about fleecing his employes. That is the nature of capitalism. Hillman knows that. Schlossberg, the ex-S. L. P. man knows it. So does Salutsky, alias Hardman, former member of the executive committee of the Workers Party and still a political flirt in the alleyways of pale yellow radicalism.

WHAT took place in Cincinnati is a united front between Nash and Hillman for the greater glory of both. When Hillman said in his speech published in advance: "We are not opposed to piece work or any other kind of work. We believe in whatever is best for each situation," he did not tell what took place between Nash and himself in Washington, but seasoned members of the Amalgamated may draw their own conclusions as to what transpired behind the scenes before the curtains went up.

CLASS collaboration will not work, even with such experienced artists as Hillman, Schlossberg and Salutsky pulling the strings. But for the fighting ability of the members of the Amalgamated displayed on the picket lines it is quite likely that Nash would continue to babble about the "golden rule" and give a cold eye to the union. The great danger of the Hillman policy, is the demoralizing effect it may have on the morale of the union. The members may be seduced into believing that victories can be achieved by reading passages from the Talmud to the clothing manufacturers. The left wing can be depended on to save the union from "piece work Hillman."

American Labor Learns that the United States Is a Militarist Nation

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, great interest centers in new attempts at world disarmament. The official invitations to join an arms conference under the auspices of the league of nations are received by the Soviet government in Moscow, and by President Coolidge for the United States government at Washington. Without the participation of these two countries the attempted conference would resolve itself into a small gathering of western European capitalist nations torn by jealous hatreds.

• • • •

In announcing its receipt of the league's request that it participate in the proposed gathering, the Soviet government will, no doubt, take occasion to definitely state its position on this question.

It has stated its position before. It demands immediate disarmament. It is against talking about it and doing nothing, which is the policy of the imperialist plunderbund.

• • • •

Ever since the Bolshevik revolution showed that it was more powerful than all its capitalist foes, Soviet rule has demanded disarmament. George Chicherin, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, who is now in Paris, points out that last year the Soviet Union was willing to enter any conference discussing disarmament problems, and had agreed to the Benes (Czecho-Slovakia) plan for a compact of mutual security.

• • • •

Chicherin seizes upon this occasion to again restate the Soviet attitude toward the league of nations and the Locarno conference. The nations that talk disarmament are the same nations that the Soviet government charges entered into a compact for aggression against the Soviet state. Chicherin openly tells the profit conspirators who would prepare for themselves a disarmament mask to hide their militarist faces that "our apprehension regarding Locarno are sufficiently known." He goes further. He notifies the bandits of Versailles that Germany will be disillusioned by the Locarno developments.

• • • •

The profit press hails any participation by the Soviet Union in any disarmament conference that may be held as a step closer to the league of nations. Chicherin blasts this dream. The Soviet Union has not changed its attitude towards the league. It still considers the league as an alliance of robber nations to maintain intact their colonial empires, and to perpetuate the mandates granted by the looters' Versailles peace.

Since but one-sixth of the world is Soviet, and five-sixths still remain capitalist, Moscow must maintain relations with its enemies. It does not intend to do so by entering the thieves' lair at Geneva, Switzerland, where the league makes its headquarters. Chicherin says:

> "There is another way open—by direct and immediate agreements with all the other countries on all questions that interest us. We have entered on such a period."

It is this that the capitalist statesmen do not like; that the Soviet Union should have separate dealings with them all, exploiting their differences for its own purposes.

• • • •

Coolidge rule at Washington takes pride in Locarno. It urges joining the world court, the back door to the league of nations. Everything that Chicherin charges against the European profit nations also holds true for the United States, including the question of disarmament. Militarism weighs almost as heavily upon the American workers and farmers as it does upon labor in European countries, altho the United States boasts no great standing army. During the coming budget year 70.38 per cent of all national government expenditures will be for wars—past, present and future. As American imperialist ambitions materialize that burden will grow. The United States is a militarist nation. The question of disarmament is becoming a vital and burning problem for American labor. Across the broad expanse of the Atlantic, the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union, thru their government, will again and again tell the workers and farmers of this country how they ought to meet and solve this problem. They will again broadcast their plan to bring peace into the world. Let American labor give ear to these proposals.

Sigman in Desperate Effort to Provoke Split in Philadelphia

of the Sigman machine was designed to isolate the Communists by forcing a split, concentrating on a struggle against the New York left wing after it had been outlawed, destroy it by the use of an intensification of the methods used in the recent internal struggle and thus leave the Communists without a mass following in the garment industry—in or out of the union.

The danger has been averted and it was not only a danger for the Communists but for the I. L. G. W. Wednesday afternoon and evening the fate of the I. L. G. W. hung in the balance and one more instance of placing the entire union in jeopardy by the official war on the majority of the membership and its chosen representatives must be charged to the Sigman administration.

The left wing delegation returned to the convention this morning and after the agreement for a referendum vote on important matters by the officialdom, won a victory for proportional representation on the New York joint board.

The arrangement finally accepted on this question is that locals of not more than 250 members shall have one delegate. Not more than 500 two delegates, not more than 1,000 three delegates, not more than 3,000 five delegates and locals of more than 3,000 to have one delegate for each additional thousand or major fraction, providing, however, that no local shall have more than eight delegates. This system of representation was accepted unanimously but the left wing voted against the further proposal that in cities where there is no local of a thousand members the present system of representation, five delegates for each local regardless of size, shall continue.

While the New York locals have broken the control of the joint board by the machine at this convention, in all centers outside of New York the joint board apparatus remains in control of the Sigmanites.

The referendum vote may upset this control, however.

The convention agreed this morning on motion of Antonini to consider only the election of officers, proportional representation and amnesty and, on an amendment by Portnov, such other matters as the delegates may decide upon. Unless another crisis occurs the convention will finish its sessions tonight.

EUROPEAN LABOR SWINGS TO LEFT IN ELECTIONS

Communists Make Big Advances

By LEN DE CAUX.

BERLIN—(FP)—A general swing to the left thruout Europe is seen as the result of recent elections in Great Britain, Germany, Switzerland, Latvia, Belgium and Czecho-Slovakia. Not only have the workingclass parties made big progress, but their left wing, the Communist parties in particular, have made the most remarkable strides.

Communists Poll Million Votes.

In Czecho-Slovakia the Communist Party polled close to a million votes and proved the second strongest party (or the strongest party, according to some estimates, for the returns are not completed), increasing its parliamentary representation from 27 to 42 at the time of writing. In the Berlin municipal elections the Communists more than doubled their vote and now have 43 representatives instead of 20; and in Latvia, where the Communist party is illegal and could not put up any candidates, the left Social Democrats made the biggest gains, heading the list with 32 members out of a house of 100.

In Great Britain the November municipal elections show more than 40% increase in the strength of labor since three years ago. The Labor party gained 200 seats.

The Social Democrats in Germany increased their strength in the municipal elections, though not to the same extent as the Communists. In Berlin the Social Democratic party increased its representation from 46 to 75. In the parliamentary elections in Czechoslovakia, however, the Social-Democrats lost heavily, the Czech Social-Democrats receding from 52 to 29 members and the German Social-Democrats from 29 to 18.

Communists Gains.

In the Belgian municipal elections this fall the right parties have been outdistanced by the working-class parties. According to latest figures, the Conservatives (Catholics) have lost 11 seats and the Liberals 23, while the Socialists have gained 30 seats and the Communists 11. Swiss elections in October showed gains for both Socialists and Communists.

Attend Protest Meeting.

All workers are urged to attend next Sunday's mass meeting at Northwest Hall, corner North and Western avenues, under the joint auspices of the United States section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League and International Labor Defense. The meeting is set for 7:30 p. m. Altho it was necessary to arrange the demonstration almost on a moment's notice, and the date is now only two day's off, a turnout of Chicago workers is expected. William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER is to be one of the principal speakers. There will also be Negro, Cuban, Filipino and Chinese speakers.

Attack Labor Unions.

The campaign of terror continues unabated in Cuba. Labor organizations thruout the island are being attacked by the government. The National University is threatened with being closed down because the students support the sugar strikers and denounce the subservience of the government to American imperialism. Students and worker are looking for aid to the protests of their brothers in South and Central America, and especially to the working class of the United States, which, as the Cubans know, has its own score to settle with Wall Street.

Anti-imperialist protest meetings similar to the one in Chicago next Sunday, are to be arranged in all important cities of the United States. Rose Karsner, secretary of International Labor Defense, has wired to all branches of her organization to co-operate with the All-America Anti-Imperialist League in the arrangement of the meetings.

UNION OFFICIAL PRAISES SOVIET POWER PROGRAM

British Labor Head Visited Russia

were efforts of a line of brilliant scientists with the great Michael Faraday leading the way.

To Lighten Workers' Labors.

Electricity, one of the youngest children of scientific discovery, and still only in its adolescence, despite evidences of lusty vigor, comes as an eager friend to lighten human toil.

The wise administrators of the Soviet Republics intend, to the full, to employ the marvellous natural resources of their boundless country, to use its energy, not in the exploitation of human effort, but to bring a new happiness and comfort to its citizens, and a lightening of man's productive burdens.

In no other country in the world are the opportunities perhaps so great. In America and Canada, gifted with a bounteous supply of water power, competitive capitalists, jostling and fighting for the opportunity to exploit their country's resources for sordid gain, have prevented the development of a comprehensive scheme of electrification such as Russia is applying.

Bolshevik Plans.

Right from the early days of the Bolshevik revolution of 1917, the designers, experts, and working electricians of Russia have been planning the technical details to carry out the Soviet government's decision to develop a national system of electrification.

Plans have been drawn up for an intensive 15 years' work for the electrification of industry.

The country is divided into 10 areas each with 81 electric stations. The stations in the areas are being linked up so that in the event of failure of supply due to any cause, an alternative service can be supplied by the remaining stations.

A variety of primary motive power is being utilized, water power, low-grade coal, and peat being employed.

Largest Station.

The Volkhofstroy Station is one of the largest of the stations. The total cost of building the station is estimated to be about eight million pounds. Work was commenced in 1919, and remarkable progress his been made.

Not the least of the problems which the government had to face was to attract a sufficiency of skilled labor for the erection of the station. What has happened in this formerly obscure country district is that a miniature town has been temporarily erected.

The number of men actually working on the scheme when George Hicks and I arrived there, a couple of months ago, was over 7,000. The maximum number employed was 11,000, but as the work is nearing completion the numbers are being reduced.

Communal Spirit Manifest.

There is a communal spirit everywhere manifested amongst the people.

They are supremely proud of the great achievement which is being accomplished under their eyes. Imagine these peasants and workers, who formerly knew practically nothing of those gigantic electrical developments with which more industrialized countries are familiar, now themselves proudly undertaking the immense task, completing this super-power station. It is hardly to be wondered at that they are eager to display the product of their own work to the interested visitor. Moreover, there is a warm affection for the British workers which is radiated by the Russian masses, and which is almost embarrassing in its fulsomeness.

Workers Greet British.

As soon as we arrived at the railway station we were met by several hundreds of people, headed by the workers' band, and to the inspiring strains of the "International" we made our way from the train.

Speeches of welcome were inevitable, and before proceeding on our investigation we had to inspect a detachment of the Red army, and another of the militia.

Then we went forward with the band still tootling bravely, passing on our way concert rooms, cinemas, theaters, hospitals, workers' clubs, and many other institutions which have been erected provisionally for the workers engaged on building the station.—Reprinted from the Sunday Worker, London.

U. S. Business Eager for Soviet Recognition

THE lower photograph of the rich Baku oil fields shows why the American capitalists are eager for the recognition of the Soviet Union. With the recognition of the Soviet Union, they expect to get concessions as rich as this one in the Union. The Soviet government refuses to hand out concessions before diplomatic relations are fully resumed. The upper photo shows some soldiers of the Red army of the Soviet Union. It is the militant daring and courage of these soldiers—workers and peasants—that has beaten the Anglo-American-Franco-Japanese intervention, destroyed Kolchack, Denikin, Wrangel Yudenitch, and other counter-revolutionaries and is now guarding the Union from any attacks by the capitalist powers that are determined to destroy the Soviet Union. The picture in the upper right hand corner is a photograph of a ship that has been subsidized as a freight-carrier. This vessel recently brought a cargo of Russian products to the United States. The inset is Boris Skvirsky, the unofficial representative of the Soviet Union, who is now in Washington, D. C.

V. S. N. H. (Supreme Council of National Economy). The interest of developing Soviet industry demands the consolidation in the Prombank of all its credit activities, particularly centralizing these financial resources which are to be used for long term industrial credits.

The vice-president of the V. S. N. H., U. L. Piatakoff, pointed out that during these three years the Prombank became the largest (not counting the state bank of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics) credit institution in the country, with a 500,000,000 rubles on its balance sheet and with a 1,500,000,000 rubles turnover in loans and discounts to industry. The bank became the center of reserves for industry and the main organizer of its credit turn-over, serving the needs of its clients with the utmost of satisfaction. Speaking of the fundamental problems of the Prombank in light of its activities in the immediate future. U. L. Piatakoff pointed out that the bank must take the most active part in the operating long-term industrial credits as well as to greatly enlarge its foreign operations.

Bank Aids Industry.

On being interviewed by the reporter of the Commercial and Industrial News (Moscow), president of the board of directors of the Prombank, V. N. Ksandroff, gave most important figures, which characterized the achievments of the bank for these three years. Comparing the balance-sheet of the third year as of October 1st with the balance sheet of the first year, Ksandroff showed that every rouble of the initial capital increased to 35 roubles; every rouble of the first years current accounts balance increased to 314 roubles, and every rouble of the first year's loans and discounts became 504 roubles in the balance sheet of the third year. The balance sheet of the Prombank at the beginning of the present year of operation amounts to 571,000,000 roubles as against 276,000,000 roubles on the same date in 1924 and 87,000,000 roubles in 1923. Prombank has at present 82 branches in the territory of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics in addtion to 150 large factory and mill cash-offices. The indebtedness of industry alone to the bank amounts at present to more than 270,000,000 roubles.

Enlarge Factories.

The Peoples Commissar of Finance, G. Y. Sokolnikoff, showed in the Commercial-Industrial News the great importance of the functions carried out by the Prombank in the Soviet Republics' economy, and the enormous role which it must bear in the mobilization of financial resources for the restoring and enlarging of the basic capital in Soviet industry. The government planning commission in the person of its president, A. D. Tzurupa and vice-presidents, G. M. Krzhizhanovsky and I. T. Smilga, also indicated on the pages of the Commercial-Industrial News the exceptional results attained by the Prombank and the high place which it now occupies in the credit system and in the whole economic life of the Soviet Union.

The enormous importance of the work of the Prombank in the whole economy of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics was likewise indicated in the same newspaper by vice-president of the supreme administration board of the metal industry, V. Nozktauk; by president of the board of directors of the State Bank, Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, N. G. Tumanoff; by member of the presidium of the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions, M. P. Vladimiroff, by president of the board of directors of the Sugar Trust, Kalmanovitch; by vice-president of the Textile Syndicate, Eromine; by vice-president of the supreme board of the cotton committee, Nazaroff; and by many others of the most important offiers in the economic life of the Soviet Union.

Importance of Oil Industry.

The president of the board of directors of the Azerbeidjan Oil Trust, Serebrovsky, in his telegraphic greetings to the Prombank expressed the wish for continued progress on the road mapped out during its former activities, and indicated the exceptional importance of the work of the Prombank in the development of the oil industry as well as its role in strengthening the financial condition of Azerbaidjan.

From the numerous articles which appeared on the Prombank's third anniversary in all the central and provincial newspapers, characterizing the role of the Prombank in the work of restoring industry and other branches of public economy, attention must be called to the article by the assistant manager of the foreign department of the supreme council of national economy of the Soviet Union, M. Roshal. He points out the role which the Prombank must play in the animation of the Soviet's import and export business in the following words:

Import Machinery.

"As much as the importation of industrial machinery, which is necessary for enlargement of the basic capital of our industry, requires long term credits, the Prombank, as the special bank of industry, can and must play the main role as the natural guarantor for our industry when it secures the necessary credits from abroad."

COURT DISMISSES CASES AGAINST A. C. W. PICKETS

International Drops Framed-Up Charges

Justice as dispensed in Chicago against the workers during labor disputes was luridly shown up when the 80 and more cases of Amalgamated Clothing Worker unionists arrested while the 19-week International Tailoring company strike was on were dismissed one and all. From the petty charge of disorderly conduct to the ominous accusation of conspiracy to murder every unionist is set free on motion of the defense counsel. The overwhelming bail bonds fixed by the municipal court, amounting in one case to $105,000 alone, have been released and the Amalgamated can once more use its cash for direct trade union purposes.

State Against Workers.

As if to point the moral that the police and the courts are always against labor during a strike, each case was dismissed for lack of evidence. The police and the daily papers had made a tremendous affair of the raids on the union offices, had pictures of the arrested union officials and had stories day after day of sinister plots discovered just in the nick of time. Now all this alleged evidence, the firearms, the acid, the brass knuckles, the bombs, the threats, the assaults, the shots, the burning of a truck with mail, all are forgotten and the whole case goes to pot for lack of evidence.

The explanation is simply that the union won the strike. The company settled with labor. The auxiliary forces of the boss, the police, the courts and the dailies, have therefore been restored to a peace footing in the Amalgamated sector.

MILLINERY UNION STARTS DRIVE TO ORGANIZE SHOPS

Hand Milliners Have Little Organization

By ART SHIELDS.
(Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 17—The hand millinery workers of New York and a half dozen other great cities are highly skilled workers who put their individuality into their headgear creations but their wages are only half those of the machine workers in the industry because the latter are organized and the hand workers are not. So while the winter season is at its height special organizers for the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union are putting the case up to them in a continent-wide campaign in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Montreal, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Union Shop Conditions.

In the union shops the 44-hour week prevails; protection against discharge and a minimum wage of $65 a week for operators. In the nonunion hand work shops basic hours are longer with uncontrolled overtime; the boss hires and fires as he pleases and wages are only half as high.

The machine shops have been solidly organized for only a few years. A big strike in 1919 was followed in 1921-23 by a sustained organizing campaign that brot that branch of the industry into union relations and raised minimum wages $10 a week. Now in this first big drive on the hand work shops where conditions are worse than they were in the machine shops when the latter were unorganized the union finds a fertile field. Shops range in size to 300 workers. The first step is the formation of shop committees which present demands to the employers, the union furnishing the workers with meeting places and organization methods and eventually the union steps in officially.

Supreme Court Finds Small Responsible for "Taking" State Funds

SPRINGFIELD, Dec. 17—The Illinois supreme court upheld the decision of the circuit court of Sangamon county making Governor Len Small responsible for interest withheld from the state while he was in office as state treasurer. The amount of default was estimated at $2,000,000.

Small opponents are taking steps to force him to vacate the governorship as the state constitution prohibits a debtor to the state from holding office.

Senate to Consider Debt Funding Pacts

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17. — Altho facing a conflict of legislative powers with the house, administration leaders of the senate were ready to begin consideration of the six foreign debt funding pacts, under which the governments of Italy, Belgium, Roumania, Czecho-Slovakia, Esthonia and Latvia will repay their war loans. The bills were favorably reported to the senate by the finance committee with a unanimous recommendation for their ratification.

American Imperialists Worried as Chileans Maintain Deep Silence

SANTIAGO, Chile, Dec. 17.—American imperialists are worried as all the Santiago newspapers are silent on the Tacna-Arica plebiscite activities. They do not even say whether Chile's reported appeal has been forwarded to President Coolidge. Considerable interest is taken in the question whether the plebiscite commission will continue its work in Tacna and Arica or transfer its activities to Washington. There is a question as to who would be left in charge should "Black-Jack" Pershing go to Washing for a conference with Coolidge.

LABOR DEFENSE CHICAGO BAZAAR AIDS PRISONERS

Big Sum Goes to Zeigler Defense

(I. L. D. Press Service.)

One of the most successful bazaars yet held by the radical movement of Chicago, was the unanimous verdict of all those who attended the bazaar given by the International Labor Defense of this city and which lasted for four hectic nights.

The local committee announces that it has already turned in to the national office the sum of fifteen hundred dollars as proceeds from the affair, which go for the Zeigler defense.

Not only were those who attended the bazaar given their fill of an ordinary good time but they were treated to special features which were given by the various nationalities who cooperated in making the affair a success. Besides this, Max Shachtman, who recently returned from Zeigler, gave a short account of the frame-up and called upon all to aid the miners who are putting up such a brave defense.

Had Good Time.

On the last day of the bazaar the Young Workers League orchestra played to the swaying of innumerable feet. Two young Negro comrades, Hughes and Galloway, treated the audience to a genuine Charleston dancing exhibition which was pronounced good by all those who had the slightest appreciation for terpsichorean feats.

The local committee especially extends its thanks to the Karl Marx Scandinavian Club for its energetic co-operation in making the bazaar go over big, as well as to all other comrades and organizations who helped to put the affair over and help the Zeigler miners in their case.

Criminal Syndicalism Victims' Strike Nears End of Third Month

SAN QUENTIN, Cal.—(FP)—The strike of 21 criminal syndicalism prisoners in San Quentin is still on after nearly three months. It has now assumed the nature of a lockout, for the warden has ordered that even men seriously ill from their dungeon and solitary experiences are to be kept there indefinitely. Underground letters state that five of the men are in a dangerous condition. One of the men in solitary is Tom Connors, twice sentenced to five years for "jury tampering" because as secretary of the California Defense committee he sent out circulars appealing for repeal of the criminal syndicalism law.

The Finnish Section Convention---A Triumph for the Party

By C. E. Ruthenberg, Gen. Secy., Workers (Communist) Party.

THE outcome of the Finnish Section convention was a welcome surprise to every supporter of our party. The enemies of our party had looked to the Finnish convention for a split which would bring disorganization into the ranks of the party. But in place of a split or even a bitter factional struggle the convention took a unanimous stand in support of the central executive committee and the Communist International.

Many comrades, even those who are loyal supporters of the present line of the party and its leadership are not clear as to how this victory for the party was achieved. The Finnish Section of the party had been from all appearances on the extreme right of the party. Due to its many years of development as a language section, its many institutions, newspapers, halls, co-operatives, etc., the party reorganization, now being carried thru energetically, is a greater shock to the Finnish Section than to any other section of the party. The fact that the Finnish comrades while carrying on good and effective work among the Finnish workers, had not been drawn into the general work of the party, was another obstacle in carrying thru the reorganization.

Also there appeared before the party convention, signs of the development of an extreme right wing opposition to the line of the party and the Comintern and against the reorganization of the Finnish Section which would draw its members into the shop and street nuclei.

How the Victory Was Achieved.

HOW was it, that in the face of all these difficulties, unanimous decision was arrived at which was not only endorsed by the delegates to the convention but by all the leading comrades present—editors of the Finnish Section papers, the business managers of the papers, the former secretary of the Finnish Section and the members of the former bureau? How was it that not only was a unanimous decision arrived at but the whole leadership of the Finnish Section is going to work, even enthusiastically, to carry thru the reorganization of the party among the Finnish members, to draw these members into the shop nuclei and street nuclei and to secure their support for the party work among the broad masses of this country?

That this is the attitude of the Finnish comrades is shown by the letters and resolutions appearing in the Finnish press contributed by comrades and party units in all parts of the country. These letters and resolutions show that a new wind is blowing in the Finnish Section, a wind that means stronger support than ever before for our party and the Comintern by the Finnish comrades.

The answer to the questions above lies in the fact that the misconception and misunderstanding among the Finnish comrades were dissipated thru thoro discussions of all the party problems and those of the Finnish Section between the delegates and leading comrades at the convention and the representatives of the central executive committee.

The decision of the convention was arrived at on the third day of the convention. During those three days the views of the central executive committee on the party situation and on the questions peculiar to the Finnish Section were discussed fully and in detail at both the open sessions of the convention and at an executive session at which the delegates and leading comrades only were present. The representatives of the central executive committee, Comrades Ruthenberg, Lovestone and Cannon asked the delegates to speak their opinions freely and to discuss every question of party policy and tactics, to raise all the difficulties that they found in regard to the party situation and the situation of the Finnish Section.

Wrong Viewpoints Corrected.

DISCUSSION in the Finnish convention and with the leading comrades brought out many points which explained the line which the Finnish Section had followed in the past.

One important factor in determining this line was the one-sided information which the Finnish membership had received. Many misleading ideas had been planted in their minds thru not receiving all the facts in regard to the party situation. These ideas existed even among the delegates. It required only frank discussion to show that they had no foundation and were based upon incomplete information. Such was the view that the former Foster group represented the American elements in the party, the belief that it was the duty of the Finnish Section to take a stand as a bloc in the party controversey and similar ideas.

Forces for Unity.

A STRONG factor in securing the unification of the convention for the party and the Comintern was the need to show a united front against the social-democratic and syndicalist elements, both of which had been looking forward to the convention in gleeful expectation that it would result in a split out of which they could gain profit.

The Finnish comrades also were strongly inclined to the view that it was their duty to take a stand for the party as represented by the central executive committee against any faction or group which was carrying on a struggle against the party and the central executive committee.

Some of the leaders of the Finnish Section, who had supported the Foster group in the party prior to the national convention, thought that there was no danger of right wing deviation and opposition to reorganization in the Finnish Section. When this danger developed in a menacing form they realized their error. This development was analogous to the development of the Cannon-Dunne group within the Foster group in the party generally. These Finnish comrades saw in the Minneapolis resolution a threat against the party and Comintern and found that there was a stronger Loreist sentiment in the Finnish Section than they had reckoned with. They were unwilling under such circumstances to continue in a position of opposition, thru which they would encourage and strengthen this opportunistic Lore sentiment and therefore took their stand with those comrades who were energetically supporting the central executive committee and the Comintern, in order to create a united front against this right danger.

Proletarian Element Comes to the Front.

THE victory for the party was not, however, achieved entirely in the convention. Discussion among the Finnish membership during the period from the party convention to the convention of the Finnish Section had cleared up many misconceptions. A strong proletarian element had come to the front in the branches among the rank and file of the Finnish comrades and this proletarian element sent to the convention delegates who supported the line of the party and the Comintern.

The Question of Property.

A FEW extreme right wing leaders of the Finnish Section had endeavored to create a movement against the party thru raising the bugaboo that the central executive committee desired to take over into its own hands all the property owned by the Finnish Section branches, including halls, printing plants and so forth. On the basis of this misrepresentation some opposition was stirred up in the Finnish branches.

The representatives of the central executive committee explained to the convention that the attitude of the C. E. C. was that the institutions which had been built up by the Finnish members for service to the working class movement must remain as instruments to the working class movement as represented by the Workers (Communist) Party, but that form and manner of the ownership was a question to be decided in accordance with the peculiar conditions existing in each case. The central executive committee had no purpose, had no proposal to concentrate this ownership in its own hands; it proposed to the convention, that the question of ownership be so arranged and safeguarded that these institutions for work among the masses will continue to serve our movement.

This viewpoint of the central executive committee blasted the last hope of the extreme right wing opposition and their position was unanimously repudiated and condemned by the convention.

The Present Situation.

THE results of the convention manifested in endorsement of the unity resolution, election of a bureau, and the issuance of a manifesto by unanimous vote, arrived at thru the freest possible discussion, greatly strengthened the party. This does not mean however that the crisis in the Finnish Section has been entirely overcome. The Finnish Section is going thru the crisis of bolshevization, just as our party is in a crisis growing out of the bolshevization of the party.

The extreme right wing of the Finnish Section and its support among the rank and file of the Finnish membership, has been, however, greatly weakened. New problems will arise as the reorganization in the Finnish Section is completed. There are difficulties still to be overcome. The campaign to make the membership of the Finnish Section a Bolshevik membership, understanding the party problems, as in the party as a whole, is still to be completed.

The convention however laid a solid foundation for this work. The loyal and earnest support which the leading Finnish comrades are giving to the work of reorganization, the determined stand against any new factionalism in the party, and for support of the central executive committee, and loyalty to the Communist International, is working as a powerful influence among the Finnish membership.

The difficulties which are before the Finnish Section will be overcome. The problem of reorganization will be solved. The great mass of the Finnish membership will be loyal supporters and workers in the reorganized Workers (Communist) Party of America, the American Section of the Communist International.

Daily Worker Agency in New York Sells Much Needed Booklet

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Mass singing of "The International" will become a reality instead of merely an aspiration in New York from now on. Ten thousand copies of a little booklet containing words and music of this song have just been published by The DAILY WORKER New York Agency. The booklet is vest pocket size, very convenient to carry along to meetings. So now instead of the singing of the International resolving itself into a few scattered solos about the middle of the second verse, New Yorkers will be able to carry the entire song to its inspiring conclusion.

In addition to the song the booklet contains a calendar with those dates printed in red that are of special significance to the New York movement, a list of "Coming Events" giving the most important affairs arranged for the next few months, a list of "Dates to Remember" giving revolutionary anniversaries, and a list of New York addresses and telephone numbers of institutions etc. that every reader of The DAILY WORKER should know.

A copy of the booklet will be given for every ten cent donation to The DAILY WORKER made to the New York DAILY WORKER Agency. Bring or send a dollar to Room 32, at 108 East 14th Street and you'll receive ten copies. When you see how neat and useful this booklet is you'll want to supply all your friends.

UNEMPLOYMENT ON INCREASE IN GERMAN CITIES

Close Down Rolling Mills in Ruhr

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—On November 1 the government was giving unemployment doles to a total of 332,907 and by Nov. 15 this number had risen to 471,000, an increase of 138,093, about 30 per cent. While figures for the end of November are not yet available, it is reliably estimated that by that time no less than 500,000 people were being assisted by the government. Unemployment in part time also increased considerably.

Close Down Ruhr Mills

Short time work is steadily increasing in the glass and porcelain industries. This is also true of the metal industry and the engineering trades, including the manufacture of automobiles, motorcycles, sewing machines and similar products. Many workers have been discharged from the rolling mills and glass furnaces in the Ruhr and in Westphalia, while employment in coal and other lines also fell off during the month, with the exception of the brown coal industry of Saxony where there was some demand for skilled workmen. Conditions remain the same in the jewelry and watch industry in the Rhineland. Even in the chemical industry a number of workmen have been thrown out of work.

The sugar beet harvest created a slight demand for agricultural workers. Cotton spinning mills are still working full time while knitting and weaving mills are on part time.

The average wage in the building wood working, metallurgical, printing and railway branches is now 44 percent above the 1913 average for skilled workers and 58.3 per cent above it for unskilled workers. Altho the wage indexes would make it appear that the purchasing power of German labor was practically the same as in 1913, this impression is not correct. In reality, the general standard of living of German labor is below prewar.

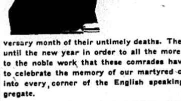
WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

New Lenin, Liebknecht and Luxemburg Pamphlet Published.

A long needd booklet on the lives of three of the most outstanding revolutionary martyrs has been published by the Young Workers (Communist) League of America.



The pamphlet deals not only with the biography of each of the workers' leaders, but also with the lessons of their lives, the significance of their work, and the substance of their teachings. Max Shachtman, made fit by his long study of this subject, has written the book.

It is attractively bound and well illustrated with three beautiful portraits.

January marks the anniversary month of their untimely deaths. The pamphlets are not to be released until the new year in order to all the more fittingly bring out its dedication to the noble work that these comrades have done. There is no better way to celebrate the memory of our martyred comrades than to distribute them into every corner of the English speaking world—wherever workers congregate.

They have been priced at fifteen cents retail and ten cents in bundle orders of ten or more. At this low price they should run into several editions and should reach every worker, especially the young worker. They can be had by sending orders to the national office, Young Workers League of America, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill. Due to the large demand orders should be sent in immediately so that they can be delivered before the memorial meeting.

CHICAGO LEAGUE GREETS BRITISH COMMUNISTS.

Laying Off Telegraph Operators

REPLACED BY $15 YOUNG WORKERS

By Young Worker Correspondent.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The "Multiplex," a telegraph apparatus which has been perfected to an extent that it can turn out twice the amount of work of a Morse telegraph instrument, is slowly but surely driving the telegraph operators into the army of the unemployed. This system of telegraphing is already in operation in all the principal cities thruout the United States.

Girls are employed for as low as $18 a week. All one needs in order to operate a "Multiplex" is some knowledge of typewriting. Young workers learn how to operate the machine in a very short period of time, thus the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph are at liberty to discharge anyone they dislike or have no use for. They pick on young workers, break them in on the "job" and the rest is easy.

Already telegraph operators are being laid off in Kansas City where the principal telegraph machine in operation is the "Multiplex." This is happening at the same time that the Western Union announces that for its banner 12 months the company has been able to put $80,000,000 back into the property.

Better Connections Needed in Young Workers (Communist) League.

With the unification of the Young Workers (Communist) League and the definite start made towards mass work in most of the districts, we must begin to realistically consider the problem of having closer connections between the various units of the league and the national organization.

Many of the districts have been sending in regular detailed reports on their work and life and still others have completely neglected this important duty. We must acquire an organizational responsibility and consciousness. The first step in this direction should be the sending of lengthy detailed reports by the districts to the national office.

OLDEST AND YOUNGEST WORKER CORRESPONDENTS OF A RUSSIAN PAPER

Czech League Helps Strike.

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia. — The most important feature of the mass work of the Young Communist League is the active participation in the north Bohemian textile workers' strike which broke out at the beginning of October and was transformed into a political strike, because of the provocative attitude of the employers. The league has taken all the necessary measures for this intervention. The district conference in Reichenberg on Oct. 11 adopted a manifesto to the young textile workers which takes a definite attitude to the special youth demands and the general political slogans of the Y. C. I.

Composition of German League Convention Which Voted for Comintern.

BERLIN, Germany—The recent congress of the Young Communist League of Germany which voted overwhelmingly for the line of the Comintern on the German party question was composed of a majority of young workers. The congress was attended by 159 delegates, of which 108 were also members of the Communist Party and 37 were trade union officials.

Youth United Front in Austria.

VIENNA, Austria—The central committee of the Young Communist League of Austria on October 17 addressed a letter to the league of the young socialist workers, the united young socialist workers, and to the federation of all apprentice sections inviting these organizations to hold a joint congress of the Austrian working class youth for the middle of December. The report of the Austrian youth delegation, the problem of world trade union unity, and the economic struggle of the working youth will be important questions on the agenda.

Hoglund Youth Turn Communist.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden—A former Stockholm district organization of the A. U. F. (Hoglund Youth) which left the A. U. F. some time ago, has joined the Young Communist League at a meeting which had representatives from both the Y. C. L. and the former Hoglund youth organization.

LEWIS TACTICS KILLED W. VA. MINERS' STRIKE

Anthracite in for Same Kind of Betrayal

By R. M.
(Worker Correspondent)

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 17.—A coal strike, a typical John L. Lewis strike, has had its beginning, duration, and end in the northern part of West Virginia. We know what that means—defeat for the miners.

Just as Lewis is now plotting to betray the anthracite miners so has he succeeded in losing the demands for which the miners of northern West Virginia struck—not thru secret conferences or negotiations in this case but, thru indifference and totally ignoring the fact that this section was striking. Evidently, about 1,000 men are not of sufficient importance to occupy even the slightest thought of the labor-class loving (?) president.

Lewis Tactics Discourage Men.

This section, which compromises the miners of Glendale and Moundsville was non-union but when the coal operators attempted to reduce wages down to the 1917 scale the men struck and organized, joining the U. M. W. of A., district No. 6. Great enthusiasm for the strike was at first shown but due to the inactivity of the John L. Lewis machine some lost heart.

Instead of doing anything effective and keeping up the courage of the miners only a few hypocritical meetings were held presided over by the local preachers, part of the Lewis machine, and also attended by the inevitable representatives of the law. Yes, the usual dope was handed out—for the men to strike peacefully and interfere with no one; in other words, let the poor scabs go to work if they so desired.

Trouble of course arose. Many were arrested, prison sentences and fines imposed for even peaceful picketting. All sorts of injunctions were passed and lifted until it was impossible to tell whether a certain injunction was yet in effect or had been lifted. Scabbing was begun shortly after the strike but the men were powerless to do anything for lack of the right sort of leadership. John L. as usual forgot all about the men. Business men as usual of course also did their share in breaking the strike.

How Strikes Are Lost.

Now, although John L. Lewis has not declared the strike at an end it really has been lost. Practically all of the men were forced for lack of cash and the cold weather to return to work at the 1917 scale, on an open shop basis. A handful is still striking, but most of them were glad to return to work claiming they have steadier work than they did—steadier certainly, for are they not supplying scab coal to offset the shortage in the anthracite?

However, conditions are miserable. Some of the men work as much as 12, 14, and even 16 hours on a night shift—forced to do it to meet their expenses and offset the cut in wages.

Of course the miners' union has met its death. Oh well, what does the loss of about 1,000 men to the union mean to John L.? He is after bigger game. One poor little coal strike lost and a handful of 1,000 men to the union is not of sufficient importance to even give a thought to—from John L. Lewis' viewpoint.

WORKER CORRESPONDENTS OF UNITED STATES AND THE SOVIET UNION WILL HAVE EXCHANGE OF CORRESPONDENCE

Here is good news for worker correspondents.

Bela Kun, head of the Agitprop Department of the Communist International, has just written the editor of The DAILY WORKER outlining a plan for an exchange of worker correspondence between the United States and the Union of Soviet Republics.

Our worker correspondents are all deeply interested in everything that goes on in the workshops, the factories, the mills, the mines of the Soviet Union. You have already noticed that this section of The DAILY WORKER has contained some worker correspondence from the Soviet Union. This will be increased.

But the workers in the Soviet Union also want to hear from the workers in this country. It has, therefore, been arranged to send the worker correspondence from The DAILY WORKER to the Agitprop Department of the Communist International. The best of this will be selected for publication in the Soviet press.

In this way closer relations will be developed between the workers of the United States and the Soviet Union. They will learn to understand better each others problems.

This service will also be increased to include worker correspondence from other countries as well.

Let us know what feature of working class life in the Soviet Union, or in other countries that you are interested in, and The DAILY WORKER will let your wishes be known and see that they are fulfilled. Send all letters to the Editor, DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

CASE OF FRANK CORISH, COAL MINER OF MOUNDSVILLE, W. VA.

By R. M., Worker Correspondent.

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Dec. 17.—A petition was filed at Charleston, W. Va., for a rehearing of the application for a writ of errors in the case of Frank Corish, a coal mine picket who had been sentenced last May at Moundsville, under the Redman act, to ten years in the state penitentiary.

Corish was one of the miners who at the outset of the coal strike in this region picketed the house of a scab at Glendale, last April. About 20 altogether were arrested and indicted under the Redman act, which carried a prison sentence of from two to ten years. Corish was tried, found guilty, and sentenced to ten years at the state prison on a conspiracy charge. The scab, however, who had succeeded in wounding one of the picketters fatally was let off scot free. Needless to say that the picketting had resulted in no harm to the scab or to the coal company's property, but of course an example had to be made to intimidate the rest of the miners.

What shows clearly the class struggle and the class injustice in this sentence is the fact that a few months afterward a bank embezzler, who had succeeded in embezzling funds amounting to over half a million dollars while acting as cashier at the Benwood Bank, Benwood, W. Va.—money deposited by orphans and widows of working men—and who if the law had cared to do so would have about fifteen indictements against him, was tried only on one indictment and given only ten years. All of the other indictments were annulled.

Embezzler Has Swell Vacation.

Corish, if he is to serve his sentence will of course meet with the lot of the ordinary convict. Leach, the embezzler in question, however, is reported having a very "soft" job indeed, working in the office, and it is expected that for good behavior his sentence will be lessened.

Indications point towards the fact that if the state supreme court refuses to grant the writ of errors on the second hearing the case will be brought before the supreme court of the country.

Two Women in a Grocery Store

By a Worker Correspondent

Overheard in a grocery store at West 22nd street, Chicago.

The woman talking is the mother of four children. She is employed in a factory at 39th and Robey Streets.

Working Woman—Yes, missus I had to quit my job today on account the doctor told me every girl that works there about a year gets the T. B. (tuberculosis) and on account I have four children the doctor persuaded me to quit right away. You can't imagine how I hated to because if I worked all week I made as much as $16.00 a week, more than my husband makes. Of course, it wasn't easy. We girls had to stand on our feet 10 hours a day—but just think of the money we made. You know it is very slack now in the stock yards and often my husband works only 4 or 5 hours a day and he only makes 38 cents an hour. But I'm going to hurry up with my washing and look for another job. My mother-in-law will take care of the two little ones and the other two, if you see them in the mud will you be so kindly and chase them in the house, missus.

Grocery Woman—Oh, don't worry about those two big kids. You know one is five and the other is going on seven years. Do you remember missus when you and I were kids?

Oh, say, missus, I think they need a dishwasher in that restaurant across the street. Why don't you go there and tell the boss I sent you. I know him for a long time. He generally comes for the vegetables that I can't sell anymore. If you tell him that I sent you, maybe he'll give you the job. It pays $9 and your dinners at noon.

Working Woman — Oh, Missus, wouldn't that be nice. I am going right home and put another apron on so I look a little respectable. What is the boss's name, Jim, alright missus, I thank you for putting me wise to that job. Oh, Ja-a, did you figure my book already? How much do I owe you now? . . . $38.28, well I hope I land that job so I'll be able to pay you a little each pay day.

Grocery Woman—That's alright missus, I know you are honest. But you know if you wouldn't be able to pay me some, naturally I would have to stop you—but. I hope you land that job in the restaurant and then everything will be alright again, won't it missus?

Working Woman—Well, I got to go now. I think my cabbage is burning. I hope not. I'll go to Jim's tonight and see if he'll hire me. Good-bye.

SILK STRIKERS DRAW CROWDS AT MASS MEETING

Textile Workers Pledge Support in Fight

By A Worker Correspondent

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., Dec. 17.—Silk workers in Hudson county, New Jersey, proved, by their rousing approval of what the speakers said at a mass meeting, that they were wholeheartedly in support of the Hillcrest silk mill strikers who are now in their eighth week of struggle.

This was the first time, except for a previous demonstration held by the United Front Committee of Textile Workers, that such a meeting had been held in this part of New Jersey for many years. The crowd of textile workers that came filled the hall and responded enthusiastically to the call for moral and financial support of the strikers.

The speakers at the meeting were Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Carlo Tresca who spoke in Italian and Albert Weisbord, organizer of the Hillcrest strikers. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn stressed the fact that the only reason why textile workers had to fight again and again against the same threats of the bosses was because, while they knew how to fight they did not know how to hold on to what they won by organization. Organization was the crying need of the hour and their only salvation. Weisbord spoke on the significance of this strike which was being prolonged so by the bosses. He pointed out that all over the world the bosses were driving against the standards of living of the workers and now had launched their first big drives in America against the textile workres. The Hillcrest strike marked a milestone in the way which the working class of this country had to travel in resisting the wage cuts and doubling up of work by the textile bosses. These remarks by the speakers were enthusiastically applauded by the audience of textile workers.

The United Front Committee in charge of this strike hopes to crystallize the favorable sentiment at the meeting by establishing temporary mill committees in all of the mills of the district. If the strike is very prolonged perhaps it will be necessary to exert the greatest pressure on other mills to force the bosses to come to terms by means of sympathetic strikes. This will be done as soon as possible. In the meantime picketing is going on just the same before the mill and is preventing the boss from running his plant and turning out cloth in any quantity.

All textile workers in Hudson county mills who wish to organize a workers' council and mill committee in their mill should write or visit the headquarters of the United Front Committee of Textile Workers there at 393 Broadway, Union City, New Jersey.

Pocketbook Makers' Convention Proves to Be Exclusive

By A Worker Correspondent

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—When Sylvan A. Pollack representing the Intrenational Labor Defense, handed his credential to the national convention of the Pocketbook Makers' Union of America, which is being held at the socialist party headquarters, the Rand School, he was informed by the convention credential committee, that a motion had been passed by the convention not to give the floor to the representative of any "outside organization."

It is remarkable that a union convention can have the point of view, that the International Labor Defense, which is a workers' defense organization, is an "outside" organization when its record in the past has been one of being "inside" of the battles of the working class on every occasion.

A Side Line in Corporation Graft

By A Worker Correspondent.

WEST ALLIS, Wisc., Dec. 17.—In addition to the direct and indirect exploitation of the workers in the shops, there is going on, with the help of public officials, a system of unloading on the backs of the workers the greater part of the corporation share of the public burdens. An instance of this is shown by the following facts.

C. Ashenbrenner, a worker of this city, who by dint of enormous sacrifices has managed to acquire a nominal title to some real estate, is compelled to pay $160 on 30 feet of frontage for city light installation; while the enormously wealthy Allis Chalmers corporation is only required to pay $80 per front acre for the same purpose.

There are undoubtedly many more working class victims of this bearfaced steal.

This reprehensible misuse of public power can however be easily understood, when one realizes, that the city government and the Allis Chalmers corporation are to all intents and purposes dominated by the same crowd. But in spite of this plain domination by grafting business interests, it seems that the system is still considered not sufficiently satisfactory.

There is a widespread agitation being fostered here to change to a system of city manager control.

It is made to appear, as if the workers ought to be interested in the question as to whether a council or a city manager shall deliver their interests to the tender mercies of the bosses.

The workers, who are everywhere the vast majority, must organize for the overthrow of corporation rule and their political hirelings in the government, and establish their own exclusive rule, both in shops and in the city.

MEN ROBBED AND KEPT IN FEAR OF ARREST IN WEST VA. SCAB MINES

(SECOND PRIZE)

By A Worker Correspondent

GALLOWAY, W. Va., Dec. 17.—I want to tell the readers of The DAILY WORKER how the open shop coal masters here are treating the miners in the Bear Mountain field.

I have a statement from one of the unorganized coal miners in this field in which he tells of working thirteen shifts at 12 hours each and in that time he had loaded 159 tons and 60 tons of pick coal. For this he was credited with $102.42. Out of this he was charged $27.04 as follows: $20 for not being able to load whole cut of coal out in one day and for leaving a bottom down, and to explain the $7.04 he received the following notice in his envelope: "What you are charged $7.04 for is none of your damned business and if you ask for the same I will turn you over to the state police and they will put you in the pen."

So this poor deluded miner came to me and asked me what to do and how to get his money from his master. The answer I gave him was "go back and organize others with yourself and then you will be able to accomplish something."

After going over this tonnage we find that this man under the union scale would receive $179.50 but under the non-union or the so-called "American plan" he received only $75.38 for 13 shifts at 12 hours each.

So this is the way the open shop coal masters are treating their men in the non-union mines of West Virginia.

We wish to notify all men to stay away from these fields as the conditions are deplorable here and elsewhere in the non-union coal mines of West Virginia.

Toledo Police Threaten Workers with Arrest for Doing Party Work

By BUEHLER
(Worker Correspondent)

Eight workers started from the the Workers' Book Shop at 8.15 on Sunday morning to distribute three thousand leaflets from house to house in a working class district. This leaflet was issued by the Workers (Communist) Party and called upon the workers and farmers of this country to defend the working class government of Russia.

The comrades organized themselves into four teams and started down the street. All was going well till one of the comrades noticed a copper riding around on a motorcycle. He stopped at a fire house, the comrades concluded there was a fire in the district. About fifteen minutes later, as one of the teams was going up a street, along comes another instrument of the state, a policeman, dressed in a nice blue uniform, hardware polished to a high degree. One of the comrades took a look at this tool of capitalism, said good morning, and handed him one of the leaflets. He accepted and started to read it. When he discovered the significance of the leaflet he ordered the comrade to halt and asked him if he had a permit to pass out leaflets.

Although the city law requires none the comrades answered he thought that one of the committee had it.

In the excitement the comrade said to this policeman: "Why! Senator Borah is making a desperate fight in the senate to have the government of this free country recognize the working class government of Russia and we are trying to arouse the workers of Toledo to instruct their representative in congress to help in the fight for recognition of Soviet Russia." The copper's answer was, "You better go and tell the gang to get out of the district. If I find any of you around in a few minutes I'll arrest every one in the gang."

The comrade reported this threat of the cop to our team captain we immediately held a meeting on the street corner and came to an unanimous decision that we would keep up the work of passing out leaflets, arrest or no arrest. Our courageous decision saw us thru and we passed out all the leaflets without one arrest.

The Winners!

Announcement by J. Louis Engdahl.

EVERY week The DAILY WORKER plans to present three prizes for the best stories sent in by our worker correspondents.

This is not only intended to stimulate interest in worker correspondence, and to bring out the best efforts of our writers, but also to bring to the front some of the best material that is sent in, in order that it may serve as an example for others.

There has been a notable increase this past week in the volume of worker correspondence that has come in. Thru this competition, and other methods of arousing interest in this workers' activity, we expect the number of stories to grow rapidly in number and quality.

IN awarding the prizes, preference has been given to stories received from workers actually on the jobs. This is the kind of worker correspondence we are seeking to encourage. Excellent material is being sent in by more experienced party workers, especially by those engaged in trade union activities. We do not wish to discourage their efforts in the least. But they must realize that the success of worker correspondence depends upon drawing the masses of workers in the shops, mills, mines and factories into this endeavor. It is upon this basis that the prizes were awarded as follows:

FIRST PRIZE—Nikolai Bucharin's latest book, "Historic Materialism," to a worker for the Interborough Rapid Transit Co., the "open shop" subway system in New York City. We cannot give his name, for that would mean instant discharge. But he will get his book.

SECOND PRIZE—Leon Trotsky's book, "Whither England?" to a nonparty, foreign-born worker in the non-union West Virginia coal fields. It is also impossible to mention his name.

THIRD PRIZE—The original of the cartoon appearing on this page in a suitable frame to Henry Fred, of Chicago, for his story, "Hunting for a Job in Chicago."

START now sending in your contributions for next week's competition. The prizes to be offered next week are as follows:

FIRST PRIZE—"Flying Osip," stories of New Russia.
SECOND PRIZE—Leon Trotsky's "My Flight from Siberia."
THIRD PRIZE—Original cartoon to be framed.

TYRANNY ROBS MEN OF MEALS

The First Prize

By A Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Interborough Rapid Transit repairmen at Lenox & 148th St. toil 9 hours daily to prevent broken axels, split rods, stalling motors and slipping brakes from bringing disaster to millions of strap-hangers. And with only a measly half hour for lunch, and no wash up. Fifteen or twenty minutes of this half hour we spend waiting in line to punch our time, because there are only six time clocks for the whole 800 of us. The lunch room that the company charitably established for us, is sublet to a contractor who profiteers on us cruelly in dishing out filthy slum gullion at exorbitant prices. So we don't patronize it, and we snatch our lunch in any haphazard way.

Up to this week we at least had the privilege of buying our milk from the milkman outside the gates of the yard before ringing out. This Monday this was suddenly stopped. Hereafter we are to buy our milk on our own time during what's left of the lunch time between ringing in and out, so that if before we had no rest now we hardly have any time to gulp down our lunch choking on it the while. Any wonder that we are being maimed at the machines? Any surprise that weary of head and body we become exhausted and accidents occur?

Company Union a Farce.

The grumbling and discontent among us over this latest act of oppression is at considerable pitch but we are helpless in our grumbling because our organization, a "closed union" shop, is a company union where the shop steward and grievance committee neither wish nor dare take up our grievances with the management. We shall therefore continue to suffer and bear in silence such and worse conditions until we organize into a real union, a union that will get for us a 44-hour week, real representative shop committees, a full lunch hour, no ringing in and out for lunch, and generally abolish slave-driving conditions.

"I. R. T." repairmen, let's get busy and build it.

Hunting for a Job in Chicago

(THIRD PRIZE)

By A Worker Correspondent

After hunting for a job for a couple of weeks, I decided to take a job at Sears Roebuck and company. Of course I knew of the awful conditions under which they work there but I was in debt and had to get something quickly. I reasoned: Now before Christmas, and President Coolidge's speech on our present prosperity, surely I can get a job there. On my way I even made plans which of my debts to pay first.

As usual a big fat cop stood in front of the employment office protecting the law and order, of the public—no—of the company. Inside, two hundred people, mostly boys, wait.

Thru the open door I hear the clerk asking: "How old?" "Twenty." "Married?" "No." "Fill out this application and send it in there. Next. How old?" "Twenty-three." "Married?" "Yes." "We only employ boys."

So I made up my mind I am not married and I am only twenty years old. After filling out my application with all the long list of questions answered I waited. My turn now. "Sit down." Looks me over from top to bottom. "Take this application and walk in there."

Young boys wait in this room. I count twenty of them. I look at them. Even in their too long pants and too big coats they do not look older than 13. I notice that the young kids were given a slip of paper in addition to their application sheets and sent to a different office.

It takes almost a whole day before the red tape is gone thru and you are told whether you will be admitted to the office of the boss Julius Rosenwald, slave driving "philanthropist" and the older ones were not even admitted to this office.

My turn comes again. "Is your name H. F.?" "Yes." He looks at me, at the application, at me again—"Are you twenty years old?" "Yes." "I can't employ you." "Why?" I ask. "Am I too old for you already? Shall I send you my kid brother who goes to school yet? So this is your Coolidge prosperity?" He calls out "Next." A small kid about 13 years old comes in. I continue: "He will be good for your slave driving. He will be good for you at $10 a week." I walk out.

This is how children are being put into industry to take the place of their elders. They work them ten and twelve hours a day at $10 and $12 a week and they do not need to be paid for overtime either.

World Court Paves the Way for War

Events now transpiring in Europe clearly reveal the predatory character of the league of nations and the world court as interrelated instruments of imperialism. Turkey has severed diplomatic relations with the kingdom of Irak as a result of the award of Mosul to Irak by the league of nations. Britain holds the mandate over Irak, hence is bound to defend the territory. The severing of diplomatc reilations with Irak is tantamount to a declaration of war against Great Britain.

Britain has been trying for years to smash the power of Turkey in order to obtain control of all that territory formerly part of the Ottoman empire that lies between the Mediterranean and India. The world struggle for oil furnished another incentive for conflict with Turkey. The steps toward this new threat of world war are clearly defined. After the war Britain obtained a four-year mandate over Irak and claimed that Mosul, said to be rich in oil, was a part of the mandated area. The Turks have never recognized this claim.

Now that the mandate over Irak is soon to expire Britain desires to extend it for 25 years provided in includes Mosul. In an effort to obtain a semblance of legal sanction for its pillaging of Mosul, Britain referred the matter to the council of the league of nations. Turkey challenged the right of the league to fix its boundaries. Therefore Britain took the case to the world court for a decision as to whether the league had the right to determine the boundaries of the mandated territory. Britain was playing safe, for at the sixth assembly of the league she gained control of it. The world court is not a body that stands above the league, but it is a creature of the league. Its judges are paid out of the league treasury and they do the bidding of the league at all times. As was to be expected the decision was that the league had the authority to fix the disputed boundaries. Turkey announced that she would not recognize any decision of the league that gave Mosul to England.

The decision of the league in favor of Britain was accompanied by the usual fables of savage atrocity. The first decisive step toward war is already taken. Britain will maneuver for a few days, or possibly weeks, while concluding its preparations for war, thru conducting intrigues in Europe and Asia in an effort to align as many powers as possible against Turkey.

This situation is instructive for Communists and the working class in general as it proves our contention that all pacts, leagues, world courts and other devices for creating alliances under the pretext of guaranteeing peace are in reality but preparations for new wars.

Lenin, in his keen analysis of imperialism, revealed the nature of such institutions as the league and the world court:

> "Peace alliances prepare wars and in turn grow out of war, mutually conditioning themselves upon each other, and producing the change from peaceful struggle to armed struggle and vice versa ON THE SAME GROUNDWORK of imperialistic alliances and mutual relations of world economy and world politics."

And tho, thru the league of nations, France may now consent to the belligerent attitude of Great Britain in Irak, it is known that the smouldering antagonism between these two powers will, in the crucible of a European war, burst forth into flame. Such a war will soon inflame the whole world, just as the last world war rapidly spread from one country to another.

But as the outgrowth of the last world war and the rapid development of imperialism there has developed another force, the revolution in Russia and the Communist International. At the outbreak of the next world war the ruling classes will not have a supine social-democracy to deal with, but a determined resistance, embracing the vanguard of the working class of the whole world under the leadership of the Communist International, that will strive to turn the imperialist war between nations into a civil war against capitalism.

The Union Wreckers

Reactionary labor officials always strive to wreck the unions which they are supposed to defend rather than permit them to fall into the hands of the left wing. Communists have long known that before the trade unions are won they will be weakened and brought to the verge of ruin by the reactionaries. Knowing the enemy's purpose we are able more effectively to combat it. Wednesday's performance of the Sigman machine at the convention of the Internation Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in Philadelphia again vindicates our position.

In a desperate effort to eliminate the left wing, after his array of paper delegates and his fake majority had been exposed, Sigman brought about a condition verging upon a split. But the same determination to at all costs avoid a split that characterized the long fight of the three big locals in New York again prevented its consummation.

The stragety of the left and its denunciation of Sigman's union-wrecking motives caused his own ranks to waver. When he announced his intention to eliminiate the left there was such an upheaval in his own ranks that he was forced to yield to the left. The immediate crisis arose over the question of referendums on important questions and different representation at conventions. Sigman knew that that would destroy the possibility of his again obtaining a fake majority, representing a minority of the membership, in order to continue in power against the will of the overwhelming majority.

The left wing, thru defeating the Sigman machine in its despicable maneuvers, has won a double victory; it has laid the foundation for the complete defeat of Sigmanism and at the same time saved the union from disruption.

Socialist Follows Bankers

Mr. Victor L. Berger, socialist congressman from Milwaukee, introduced a joint resolution in favor of recognition of Russia, following the Borah senate resolution. Victor says that since the bankers and business men favor recognition, it must be evidence that the Soviet government "is here to stay, at least for a considerable time." Like social-democratic leaders in the old world, Victor Berger, who strives to carry out their policies here, follows the lead of the bankers. The fact that workers have long ago demanded Soviet recognition did not seem to impress Victor as do the bankers.

Economic Trend in November - -

By Earl R. Browder

THE month of November seems to show a slight recesion in production and trade as a whole, from the month of October. In comparison to November of last year, however, it continues the upward tendency of American economics which has dominated during 1925. Profits continue to be announced in unprecedented volume. Basic and key industries claim that production will continue upward in the next few months. American capitalism is in a jubilant and holiday mood. Following are some of the specific reasons for the joyous sounds that come from Wall Street.

Iron and Steel.

The American Iron and Steel Institute reports production of steel ingots for November (25 days) at 3,907,353 tons, compared with October (27 days) 3,893,028 tons, and Nov. 1924 (25 days) 3,121,149 tons. In daily average production, with percentage of change, this gives the following comparisons:

Daily Production of Steel Ingots.

November, 1924	124,846 tons
October, 1925	144,186 tons
November, 1925	156,294 tons

Percentage Increase.

November over October 1925, 8 per cent.

November, 1925 over November, 1924, 25 per cent.

Unfilled orders of the U. S. Steel corporation increased during November by almost a half million tons over October.

If December production equals that of November, the year 1925 will be the high record for all time for steel production, being half a million tons greater than the peak production of the war years. Operations in December began at 87 per cent of capacity.

Railroads.

Traffic continues at high figures. For the last week in November, car loadings were 11.5 per cent above the average for the past six years.

The increase for the whole year 1925 to the end of November is even greater, being 14.3 per cent above the six year average.

Gross revenues of railroads for the ten months ending Nov. 1, were more than $5,000,000,000, representing an increase over the six year period of 6.4 per cent. At the same time, expenses of operation showed a decided decline of 3.7 per cent. The increased net revenues, resulting from this double movement, amount to almost $500,000,000 for the ten months.

Automobiles.

Production of motor cars for November declined from the record-breaking October figure of 452,392 cars, but the industry is still operating high above last year's figures. The exact number of cars produced in November was 379,300, acording to figures of Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Comparison of first eleven months of 1924 and 1925, are:

Total Number of Automobiles Produced in the U. S.

	1925	1924	Per cent of increase
Eleven Mo.	3,997,954	3,430,467	16
October	452,392	293,356	52
November	379,300	232,248	63

During October the Ford plants produced 204,827 vehicles, and Ford's November production continued at this rate, due to the slump in August-September when new models were being installed. Other producers sharply curtailed production in November, as much as 30 per cent. The automobile industry remains the outstanding example of expansion of American economics.

Building Construction.

Contracts for building awarded in November were 23 per cent higher than the same month last year, the highest figure on record for November, altho showing a seasonal decline from October of 11 per cent.

For the 11 months of 1925, new construction has totalled $5,310,950,000, which is 19 per cent more than the entire year of 1924.

There is sharp difference of opinion expressed by building and financial authorities as to the immediate future of building. The Annalist, a journal of finance, commerce and economics, says on December 11:

"Several careful studies of the building situation in relation to the war-time shortage substantially agree that the actual deficiency in terms of the accumulated absence of the usual addition to building facilitise has now been substantially made up . . . The high figures for November may therefore be taken as representing a distinct oversupply in some directions. It is obvious that the total of building contracts month by month cannot go on indefinitely breaking all previous records without also breaking its own back. The November record, therefore, while it represents an immediate unexpected stimulus to the supplying industries, and therefore to business generally, is not a reasonable subject for congratulation."

As against this warning of an impending collapse of the building industry, which is based upon the judgment that the present boom is speculative, there is an opposite view. This was expressed by the firm of Dominick and Dominick in the columns of the Wall Street Journal of December 14, which says:

"Present building activity is likely to continue thru 1926 with only a slight decline."

"General well-being has been reflected in the present high rate of building construction.

"Construction from now on will not proceed for meeting a war shortage, but will be a more normal development resulting from the growing needs and the growing prosperity of the country."

In our opinion the evidence supports the claim that there is a wide margin of speculation in present building; this speculative activity cannot long continue to bolster up general conditions, but must itself find support in more solid advances in other industries, or suffer a collapse.

The State of Trade.

Distribution of commodities, as shown in the reports of the Department of Commerce, reflects the general advance of production in America.

The factors working toward a decline are still weaker than the forces of expansion.

Thus in wholesale trade, the Department of Commerce index, based upon 1919, shows that October advanced to 101, from 94 in September and from 95 in October last year.

In the retail trade, department stores report sales advanced to 164 in October, from 122 in September, and from 141 in October of last year. Mail order houses gained even more, the figures being: October, 1925, 170; September, 1925, 113; October, 1924, 141. These figures show an increase of October over September of from 34 to 50 per cent; and over the same month last year of 14 per cent to 20 per cent.

Figures for November are not yet published.

Foreign Trade and Investment.

Continuance of the growth of foreign trade is registered in the figures for October altho in this month exports fell below last year's figures. The exact figures for October and for the ten months are:

October	1925	1924
Imports	$375,000,000	$310,751,608
Exports	492,000,000	527,171,781
Total	$867,000,000	$837,923,389
First 10 Mo. of	1925	1924
Imports	$3,454,646,039	$2,980,622,522
Exports	3995,167,727	3,651,662,531
Total	$7,449,813,766	$6,632,285,053

Thus, the total foreign trade increased by over 800 million dollars, but less than half of this increase was in the exports.

New capital flotations for October and the ten months give the following interesting comparison between total and foreign investments:

October	1925	1924
Total new capital	$423,144,154	$682,906,834
Foreign	83,050,000	250,000,000
Ten Months
Total new capital..	$4,950,384,554	$4,753,486,640
Foreign	807,069,000	808,105,320

The year as a whole thus keeps about equal to last year in the export of capital. The apparent drop in October is due to the fact that last year the month included the big loans based upon the Dawes plan, while this year the month is only an average one. Present financial and political disturbances are undoubtedly checking the flow of loans abroad, but this is only temporary—new Dawes plans for France and other countries will make way for the continued flow of dollars.

Employment, Wage Rates and Earnings.

While production has been expanding at such phenomenal rates, employment of labor has not followed the same course. The increased production has been accomplished by the intensification of labor. This fact is brot out by the following figures, in which, altho the index for employment is based on 1923 while that of production is based on 1919 (therefore the absolute figures are not comparable) yet the degree of change shown by the two sets of figures are valid for comparison. The figures are:

	1925		1924
	Sept.	Oct.	Oct.
Mfg. production	122	138	121
Total number employed	91	92	88

From September to October, employment increased only one point while production increased 16. From October, 1924 to December, 1925, employment gained 4 points, while production advanced 17.

Changes in wage rates that are taking place are quite generally downward. In spite of the increase of production and the smaller increase of employment, the industrial reserve army is more and more being brot into play for wage-cutting campaigns. This is especially true of the textile industry, and leather manufacturing, as well as the nonunion bituminous coal fields.

Total weekly earnings show a slight increase due to more fulltime operations, lengthening of hours, and overtime. Thus the Massachusetts Department of Labor, Bulletin of Nov. 20, reports average weekly earnings for September as $24.14, while for October this figure is $24.58.

November weekly earnings in Illinois industries (Bulletin of Department of Labor, Dec. 9) averaged $28.46. This is higher than at any time for the past three years, but does not indicate higher wage rates, but longer hours of employment. The increase in number employed was only seven-tenths of one percent, which leaves thousands of workers unemployed. The state employment bureau reports 126 applicants for each 100 jobs available.

Wisconsin industrial commission (November report) states that the number of employed declined from September to October by one-half of one percent, while total payrolls advanced 3.8 per cent. This indicates the same process going on as in Massachusetts and Illinois. Compared with one year ago, employment is 7 per cent greater, and earnings have advnced 5 per cent.

California bureau of labor statistics (November) reports a decline of 5.3 per cent in number of workers employed, with an advance of 3.3 in average weekly earnings.

The cost of living rose, from September to October, two points, from 168 to 170, according to the index of the national industrial conference board, based upon July, 1914.

At the expense of the working class, American capitalism is continuing its own "prosperity" of high profits and industrial expansion. Signs are accumulating that a limit is being reached to this process. The agricultural situation, dealt with in a previous article, the necessary slowing up of building operations, the saturation of the automobile market, these are a few of the signs that American industry is approaching a new period of readjustment. Just how this will develop is still not clear.

The Red Versus the Black Agrarian International

By T. DOMBAL, Moscow.

Editor's Note.—This is the second instalment of the article by T. Dombal, on "The Red Versus the Black Agrarian International." Farmers, as well as industrial workers, are realizing more and more the necessity of international action against their oppressors. This article reviews the struggles of the land workers and shows them the way. The concluding instalment follows:

THE landlords in a number of countries where the land question drives the peasant masses towards revolution, in order to gain favor at least with prosperous elements of the village, have agreed to the alienation of an insignificant part of their estates for the purpose of distributing this land among the peasants on the basis of purchase, while at the same time they are trying to increase their landholdings at the expense of the crown estates. After all is said and done, this measure can in no way solve the land question, but for some time it will no doubt foster the illusion among the peasants that they would get the desired land allotments in a peaceful way.

The exposure of this astute maneuver of the landlords is a task of prime urgency for all the revolutionary elements of town and country. At the same time it should be clearly pointed out that this maneuver is not intended to obviate the land-famine, but to benefit only a small group of the peasant population.

Furthermore, in the fight for the peasantry, the landlords are trying to get entirely into their hands the distribution of the state credits granted for the assistance of agriculture.

IN bidding for the support of the peasantry, the landlords are now playing the trump card of credits, and the Warsaw congress, discussing the question of credits, arrived at the following decision: Whereas agricultural credit constitutes the most powerful factor towards the successful development of agriculture, and whereas the proper organization thereof calls for the existence of a central crediting organ in every country, the conference therefore considers desirable the creation of close permanent contact among the respective organs of all countries for the formation of an international institute of agricultural credit, and the congress instructs the international agrarian commission to convene for this purpose a special conference.

This means paving the ground for the big agrarians to become the guardians of the peasant masses in need of credit during the period of somewhat stabilised capitalism.

NOT content with this, the congress went even farther. In order to afford to the agriculturists the facilities for exercising powerful and constant influence upon the general politics in every country, and above all, upon agrarian policies, the congress resolves to found the black agrarian international:

1. To organize central unions of the agricultural organizations in every country.

2. To create agricultural groups in the parliaments, uniting the representatives of agricultural and kindred interests without distinction of political convictions, for the purpose of constant co-operation.

3. To remind the agriculturists that at parliamentary elections they should demand from all candidates formal pledges to defend the interests of the agriculturists.

4. To establish an international organization whose task will be to establish constant relations among all the central agricultural institutions and organizations of the countries.

In other words, they are trying in league with industrial and financial capital, and with the active support of the state, to create something like a world-wide agrarian trust.

THE attack is directed not only against the toilers, but partly also against the petty mercantial bourgeoisie.

Of course, all this cannot be fully realized by the landlords under the conditions of the capitalist regime with its inherent antagonisms. Nevertheless this is certainly no utopia.

We see already in Germany how these attempts are being carried out. It is to be regretted that this does not attract the due attention of our German comrades. The landbund of the junkers, having secured control of the distribution of agricultural credits by amalgamating the peasants' credit organizations with the "Rentenbank" has succeeded in laying the foundation for the German agrarian trust. In Berlin the landbund of the junkers has established a gigantic bread factory; in Pomerania it has already organized its sugar refineries; it is now organizing a number of different factories for the conversion of agricultural products and its own buying and distributive agencies, and its dictatorial appetites grow day by day.

Altho the wholesale purchasing experiment of the Cooperative Alliance of London does not convince us of any serious success to be achieved by the landlord organizations in this direction, nevertheless it ought to be borne in mind that these actions will create fairly strong illusions among the peasant masses and will contribute to the strengthening of the hold of the black agrarian reaction upon the toiling peasants.

IN view of thse facts, we must outline a definite plan of counter-action, and the proper tactics to meet the situation.

While the landlords, with the aid of industrial and financial capital and also of the state, are getting into their hands the agricultural cooperative organizations, we cannot afford to remain idle. It will be our business to gain our way into the economic organizations created by the agrarian reaction, to form in them groups and factions of toiling peasants, and to fight for the extension of the influence of the toiling peasantry by advancing the slogan of "capturing these organizations."

In the near future the Krestintern will have to create its nuclei in the existing cooperative organizations of every country, and to form cooperative organizations where none exist; all this will be the preliminary work towards creating out of the Krestintern and International of Peasant Cooperatives, working under the slogan of uniting all the agricultural cooperatives of the working class.

With regard to the political attempts of the agrarian reaction, we must in every way expose the false professional slogans of the handful of landlords, pointing out the antagonism between the interests of the landlords and those of the toiling peasants (the land question, taxes, and so on). Under no circumstances should we permit the collection of propaganda funds in favor of the professional interest of the landlords We must also combat the formation of professional groups in parliament and other public institutions, led by the landlords or by their flunkeys.

It goes without saying that we shall fight against any formal pledges of obedience to the landlords (which are to be demanded from candidates in parliamentary elections and other public offices.)

And finally, we must in every way hinder the organization of the black agrarian international.

For this purpose we must, first of all increase our rural party work in every country, creating efficient sections for village work in connection with the central committees of the Communist Party and youth organizations in every country.

Secondly, we must unfold and increase our propaganda work studying at the same time the methods used by the reactionaries to influence the peasants, and resorting to new methods of propaganda, taking into consideration the low cultural level and even illiteracy of the backward rural masses.

FOR the successful attainment of these ends, it is necessary to increase the activity of Krestintern in every country, and to make full use of this radical international peasants' organization which embraces the toiling peasants of all shades of political opinion.

WHEREVER mass agricultural organizations exist it is necessary to start a campaign for their affiliation to the Krestintern, to create in them groups of toiling peasants, to organize, consolidate and strengthen the left wing in these organizations, endeavouring not to cause a split, but to convert them into a fighting weapon for the emancipation of the toiling peasantry. Only in extreme cases when it is found impossible to carrry on any work within the organizations, or when the question of open rupture with the landlords, wealthy peasants and petty-bourgeois has fully matured and there is no danger of becoming detached from the peasant masses, it will be advisable to proceed with the formation of Krestintern non-party mass organizations which will pursue both political and economic aims; something like peasants' landbund, of course without the landlords, wealthy peasants and their lackeys, but benefiting by their experience and their tactful manner of approaching the masses.

WHERE no peasant organisations and kindred associations exist, we must create them and get them to join immediately the Krestintern. While doing this, we must wage campaigns for the defence of the most vital demands of the peasants. These organizations should be of mass character, without being imbued with ultra-revolutionary features.

THE fight for the peasantry is flaring up, and it behooves us to remember that the growth of the Krestintern is the mighty augury of victory.

The decisions of the 12th Agrarian Congress mean to a certain extent quite new methods of influencing the peasants on the part of the black agrarian reaction.

In reality, however, there is nothing new in this offensive of agrarian capital by means of concentration; it is the direct outcome of capitalist development.

SIGMAN [illegible] PAPER MAJORITY WHILE LEFT WING WINS MEMBERS AS I. L. G. W. CONVENTION CLOSES

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 18.—One hundred and ten tired but still militant delegates cast their votes for Zimmerman for secretary-treasurer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at the final session of the eighteenth biennial convention today. Hyman did not vote for himself and he polled one vote less than Zimmerman's total for the presidency.

Beat by a paper majority in the convention—the Sigman administration polling 158 votes—but with the big New York locals and the majority of the membership solidly behind them, the left delegates go out of this convention to face, if the snarling, insulting attitude of the Sigmanites is any guage of their intention to make war on the left wing and its militant program, a long, trying struggle.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

IN making an appeal for $200,000 with which to spread christian propaganda, the president of the American Tract Society stresses the need for counteracting the propaganda put out by Communists, and subtly hints that big business has no better friend than religion. He says: "Thoughtful christian people are beginning to realize that to offset the effect of this spread of subversive teaching an almost unlimited number of christian tracts is needed." One of the greatest tracts ever written says this gentleman is Roosevelt's "Nine reasons for going to church." This tribute to America's greatest bunco-steerer should shake a few dollars out of Teddy's admirers.

QUITE an interesting incident occurred at a meeting of the American Club of Oxford University, England. The club invited no less a person than Comrade Saklatvala to address its members. Saklatvala was barred from this country recently by order of the state department, tho he had his passports vised to attend a meeting of the world interparliamentary union in Washington. It appears that the American students in Oxford desired to rebuke Kellogg for his action.

HOWEVER, all was not serene. An American student, of the fascist or American Legion brand wrote a letter to a local newspaper suggesting that Saklatvala be not allowed to speak. Apparently the provocative suggestion was not heeded by the American students, but the young boys of the "bullfrog bread," the sons of the British slave drivers, were there in numbers and tho they took no offense at Saklatvala's criticism of the American state department, when the speaker dwelt on the infamies of British rule in India and all over the world, they got rough. But so far as one can gather from the guarded report in the New York Times—a two column story—the American students made it quite hot for the interrupters.

PREMIER RYKOV of Russia threw a bombshell into the camp of the international militarists, who pretend to hunger for peace, when he declared that his government was perfectly willing to abolish the army and navy if the capitalist powers guaranteed to scrap theirs. This is the kind of language that a lying capitalist diplomat finds it hard to answer. Of course Rykov knew quite well that FIFTY years of age and 27 years of revolutionary work, these figures serve to characterize the life history of Comrade Kalinin.

German Workers Form Triple Alliance to Resist Wage Slashes

BERLIN—(FP)—An alliance of railwaymen, state and municipal workers and municipal functionaries has been agreed upon at Frankfort-on-Main by the local and district executives of the unions concerned, for presenting a united front to the employers. This move is hailed as a first step in Germany towards imitating the British industrial alliance and presenting a united industrial front regardless of industry or craft.

FORD 'FORSAKES' CZARIST CAUSE TO GET ORDERS

Henry Pals Around with Monarchists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Dec. 18.—Henry Ford has forsaken the Russian monarchist movement in the United States. He has given it up as a bad job, a hopelessly lost cause.

Ford is still on friendly personal terms with many of the monarchist leaders and has confidence in them. Gregory Shinkerenko has been the most active members of the monarchist group in Detroit. Ford planned to send Shinkerenko to Russia as his accredited representative last summer. Shinkerenko had his trunk packed and was ready to go. Advisors convinced Ford, at the last moment, that Shinkerenko's activity in the monarchist movement might make him a marked man in Russia. Shinkerenko did not go. But the idea of his going has not been definitely abandoned. The trip has only been postponed. It is possible Ford may make Shinkerenko his confidential representative on an industrial mission to Russia in the near future, with Shinkerenko probably traveling under an assumed name. Or it may be Shinkerenko will go alone.

Lieutenant on Czar's Yacht.

Shinkerenko was a lieutenant on the private Romanov yacht, the Polar Bear, before the revolution. Fleeing after the revolution to this country, the refuge now of monarchistic exiles. Shinkerenko used influences and his own personality to win the confidence of Henry Ford. Tho working first in the shops, Shinkerenko is now employed in the experimental laboratories at a good salary. He was the go-between for Ford and prince Orlov when the latter visited Detroit with considerable secrecy not long ago. Shinkerenko has also been a dinner guest at the Ford home and is one of the select group invited to attend Ford's old-fashioned dances, the latest publicity stunt of the Ford Motor Co.

Shinkerenko has been in the habit of propounding the virtues and holy traditions of the monarchist cause. But when the Ford organization lost confidence in the cause, Shinkerenko apparently found it as easy to change his mind as to change his shirt. Probably the great dissillusionment was automatic and instantaneous.

Shinkerenko is living in more humble quarters than he did when he felt the splendor of the Romanovs was upon him. But it is believed he

FARMERS PLAN FORMATION OF NATIONAL PARTY

Conference Lays Base of Farmer-Labor Party

By ALFRED KNUTSON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. Dak. Dec. 18.—The prospects are that the working farmers of North Dakota will form a farmer-labor party at the conference which they are now holding here. The farmers are sick of both old parties. This conference will have a national significance, because the plan is to call a convention later of farmers and workers from all northwestern states with the view of forming a national farmer-labor party.

William Bouck from Washington, Charles E. Taylor and Pat Wallace from Montana, Soltis of Minnesota and Tom Ayres of South Dakota are present at the conference for the purpose of aiding the formation of such a party.

It is likely that a preliminary program calling for nationalization of all basic industries will be adopted.

IRAK CRISIS HITS BALDWIN PARTY UNITY

Britain Is Conciliatory Toward Turkey

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The action of Turkey in breaking diplomatic relations with the kingdom of Irak, which is a British mandate, has put the Baldwin government on the defensive and "unofficial" sources reveal that the government's policy is to be conciliatory, with an effort to bribe Turkey by promises of compensation in the way of land grants elsewhere.

When Prime Minister Baldwin read the text of the league of nations decision in the house of commons yesterday afternoon it became apparent that there is going to be serious opposition to the extention of the British mandate over Irak for another 25 years, not only from labor and liberal opposition, but from a strong element in Baldwin's own party as well.

Answering questions on the crisis Baldwin asked the house to wait until the return of L. S. Amery, the colonial minister from Geneva, when an opportunity will be given for a full debate.

WHEELER DESERTS LA FOLLETTE ON WORLD COURT ISSUE AND NOW SUPPORTS IMPERIALISM OF MORGAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Senator Wheeler of Montana, who last year was candidate for vice-president on the LaFollette third party ticket is now definitely back in the folds of his party, and whooping it up for the world court program of the House of Morgan. This lends weight to the belief that his alleged progressiveism was only for the purpose of making a national reputation for himself so he would stand better chance of retaining his seat in the senate.

He has definitely broken with the LaFollette group by this action, and now stands in the ranks with such reactionaries in the democratic party as Swanson of Virginia, Ashurst of Arizona, and Walsh, the senior senator from Montana. In this same aggregation in support of the world court are the Coolidge-Mellon-Kellogg republicans of the type of Cummins of Iowa, McKinley of Illinois, Watson of Indiana, and LaFollette's principal opponent, Lenroot.

Second Day's Debate.

Debate on American adherence to the world court swung leisurely into the second lap in the senate today while waves of propaganda for and against the court rolled high on Capitol Hill.

Senatorial mail bags were overflowing with exhortations to join and protest against joining. Most of the former were in the shape of form letters, round-robins, and printed literature ,timed to arrive with the start of the battle. Most of the latter were in the form of individual letters from foes of the court who seem just to have awakened to the realization that barring unlooked for upsets, the senate is going to vote the United States into the court.

Pacifist Servants of Morgan.

Veteran members of the senate said that the organized "pressure" on the court issue from specially formed clubs, peace organizations, church societies, etc., was the greatest they had ever seen on a specific issue before the senate. Most of these are mere pawns of Wall Street.

The senate plans to let this "pressure' 'wear itself out naturally. There is no disposition to hurry a vote, and no way of doing so even if there were a disposition to do so. It will be late in February or March, it is believed, before a showdown can be had, and the senate doesn't believe the "pressure" can be maintained that long.

The herculean task confronting the irreconcilables in overcoming the odds against them was emphasized today by a count of noses in the senate.

Poll Favors Court.

A poll taken on this, the second day of the long struggle, disclosed that the proponents of the court have 63 votes they can count on as a minimum. This is within three of the 66 necessary to vote adherence.

The count showed 30 republicans and 33 democrats for the court on the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge terms, 6 republicans for the court only if specific and far-reaching reservations are attached; 7 republicans, 3 democrats, and 1 farmer-laborite, against the present court in any form; and 10 republicans and 1 democrat not committed and apparently on the fence. There were 2 republican absentees, 2

Decembrists Put to Death in Czarist Russia 100 Years Ago

> "WE could not expect a proletarian class ideology, we could not demand it from the people of those days. . . The working class only began to form in the days of the Decembrists and therefore there could be no proletarian class party. . . The proletariat must and does appreciate the Decembrists who dared to leave their privileged class, who sacrificed their lives in those days when the proletariat did not yet exist."

> —G. Zinoviev, "History of the Russian Communist Party."

ON July 13, 1826 in the courtyard of Petropavlovsk fortress in Leningrad (then St. Petersburg) were hanged P. I. Pestel, K. F. Rylyeyev, P. G. Kakhovsky, M. A. Bestuzhev-Ryumin, and S. M. Muryavyev-Apostol.

What were they hanged for? Because they organized an uprising against the Czar Nicolas the First, known by the nickname of "the Cudgeler."

They all represented the most aristocratic families of those days and were brilliant army officers of the guards regiments.

The substance and significance of that uprising is, of course, not in the program of reforms which they tried to follow (these reforms look ridiculous to us) but in the fact that this uprising was the first expression of an open protest, which had seemed to be impossible in those dreadful days.

"The cannonade on the Senate Square aroused a whole generation," writes Hertzen. These were not politicians, but consciously self-sacrificing martyrs,—intellectuals, lonely, devoted and lost in the endless snow-covered Russia. The Decembrists themselves recognized this very well. Riliev writes in one of his poems:

"I know: ruined will be the one who first rises against the oppressors of the people. I am already doomed by fate. But where and when was freedom acquired without sacrifices? I'll die for the country; I feel it, I know it. And with pleasure, holy father, I am blessing my fate."

The uprising of the Decembrists is the beginning of the great path of self-sacrifice which was selected by all the best men and women of Russia of that time, by all the fighters for freedom.

There is a great duty upon those who live in the days of triumphant Russian revolution. They have always to remember that freedom was not only by their own efforts, but also by the efforts of the self-sacrificing generations beginning from 1825.

IN the first night after the uprising numerous arrests were made. Over 50 people were arrested. They were the war prisoners of the "crown." Nicolas the First had no other terms for them. . .

In the manifesto published upon the suppression of the uprising, which proclaimed a solemn service on the Senate Square for the sake of "cleaning up of the place", the Decembrists are referred to as a "bunch of outcasts." "By the order of the crown" a committee of inquiry and a court of justice were appointed. In this court, besides the picked army generals, were also appointed a few of the highest officers of the Synod. The inquiry lasted for six months. The prisoners were examined at night.

The Decembrists write about these examinations:

"At midnight the door of the cell opens, a veil is thrown over the prisoner and he is lead in silence over the halls and yards of the fortress. When the veil was taken off he was already in the large examination hall before the committee of inquiry. Questions which spelled life or death to the prisoners were formulated by the committee members, who threatened and cursed the prisoners in the attempt to wring from them an admission of guilt and information against other prisoners. Those who were silent were kept chained in dark cells and starved."

The trial took place in the absence of the defendants.

"What! Have we already been tried?" asked the surprised defendants when brought into the court room.

"Yes, and found guilty", was the answer. Altogether 121 men were found guilty.

The highest criminal tribunal sentenced all these to death penalty.

"The tribunal decided unanimously that these criminals should all be given a death penalty." But the final sentences were made by the czar himself. Five were sentenced to death penalty, 88 to hard labor and the rest to be exiled to Siberia or sent into the army as privates.

IN the court-yard of the Petropavlovsk fortress were put up scaffolds. They were built slowly and unskillfully, for the hangmen were inexperienced. The scaffolds were tried out first. Berckoff himself, the commandant of the fortress, gave the executioners lessons in hanging. Only in the morning were the scaffolds ready, the nooses were made and greased with lard.

The condemned were taken out of their cells at 2 a. m. They waited till morning, sitting on the grass by the scaffolds, while the preparations were going on. At last everything was ready. The condemned are shaking hands with each other for the last time. A dreadful view.

An eye-witness describes what happened farther.

". . . we could see quite well their faces. They were all calm, but their

MELLA PROTEST DEMONSTRATION SUNDAY NIGHT

Chicago Mass Meeting at Northwest Hall

Wholesale deportations of Cubans, Panamans and Costa Ricans from their native lands "for expression of anti-American opinions;" "indefinite postponement" of the presidential election in Haiti at the command of Military Governor John H. Russell; arbitrary attacks upon the Filipino independence movement' by Gen. Wood; intrigues of American financiers in China; move of American imperialism to share in the partition of Arica; military strike-breaking occupation of the City of Panama, with jailing and slaughter of Panaman workers—these are only a few of the incidents marking the latest development of American imperialism, which will be exposed before the workers of the anti-imperialist protest meeting at Northwest Hall tomorrow night, 7:30 p. m.

The primary purpose of the meeting is to protest the imprisonment of Julio Antonio Mella and the twelve Cuban labor leaders arrested with him at Havana, at the dictation of the American sugar trust. A cable received yesterday from Cuba indicates that President Machado, a Wall Street puppet, is bringing back-stairs influence to bear upon the courts to secure a summary conviction of Mella and his comrades. Mella is still on hunger strike in prison.

Persecutes Cuban Workers.

"The reaction in Cuba continues," says a letter just received from the Communist Party of Cuba, of which Mella is general secretary. "The government, completely sold out to Wall Street, is trying to make the Cuban workers and peasants bear the burden of the crisis caused by the drop in sugar prices. Sugar cane workers are in some cases being forced to work without remuneration except their meals. Orders of arrest have been issued against 44 of the best-known labor leaders of the Cuban movement, 23 of them Communists. Only 13 have been apprehended by the police so far, but the search for the others goes on."

Protest Meeting Tomorrow.

Tomorrow night's protest meeting in Chicago is under the joint auspices of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League (United States section) and International Labor Defense. The place of meeting, Northwest Hall, is at the corner of North and Western avenues.

CELEBRATE 20TH ANNIVERSARY.

Chicago workers will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the 1905 Russian revolution and the 100th anniversary of the Decembrist uprising in the Schoenhofen Hall, corner Ashland and Milwaukee Avenues, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. An excellent concert program has been arranged at which the Jewish, Lithuanian, and Lettish singing societies will sing and the Russian string orchestra of the Workers House will play. There will be many speakers in English and other languages.

IT STARTS MONDAY

IN Monday's DAILY WORKER there will begin a series of articles by WILLIAM F. DUNNE, analyzing the results of the special convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union just adjourned at Philadelphia.

Dunne has been in attendance at the Philadelphia convention sending in daily news stories. His articles will summarize the convention results and analyze their meaning.

The I. L. G. W. U. Convention Adjourns

League but for others who had been expelled and suspended during the recent struggle of the membership against the whole expulsion and class collaboration policy of the machine, only a modified form of amnesty was granted—the convention merely reinstated them in the unions and left it to the locals to grant them full membership privileges or not as they see fit.

Battle Over Amnesty.

The report of the committee on the question of amnesty, made by Amdur and Antonini, was a cheap and unsuccessful attempt to evade the whole issue of political offenses in the union—one of the biggest issues in this convention and before the membership.

The report stated that the committee recognized no difference, between the members expelled during the internal struggle and other offenders, but Hyman tore this view to shreads with some of the finest satire heard at the convention.

Hochman, whose services to the machine were rewarded with a vice presidency, tried to defend the committee report by reading a leaflet denouncing the machine as a sample of left wing propaganda, but only succeeded in making matters worse.

Offer Proof of Gangsterism.

The Sigmanites paid dearly for their hypocritical handling of the amnesty issue, for no sooner had Hochman petered out than Goretzky was on his feet displaying a collection of documents, none of which was challenged, offering to prove that the machine had hired gangsters, paid them thirteen hundred dollars and procured the beating up of members of the union.

Rubinstein of Local 2 was also on the floor throwing a challenge to Sigman which the latter did not care to accept. The machine cannot fight on this issue. It can only sit and wait for the storm to blow over and hope for the best.

To Supervise Referendum.

To supervise the referendum on important questions which will be held no sooner than six months and not later than a year after the convention, a committee representing both the left and right will be chosen, each side selecting its representatives. The left wingers are saying already that the referendum will give them control of the next convention.

A number of internal reforms have been authorized by the convention, notably the change in the mode of representation to the New York joint board, but other important measures such as the shop delegate system were delayed and sabotaged by the machine until a discussion of it was possible only in the closing hours of the session.

In spite of the rush of business on the last day the Sigmanites made a place for Hillquit on the program. His speech was a plea for unity combined with a eulogy of the present officials and contained what is probably the largest numbers of personal pronouns of the first person ever heard in one oration.

The Real Achievement.

The real achievement of this convention will not be found in the official minutes except as they record from day to day the struggle of the left wing. The real achievement of the convention is the hardening and consolidation in three weeks of struggle of the left wing bloc, its gaining of invaluable experience in maneuvering and its consciousness of its power.

For the left wing in the American labor movement the I. L. G. W. convention holds a great wealth of concrete lessons which, when systematized and applied will make a tremendous contribution to the whole struggle of the militant workers against reaction as it appears in the trade union movement of the United States. The left bloc came out of the convention stronger numerically and organizationally than it went in and this in itself is some achievement in one of the largest unions affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

Rank and Filers Good Fighters.

The left wing delegates on the last day of the convention showed the strain of the prolonged session. Every session was an ordeal and especially for those rank and filers for whom this is the first convention and who came thru with colors flying and to whom much praise is due.

The Sigman machine is not happy as a result of its empty convention victory; its morale is low, the membership has no confidence in it and with the convention record in its hands the left wing can now proceed to extend and consolidate its influence in the large centers outside of New York.

The record of the left wing is in striking contrast to that of the machine in this convention. The left fought for the basic needs of the membership day in and day out, and it has nothing to fear from the machine except that in their desperation the reactionaries will continue the provocation of the split which was the principal feature of their convention strategy.

The convention showed plainly that the life and growth of the International Ladies' Garment Workers as an effective instrument of the workers depends upon the rapid increase in the mass strength of the left wing.

STRIKEBREAKERS WORK OVERTIME AT EDISON CO.

Scabs Unable to Turn Out Strack Work

(By Worker Correspondent.)

The Edison Electric Appliance company, 52nd avenue and 19th street, unable to get any workers to scab on the striking sheet metal workers has decided to force the scabs that are in the plant to work overtime.

Shortly afternoon yesterday deputy sheriffs escorted Bill Krause and Barney Mitchell out of the shop and to their homes. It was rumored on the picket line that these two strikebreakers had worked overtime and that they were being escorted out to get a little sleep in order to be able to do the same again today.

Believe in Santa Claus.

The workers that are scabbing in the shop are great believers in Santa Claus, as they expect the company to fill their pockets with silver dollars this Christmas for their scabby practices. One of them boasted that the presents that the company was going to hand out would be large and that he would be satisfied to get the present and be called scab for many years to come. What disillusionment this senile believer in the legend of Santy Claus will receive!

The picket line at the plant has turned away many workers who are out of a job and came past the plant, intending to apply for work. The union men were successful in pulling out another of the scabs, thus diminishing the force.

Little Work Comes Out.

Tho the company is making the scabs work overtime, little work is being turned out as those that have remained are not able to do the work that the skilled mechanics have performed in the plant.

Break Prohibition Law.

One of the pickets on the line at the plant remarked today, "Where in hell is the prohibition department? Look at these gunmen going around all lit up. Why, hell, they're breaking the eighteenth amendment here left and right. If we went out and got drunk that way, we'd be down in the coop sobering off, but these guys can do as they please because they have got the company with them."

"Living Newspaper" Out Tonight.

The third issue of Prolet-Tribune, the living newspaper issued by the Chicago worker correspondents of the Novy Mir, will be out Saturday, Dec. 19, at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St.

PITTSBURGH FOR UNIFICATION AND MASS WORK PROGRAM OF C. E. C. BY OVERWHELMING VOTE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 18.—The meeting of the district executive committee of the Pittsburgh district and the membership meeting which were held here on Wednesday and Thursday have gone on record overwhelmingly for support of the central executive committee program for unification of the party and the development of our work among the masses.

The question was first discussed in the district executive committee which voted eleven in favor and two opposed and one abstaining for the unity resolution. The district executive committee of the Young Workers League also discussed the resolution and adopted the resolution by a vote of nine in favor, one opposed and temporariry abstaining until after the membership meeting.

The membership meting held Thursday night was one of the largest held in Pittsburgh recently. After a thoro discussion of the unity resolution, it was approved by a vote of 94 in favor and 12 against, 4 of the comrades present abstaning from voting. The Young Workers League committee members who had abstained in the vote on the previous day voted for the unity resolution at the membership meeting and declared their future support of the central executive committee.

democratic absentees and one vacancy when the poll was taken.

Big Guns in Reserve.

It will be the task of the irreconcilables to wean over enough of the uncommitted ones, and wean away enough of those nominally committed to reach their goal of 33 votes. It will be no easy task, and were the debaters of lesser renown than Borah, Johnson, Reed, et al, it would be written off by underwriters as a hopeless undertaking.

The irreconcilables are reserving their major fire until after the Christmas recess.

Senator Walsh, democrat, of Montana, was scheduled today to deliver the principal speech. Walsh, like Swanson of Virginia, who spoke yesterday, is for the league as well as the court.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Senator William E. Borah, republican, of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, and implacable foe of the league of nations and the world court, launched his long-awaited fight in the senate this afternoon against adhesion to the court.

The galleries quickly filed to capacity as Borah took the floor. Washinton had long been eager to hear his attack upon the administration's world court program.

Borah, after denouncing the court as a creature made by the league of nations to do the league's bidding, introduced three reservations designed to emphasize America's aloofness from the political entanglements of Europe.

Borah concluded a vigorous speech against adherence by calling upon his republican colleagues not to vote the United States into the court just because a court was endorsed in the republican platform.

Mussolinis in the Trade Unions Talk at Banquet About "Popular Rights"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the December (Christmas) edition of the Painter and Decorator, the official organ of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, arrives. More than half of its space is given over to the report of the union's delegation to the October convention of the American Federation of Labor convention at Atlantic City.

Anyone with scissors, paste and a lead pencil could have prepared this report in fifteen minutes from the official printed minutes of the A. F. of L. convention.

The only ingenuity shown is in cutting out the reactionary speeches and printing them in full, while every semblance of progress displayed at Atlantic City is carefully censored.

• • • •

This report, that is typical of the accounts that all standpat delegations to the A. F. of L. convention are making to their organizations, comes at the same time that 130 trade union and "public officials" are banquetting Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., in Washington. Lawrence Todd, the capitol representatives of the Federated Press, regales us with this information:

> "The keynote of the speeches and of the letters read from absent labor executives, including President Green of the American Federation of Labor, and President Robertson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, WAS A RENEWAL OF PLEDGES OF DEFENSE OF POPULAR RIGHTS in the spirit of the first LaFollette."

• • • •

The membership of the Painters' Union, for instance, in common with the rank and file of other organizations, should know how their so-called "popular rights" are assassinated in the union.

President George F. Hedrick, the expulsionist, head of the painters, was chief of his union's delegation at Atlantic City, and there was no minority. The report is therefore unanimous.

It starts out with full publication of the speech of Hedrick's fellow expulsionist, Fritz Tarnow, spokesman of the German fraternal delegates, who contributed not a single idea to the gathering. Any reactionary on this side of the Atlantic, without the social-democratic label, could have done as well. The historic plea for world trade union unity, delivered by A. A. Purcell, of the British delegation, is dismissed with seven critical lines. But President Green's cowardly attack on Purcell, when the British delegate had no opportunity to reply, is also published in full, with special efforts being made to draw attention to it.

• • • •

This is merely another example of how the labor officialdom that talks about "popular rights" at banquets, plays a Mussolini role in actual practice. It may be well to remember that the painters' delegation, in addition to Hedrick, included Charles J. Lammert, general secretary-treasurer; Nick Smith, Local Union No. 19; P. H. Triggs, Local Union No. 257; John T. Doyle, Local Union No. 43; Charles J. Eisenring, Local Union No. 341, and Joseph F. Kelley, (alternate) first general vice-president. These names were signed to the report that made a virtue of censorship thru the suppression of important developments at the Atlantic City A. F. of L. convention.

• • • •

The painters' journal could well dispense with a few pages of jokes and bourgeois propaganda and conduct an open forum to contain the contributions of the union's members discussing vital problems. The rank and file must raise and win this demand. It should lead to the exposure of the practices of the Hedrick outfit and prepare the way for the day when at least a strong minority will sit in the delegation of the painters' union at A. F. of L. conventions. This applies equally to all other international unions, without exception.

IN accepting Rakovsky, the Russian ambassador to France, President Doumergue heard the Bolshevik say this: "The people of the Soviet Union are firmly attached to peace as an indispensible condition for the development of their country and salute with joy any real progress on the part of more intimate political and economic collaboration with the government, and people of France." To which Doumergue replied that "the disposition by which you are animated, coupled with your experience, will permit us to undertake with confidence the consideration of the difficulties still existing between our two countries."

NOT so many years ago France was waging war against Soviet Russia. In those days French statesmen said they would never shake hands with the "bloody Bolshevik." But the Red Army won and that settled that. Now France is not only shaking hands with a Soviet envoy but with one who is a leader in the Russian Communist Party. In the near future we may enjoy the spectacle of Calvin Coolidge receiving a Soviet ambassador with words just as sweet and just as meaningless. It must not be assumed that there is no danger of war between Soviet Russia and the capitalist powers simply because they have recognized the workers' government. They are only marking time.

LADY ASTOR recently offered to pay the passage to Russia of "any believer in the present Bolshevist regime who was prepared to go to Russia and live for two years to experience 'the joys of Bolshevist rule'" as the addle-brained parasite put it. She had many offers, but she refused to fulfill her promise unless she can get the "right kind of man to undertake the test." What about hiring our Mr. Nosovitsky or the rum sleuth Spolansky? Those gentlemen would be willing to turn an honest penny at any task that is sufficiently filthy. What the lady wants is a first-class stool-pigeon and sneak.

COLONEL CHARLES SWEENEY of Spokane, Washington, the gallant gentleman who organized a squadron of American aviators to help the French bomb Morrocan villages and murder women and children, has been honored by the French government with the high rank of grand officer of the Legion of Honor. "Processional" is one of those plays that needs an introduction because it has not the limb display of a Follies chorus or the merry suggestiveness of a "What Price Glory?" Hence it has not been so loudly cursed as the one or so shockingly advertised as the other.

The play that we are just now writing about might have remained in semi-obscurity for another aeon or so, but for a conspiracy entered into between the Studio Players, the district office of the Workers Party and this press agent, to resurrect the dead and present it to all who crave good, clean amusement, on the evening of Dec. 27, at Lawndale Hall, 3437 Ogden Ave. corner of Ogden and St. Louis avenue.

There are wrinkles in this play—I believe the polished stage writers have another and more polite term—that were not smoothed out by the Theater Guild when that corporation produced "Processional." The fact is that the play has got a lot of dynamite stored away in its innards that the Theater Guild were afraid to touch off, lest the $50.00 contributions from the condescending bourgeoisie might go a-glimmering. But be that as it may.

The author of the play is John Howard Lawson. It is a satire on present day life, done so cleverly that the audience is warned to be on the job intellectually, every minute of the time. It is one of those de-bunking plays that only happen occasionally. There are plenty of laughs in it and this is no world for those who have not yet learned to laugh.

The manager of the Studio Players in an exclusive interview granted to the press agent guaranteed that all normal people will enjoy the show. This is not a threat to those who may feel like making a legitimate criticism.

This is the first announcement. Others just as snappy are forthcoming.

P. S.—The proceeds will be devoted to the activities of District No. 8 of the Workers Party.

JEWISH WORKERS CONFER ON RUSS COLONIZATION

Every progressive Workingmen's Circle, Jewish unions, radical organizations, will send delegates or their officials to the conference for the Jewish Colonization in Soviet Russia to be held Sunday morning, Dec. 20th, at Liberty Hall, 3420 W. Roosevelt Rd., at 10 o'clock.

This conference will be represented also by individuals who are interested in the great accomplishments of the Soviet government, colonizing the Jews that were compelled under czarism to live a life of idlers and shop keepers, to become productive peasants and tillers of the soil. This conference is held as a starting point of a big campaign to interest every Jewish worker, every radical and progressive organization to take part in the great reconstruction work that goes on in Soviet Russia to colonize the Jews on the soil and also to bring them into industrial life of the country.

is living more obscurely simply to assist in an easier death for his reputation as a white guard counter-revolutionist. He was always a strong Kornilov man.

Dreamed of Vast Estates.

Ford once dreamed of taking over large tracts of land in Russia including mineral and water power resources, as soon as the Romanovs were re-established. Undoubtedly, an understanding existed.

Ford's right-about-face in his opinion as to how best to exploit Russian resources and may be due in part to visits paid to his offices by such persons as Anna Louise Strong, and his desire for more profits.

Russian Workers Watch.

The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics stands a chance of benefitting greatly from any negotiations opened with the Ford interests. But his past associations will not be forgotten and the representatives of the revolutionary workers and farmers of Russia will be on their guard against the Shinkerenko of Ford's staff.

That Ford has changed his attitude toward Soviet Russia may indicate changes are imminent in Washington. Ford is closer to the Coolidge administration than he has been to any other. And Ford likes to be first in the field.

SOVIET RUSSIA WILL NOT JOIN BRIGAND LEAGUE

Litvinov Nails Lies of Capitalist Press

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Dec. 18.—When asked as to what the attitude of the Soviet Union was towards the league of nations and the Locarno peace pact, Maxim Litvinov declared that all the rumors and comments appearing in the world's press, alleging that the Soviet government has abandoned its former attitude towards the league of nations and the Locarno treaties, are baseless. The spreading of such rumors, coinciding with the signature of the Locarno agreements, is evidently prompted by a desire to encourage acceptance of the agreements by that section of public opinion which suspects the possibility of their being used against the Soviet Union.

League, Alliance of Powers.

The Soviet government, he declared, continues to consider the league of nations, not as a friendly union of nations, but as a masked combination of "great powers," disposing of the fate of the weaker nations. The entrance of Germany does not alter the league's nature, for it is clear that certain nations have the intention of turning to their profit Germany's participation, in order to execute their plans generally, and their hostile designs against the Soviet Union particularly.

The Soviet government, said Litvinov, more than any other government, is interested in peace on the basis of the independence and self-determination of all nations, and it would welcome the creation of an international organization thru which each nation could effect its national sovereign rights.

League Fails to Function.

The Soviet government considers the league of nations to be least of all an approach to such an organization. The league has not only failed to preserve the right of weak nations against violence and military outrages by stronger powers, but no serious steps have been taken on the question of disarmament, in which the whole of humanity, and particularly the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, is keenly interested.

The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, the country of the toiling masses, cannot share responsibility with the league for sanctifying the oppression and exploitation of other nations.

To Stand Aloof.

M. Litvinov, in conclusion, said the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics firmly intends in future to stand aloof from the league of nations and all similar organizations.

500 Minneapolis, Minn., Police Out to Find 3 Gas Station Robbers

By FRANCES M. DICKEY
(Worker Correspondent)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 18.—Five hundred regular and special Minneapolis police were on the trail of the three hold-up men who robbed three gas filling stations. A serious charge will be placed against them if caught, for robbing the oil interests is a terrible crime.

The capitalist papers howl about the crime of robbing filling stations, but does this same reptile press ever expose the robbery of the workers by the oil interests?

When the workers learn to organize their might against the class which lives by their blood, they will not rob filling stations, they will then take the earth, which rightfully belongs to them.

STUDENTS WILL POLL PARENTS ON MILITARISM

College Undergraduates Against Training

By SYLVAN A. POLLAK.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 18. — The latest development in the anti-military training struggle of the students of the College of the City of New York, who recently by an overwhelming vote placed themselves on record as opposed to its continuance, is a referendum of the 6,000 parents of the undergraduates, which is being conducted by the Students' Council to obtain their opinion on the matter. The vote of the faculty of the college was 65 to 16, in favor of the compulsory course in military science.

President of the college, Mezes, said that so far as the faculty is concerned the refusal to accede to the students' demand is final and the matter will now go to the board of trustees for final action.

President Frederick Kraut, of the Student Council, said that as soon as the vote of the parents was completed, the results would be tabulated and presented to the faculty.

Workers Write About the Workers' Life

UNITED GARMENT UNION OFFICIALS AID EMPLOYERS

Persecution of Active Workers Continues

By A Worker Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, Pa. Dec. 18. — The officials of the United Garment Workers' Union have again demonstrated their collabroation with the bosses by having three girls fired for daring to oppose their flunkeys at the recent election.

Aid Bosses' Candidates.

An organizer by the name of Burkson was sent here to engineer the election so that the officials favorable to the bosses would be elected. This stool pigeon did his work in the most contemptible manner possible. Altho he and the bosses are Jewish, they continually played upon the religious prejudices of the workers by pointing out that the candidates that opposed the machine were Jews and the workers supporting the candidates, being Jews never were satisfied with what they got. Just before the election the floor-lady and boss went from girl to girl telling them that they should not vote for the "Bolsheviks." The girls had never heard of Bolsheviks before and now are getting an education as to what Bolshevism is.

Grill Small Girl.

A few days before the elections a leaflet, issued by some of the members of the union, was given out to the workers as they went out of the shops. The bosses assaulted those distributing the leaflets and dragged a 14-year old girl into the shop, where she was grilled and later warned not to distribute the leaflets again. The leaflet pointed out that during the present administration the following miserable conditions were put into effect:

Union Conditions Lost.

1. Reductions in prices on some operations were enforced before the expiration of the agreement and nothing was done to prevent it.
2. Workers were fired without cause and were not reinstated.
3. The sanitary conditions of our shops are becoming worse from day to day. Just think of our wash rooms, dressing rooms, ventilation, etc. What was done to better them?
4. No effort was made to organize the open shops of the garment industry of Pittsburgh and vicinity, thereby weakening our chances to better our conditions. Nothing was done to achieve closer unity with the other organizations of the needle trades of Pittsburgh.

After the elections took place three of the active workers, one a candidate for business agent, were fired from the shop. This act shows the bosses and the labor fakers working hand in hand to crush those who dare to fight for union conditions.

Youth and Age Discuss the 'Terrible' Soviets

By A Worker Correspondent.

A small group of men were seated around the stove in a little country town store of Marietta, Minn., "soaking up heat" as one of them expressed it, when asked what he was doing.

The always loquacious proprietor began making conversation.

"I hear that Bill Haywood has left Russia. Says he would rather be in prison in Leavenworth than a free man in Russia."

"Seems to me you must be on pretty intimate terms with Bill to know of his whereabouts and also his opinion of Soviet Russia. When is Bill planning on coming back?" This from a youth among them.

"No I read it in the Journal," replied the man behind the counter and he began a frantic search for the choice bit of news.

"Oh save yourself the trouble," said the young man. "If you saw it in that paper it 'must be so.' I read in the Journal several years ago that the Soviet government could not exist for ten days, but of course that was only a slight miscalculation."

"These capitalist owned newspapers are always talking about conditions being so bad in Soviet Russia. They've nothing to brag about conditions in France, in England, Turkey, Belgium, Germany, Italy but you never hear any complaints about those countries. Do you know why? Because a government exists in those countries in conformity with the desires of our money mad plutocracy and since this is so the newspapers of this country which are but instruments in their hands do not consider the deplorable status of the workers in the capitalist countries. If I want reliable information about Soviet Russia I read a working class paper and not a capitalist paper. I choose to place no reliance in the prostituted 'Brass Check' press. I read The DAILY WORKER."

Bootlegger Asks for Convoy.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 18—Police were appealed to by a had-working bootlegger for protection. Morris Goldberg told officers hi-jackers relieved him of $3,500 worth of holiday liquor near his home.

WALL NEWSPAPER HAS ARRIVED IN AMERICAN SHOPS

The DAILY WORKER correspondent of the Morey machine shop has sent us a copy of their shop bulletin. We print it in full here. This bulletin will give our correspondents a concrete example of the role of the factory wall newspaper in the daily struggles of the workers.

Morey Wage Slave Bulletin.

Because the boss found 3 copies of the last issue of Morey Wage Slave on their benches. That issue carried the message of A. A. Purcell calling upon us workers to agitate, educate and organize. These three words alarmed the boss so, that he fired three workers from the shop.

The boss knows what he is doing. He is class conscious. We, the workers, do not know our interest. We are not class conscious.

This little bulletin has many things for our interest. It gives facts about the miserable conditions in which we work and live. It also shows us the way to better our working and living conditions.

Read this carefully, fellow workers. This bulletin speaks for our cause Our boss hates to see workers become class conscious. For he wants men with strong backs and weak minds. Because the less workers know the more he can rob them and get away with it. And whoever dares to put us wise to the game the boss plays, gets the gate, as the other three workers did—unless we get the shop organized. Then the boss will stop his present tactics and gives in to our important demands.

No boss can be a friend of his workers. Friends do not rob, do not submit us to working under most unsanitary conditions. Friends don't act like slave holders as Mr. Himoff is doing. Everybody for his own class.

Workers have one enemy, one fight and one victory.

Workers of the world—unite for the victory.

Learn about your working conditions, read the only labor daily newspaper—The DAILY WORKER. It is the only English daily that fights for the workers and gives facts about our conditions. Go to 108 East 14th St., New York City, and ask for this valuable paper, The DAILY WORKER.

Grubich Wears a Poster and Pickets His Shop to Tell Workers of Strike

By A Worker Correspondent

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—For four years Abraham Grubich, a tailor and a member of Local No. 2 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union worked for the firm of Herman & Herman of 77 Stanton Street, this city.

Last week Grubich's bosses discovered that they could take the work that Grubich was doing and send it to a small tailor shop around the corner where the work would be done cheaper. Grubich noticed that from day to day the amount of work given him was dwindling and eight days ago he was fired. The result is that he is on strike and is every day out in front of his former employer's shop with a card on his back explaining to the people who pass that he is on strike Grubich is very confident that he will win out soon.

CORRESPONDENTS' CLASS IN CHICAGO GROWS IN SIZE AND ENTHUSIASM

On Thursday night the class in Chicago Worker Correspondents pitched into work that is very promising for the immediate future. Workers from the building trades, millinery workers, taxi drivers, milk drivers, and a young apprentice in radio construction were among the new members to join the class. They all joined the "Living Newspaper", appointed a secretary whose immediate duty is to send an article to The DAILY WORKER explaining the "Living Newspaper." This article will appear in the Monday issue.

The most exciting period in the class was the one in which the contributions by the students of the class were criticized. Everyone joined. At the end of the session the instructor, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, pointed out some of the rules to be observed in writing. Everyone of the 14 students present pledged himself and herself to send in a number of contributions for the coming week.

Class Meets in New York Monday.

On Monday Dec. 21, at 8 p. m. the New York Worker Correspondents' class meets at 108 E. 14th street. Joseph Freeman, instructor, has sent us a message that the class is getting under way. It will be observed that a correspondent from New York won the first prize. More New York workers should attend the class and enter next week's contest.

Factory Nucleus Elects Worker Correspondents for Organization Drive

By A Worker Correspondent

NEW YORK City—Every member of Factory District Nucleus No. 1 of Section 5 arrived on time for the first meeting at a lunch room in the district. After a discussion of the new form of activity the following plan was unanimously adopted:

First, distribution of The DAILY WORKER in the cloak and suit and millinery districts on Thursday noon every week. Special articles by the worker correspondents on conditions in their respective shops and a distribution made of the paper at the shop. A drive for new members will be made among the many sympathizers in the various factories where the comrades are employed. The comrades are enthusiastic about the new method of approach to the workers.

From all indications our first meeting, 1st District No. 1, Section 5, will build up a large powerful group of Bolsheviks whose presence will be felt by the bosses in the millinery and cloak and suit districts. The following campaigns will be energetically carried out for a labor party, for international trade union unity, for recognition of Soviet Russa, for the building up of the International Labor Defense. Two worker correspondents, one for the Freiheit and one for The DAILY WORKER, are to immediately write a series of short articles on conditions in their respective trades to demonstrate how imperative it is that the workers support us in the above demands, become members of the Workers (Communist) Party, the only party that is fighting for the working class.

WORKERS PICKET STATE CAPITOL EXPOSING BOARD

Corrupt Administration of Labor Heads Hit

By A Worker Correspondent

BOSTON, Nov. 18—A group of members of the Workers (Communist) Party picketed the state capitol today bearing banners, exposing the corrupt administration and personnel of the state board of labor and industries here.

Following are some of the demands the placards bore:

Consumption for the workers, profit for the boss in Cambridge Radio factory.

Berry Box and Packing Co. is violating state labor laws.

Workers Party calls on organized labor to act.

Meade must go.

Sweep Switzer out.

Workers Party demands immediate investigation of the state department of labor and industries.

A number of capitalist press reporters interviewed the picketers, photographed the demonstrators and carried away with them a copy of Monday's issue of The DAILY WORKER which set forth the facts of the case at the Cambridge factory.

Consternation was caused within the State House by the pickets. Bareheaded clerks rushed out into the streets to ascertain how serious was the expose. The traffic policemen on duty, at this point, a very busy corner were called into the State House and were told to ignore the pickets.

The immediate result of this was that the department hastened to "cover up." Already an order has gone out to the owners of the factory. Meade and Switzer are taking all steps to protect themselves. Other disclosures of the manner in which this department "protects" the workers are forthcoming, and it will take more than a politician's alibies to satisfy the workers.

The demand for a sweeping investigation will be taken up on the floor of the Boston Central Labor Union. It is expected to bring far reaching results.

As was expected, the kept press minimized the demonstration. The photographs were suppressed and only a bare mention was made of the matter. The names of the factories were concealed and the state department was given space in which to publish a lying denial of the charges.

But this will not fool the workers in the shops. Hundreds of copies of the DAILY WORKER were distributed, and the workers realize that the only paper that will fight for their interest is the DAILY WORKER.

Bill Favoring Seamen Introduced in Senate

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—A bill has been introduced in the senate favored by the International Seamen's Union of America establishing a continuous discharge book system for able seamen in the merchant marine. This book would give to each seaman a record of his employment which would not be at the mercy of a hostile master in case of industrial dispute.

Pacifist Propaganda for World Court

Pacifist clubs, church societies, liberal societies and all the motley crew of peace propagandists are mobilized under the leadership of the agents of the House of Morgan for the purpose of ensnaring the United States into the world court. Morgan's interest in the court is known. It is the same motive that impelled his most noted servant, Woodrow Wilson, to advocate the league of nations. Bank capital, with heavy investments in Europe, wants to bring direct political pressure to bear upon the debtor nations. The world court and the league as they now stand may easily become instruments for concerted European resistance against what is coming to be contemptously known as "dollarocracy"—the autocracy of the dollar, which means the power of Wall Street. The Morgan government must combat any tendency in that direction.

By entering the court the agents of American imperialism can help formulate its decisions in the interest of Morgan. The stage in Washington is set for this government, which is the agent of bank capital, to endeavor to enter the league, via the world court, while maintaining the illusion of bourgeois democracy.

So Morgan and his henchmen, knowing the average American pacifist is merely a lime-lighter, an inordinate publicity seeker, know that if they finance his organizations and promise him a trip to Washington on a lobbying expedition under the guise of pacifism he will fall for it and fall hard. This, combined with the propaganda of bought and paid for newspapers, will create the illusion of popular demand for the court.

An examination of the personnel of the pacifist crew now in full cry in the ranks of the jackal pack of imperialism reveals the same line-up of the rag-tag and bob-tail of petty bourgeois intelligentzia that followed in the wake of the late Woodrow Wilson when that lackey of Morgan was formulating beautiful pacifist slogans to conceal his war preparations.

Surely even the senators who are trusted lackeys of Morgan must despise these loathsome vermin as they sprawl around the capitol building with their half-baked manifestos and tons of drivelling propaganda. The role of the pacifist apologist for the world court is that of scab upon the regular flunkeys of Wall Street.

Membership Expects Action

The general executive board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union will be in session in a day or so in compliance with the constitutional provisions for quarterly meetings. This session is of more than ordinary concern to the membership in view of the crisis that is rapidly developing in that organization.

Wage cuts, under the guise of victories, are the basis for resentment against the officialdom of the Amalgamated. When the brazen efforts to turn a palpable retreat into victory meets the resentment of the membership and when the membership dares protest the officials resort to gangsterism, to sluggings and thuggery. This situation is the prelude to a repetition of the fight that was waged against the Sigman machine in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. An identical conflict is being developed by Sidney Hillman and his machine.

The membership is watching the meeting of the G. E. B. and they expect a repudiation of gangster tactics, of terrorizing opposition candidates and those who support progressive measures in elections. Furthermore the question of the Amalgamated bank and the discharge of Joseph Shafir because he dared to fight for progressive measures in the A. F. of L. convention must be definitely settled or both the bank and the leadership of the organization will be totally discredited.

If Hillman is as astute as his supporters would like him to appear he will clean out the anti-union elements in his organization while he still has the power to do so, instead of provoking a situation similar to that now facing Sigman in the I. L. G. W. U. Either the general executive board will put a stop to it now and save its face or the organization itself will stop it in the course of a convention that will make the name of Hillman as despised of all unionists as is that of Sigman.

Sigman's predicament today is the certain future of Hillman unless he acts and acts quickly to put a stop to the terrorism of his agents in the Amalgamated.

Loreism in Action

Every passing day vindicates anew the action of the last convention of the Workers (Communist) Party in excluding from its ranks that detestable opportunist, right winger and reviler of the Communist International, Ludwig Lore. Now that he is out the party his real position is clear to all.

The convention of the Amalgamated Food Workers now going on in New York City furnishes an example of Loreism in action. The henchmen of this discredited renegade united with the right wing elements in the union in order to defeat a resolution in favor of the workers establishing a labor party.

We said at the time he first opposed the labor party slogan that the reason he was afraid of such a party was because there is so little difference between him and the right wingers in the labor movement that he was afraid he would completely lose his identity. But his gang identify themselves with the right wingers on every possible occasion outside a labor party. Being sectarians, they oppose any broad mass movement, such as would develop thru a labor party. They consider themselves, alone, as the leaders of labor on the political field, while they flirt with the right wing in the unions. This mechanical division is one of the characteristics of opportunism.

But not even the right wing will long tolerate this discredited careerist. The rank and file of the Amalgamated Food Workers will soon learn that Loreism means an abandonment of the struggle against capitalism and impotent vegetating in the swamp of left social-democratic sectarianism.

After Locarno, which was to assure the peace of the world, we had the storming of Damascus, the Anglo-Turkish fight over Mosul oil and the Greek-Bulgar affair. In spite of this Spain now wants the blessings of Locarno extended to other nations.

Forward to Party Unity and Mass Work

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, Gen. Secy. Workers (Communist) Party.

THE central executive committee of the party has set as the most important task before the party the unification of the party and the throwing of the strength of our organization into mass work.

Every party member who gives thotful consideration to the party situation will agree that the achievement of this goal is the greatest need of the party at the present time.

Starting in 1922 and developing with an upward curve in the year 1923, and part of 1924, the party carried on successful work among the masses of the workers in this country. The party was the center of the campaign which held the interest and had the support of hundreds of thousands of workers and exploited farmers. It participated in the actual struggle of the workers and greater part of the energy and strength of the party was thrown into these struggles.

As a consequence the party membership grew and with it the influence and prestige of the party. One need only look at the figures showing the new members who came into our party to find the proof that the party was on the road to becoming the living, virile influence in the labor movement of this country.

This situation had not existed for at least a year before the national convention of the party. In place of throwing its energies outward, the strength of the party was directed to the inner party struggle. The party undoubtedly has come out of this inner struggle stronger in its Communist understanding with a clearer conception of its role in the class struggle. The struggle was a necessary phase in the process of the bolshevization of the party, even tho during the period of this struggle the party lost influence and prestige among the masses.

Now, however, we must again direct our energies outward. We must again throw the greater part of the strength and energy of the party into the struggles of the workers. The party has reached the point where it cannot stand continuation of an inner struggle such as shook it to its very center during the last year. The future of the party depends now upon the success of the leadership in healing the wounds caused by the factional struggle directing its energies into mass work.

It was the consciousness of this situation which was the compelling force which brot the action of the political committee to formulate a basis on which the groupings in the party could be wiped out and the whole party go forward in increasing the influence, prestige and membership of the party.

The Basis For Unification.

THE basis for united work, a united leadership and a united party was laid in the resolutions of the Parity Commission which were unanimously adopted by the national convention. With a clear political line established, the ground for factional groupings disappear. No Communist can approve of the existence of groups or factions when there is agreement on policy between the members of these groups and factions. Our party established such an agreement in its fourth national convention thru adoption of the Parity Commission resolutions and thus created the conditions for ending factional groupings and struggle within the party. It is upon the basis of the convention resolution that the central executive committee urges all comrades to unite, to turn the resolution into living influences in the class struggle by work to carry them into effect among the masses in the shops, in the trade unions, among the Negro workers, against imperialism, work among women, and so forth.

The fourth convention resolutions included that for the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei and street nuclei and the building of language fractions in place of the language sections which had existed in the party. The carrying into effect of reorganization, with which the central executive committee is proceeding energetically and which it has already achieved in some cities, requires the unification of all Communist elements in our party.

The reorganization has developed opposition in some quarters. Lore, who while in the party did not dare to raise his voice against reorganization, now openly scoffs at proposals to build the party on shop nuclei and street nuclei basis and his views find an echo in some, fortunately small, groups in our party. Support of the reorganization as a phase of the bolshevization of the party should be another force drawing together for the struggle against the opposition to reorganization, all the comrades in the leadership of the party and the membership that is enthusiastically fighting to build our party on a true Bolshevik basis.

The Trade Union Question.

SOME comrades in the party have raised the question of the tactics to be employed in our trade union work as an issue to throw a monkey wrench into the work of unification and mobilization for mass work. There is no basis for such an attitude.

The central executive committee has not proposed any basic change of our policy in the trade union work. These are established in the convention resolution and in the letter of the Comintern and Profintern to our party. The central executive committee proposes an energetic fight to put these policies into practice.

The only question which has been raised is a question of tactics in carrying out the basic policies which have been established for the party.

In order to prevent the question of tactics which must be employed in building a broad left wing movement in the unions from becoming a new issue for factional groupings in the party, the central executive committee has provided that the resolution adopted by the C. E. C. shall be submitted to the Comintern and the Profintern for approval before it will be carried into effect. The party can await the decision by the Comintern and Profintern on this question with calm assurance that the party will follow the right road. Efforts to create division on this issue under these circumstances are influenced by other motives than the best interests of the party and should not be tolerated by the party.

The Attitude Towards Comrade Foster

THE view has been expressed in the party that the unity resolution of the central executive committee is directed against Comrade Foster and that the majority which has been formed on the basis of the unity resolution has as its purpose a struggle against Comrade Foster and against his influence in the party.

There are no facts to justify such a statement. The leadership of the central executive committee which consists of more than a three-fourths majority would welcome nothing more than that Comrade Foster and those who still stand with him should forget their factional differences and join with them to carry on their part in the leadership of the party and help to develop a militant campaign of mass work by the party on the basis of the resolutions of the national convention.

The unity resolution declares that it is necessary thru argument and pursuasion to win those comrades who are still persisting in taking a position of opposition and continuing a factional fight, for the unification of the party and for the mass work of the party. This has been and will be the policy of the central executive committee.

The reports of the membership meetings and the district executive committees where the unity resolution was discussed, show that the over whelming majority of the party supports the line taken by the central executive committee, and is ready to co-operate with it in liquidating factionalism and making the party a living, fighting organization in the class struggle. Every effort must be made to win the twenty per cent of the party which still persists, both in the C. E. C. and the membership in maintaining a factional opposition, for this line, in the practical carrying out of the work of the C. E. C.

Favorable Conditions for Building the Party.

The work of the central executive committee for the unification of the party and developing its work among the masses comes at a time when the economic and political conditions present a most favorable opportunity for the success of our work.

There are many indications that the working class is turning from its meek submission to the attack of the capitalist exploiters to vigorous resistance and even towards aggressive action. Evidence of this is to be found in the struggle of the anthracite miners, the demands of the railroad workers for increased pay, the militant spirit and the growth of the left wing in the needle trades, the resistance of the textile workers to wage cuts and the movement among them for trade union organization.

Among the working farmers, a new wave of struggle against their exploiters is developing. The rejection of President Coolidge's proposal for the farmers by great organizations of farmers, the new movement for the formation of farmer-labor parties in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and North Dakota, are indications that the exploited farmer is again in a fighting spirit.

The movement for the formation of a labor party has received new impetus by the unanimous endorsement of the Furriers and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union convention. With the state and congressional elections approaching in 1926, conditions are favorable for actual achievement in the organization by the workers of a party in some states which will fight for their class interests, which will have mass support.

Our party must take advantage of this favorable situation for the development of its influence and establishing its leadership among the working masses and the exploited farmers. It can only do that if it mobilises all its strength in support of its campaigns among the masses. If the party can again throw its energies into these campaigns, it will be on the high road of progress and we may look forward to an increase in its prestige, its influence, and the strengthening of its membership. The opportunity to achieve this lies before us. The question is whether we have the strength and leadership to achieve it. The condition for success in seizing this opportunity and building our party is the unification of our forces for the work among the masses.

It is because the unification of our party is the condition for our success in building our party into a powerful factor in the American labor movement, that the whole party should rally to the support of the line laid down by the central executive committee in its unity resolution.

The Crimes of Wall Street Imperialism in Cuba

THE circular printed below was received yesterday from Havana by the United States section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League. As it is dated November 28, one might suppose that mail service between Cuba and the United States is very, very slow. It is, and particularly at the present time. The brutal facts set forth in the circular will perhaps explain why it was held up somewhere in transit. The mystery is that it was allowed to arrive at all

What the circular establishes beyond the shadow of a doubt is that the imprisonment of Julio A. Mella and the twelve Cuban labor leaders at the dictation of the American sugar interests is not an isolated incident but is part of a whole reign of terror on the island instituted by American imperialism with the aid of the servile Machado govrnment. The savage grip of American imperialism is tightening everywhere! Deportations of "anti-American elements' from Cuba Panama and Costa Rica; the strike-breaking military occupation of the City of Panama by American troops; Military Governor Russell's abrogation of presidential elections in Haiti; General Wood's latest arbitrary acts against the independence movement in the Philippines; the maneuvers of Pershing in the Tacna-Arica district of South America—these are only a few of the things that characterize the development of American imperialist policy in the last two months.

In making public this circular of its Cuban section, the All-America Anti-Imperialist League calls upon all workers to attend the anti-imperialist protest meeting to be held at North & Western Aves, Chicago, tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Circular of the Cuban Section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League Regarding the Origin and Magnitude of the Crimes Now Being Committed Against the Cuban Proletariat.

IN this circular the Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League proposes to inform all the peoples of the Americes regarding the outrages now being committed in Cuba—and of the causes which led to the imprisonment of our general secretary, Julio Antonio Mella, and numerous labor leaders—of the threat of a shut-down against the national university and of the dissolution of labor organizations.

Early in August, there assembled in the city of Camaguey a convention of the Confederation of Labor, representing 200,000 organized workers. On the 22nd day of the same month the Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League staged a great demonstration at Mars Field, Havana. In the labor convention it was decided, among other things, to start a campaign to organize the peasants; in the demonstration the slogans issued dealt with the approaching economic crisis, laying full blame at the door of American imperialism. About the same time, the Union of Factory Workers declared a strike for higher wages. The employers in their turn, organized and declared a lockout, at the same time entering a formal complaint with the government, charging the leaders of the union with injecting poisonous matter into the products of their factories.

The government, determined to obstruct the development of the Confederation of Labor and disturb the propaganda of the Cuban section of the anti-imperialist league, began a persecution of labor leaders and of the speakers at the anti-imperialist meeting. The persecutions began in the last few days of August, giving as a basis the alleged acts of sabotage referred to above.

The secretary of the Communist Party, who had spoken at the anti-imperialist meeting, was arrested and many party documents were confiscated—minutes of various meetings, plan of organization, list of members, and a little map of the city of Havana.

A Crude Frame-up.

With this scant material, the police elaborated their frame-up. They added to the charges of poisoning that of conspiring against the security of the state, on the flimsy pretext that on the map of Havana found among Mella's papers a red mark had been placed over the building occupied by the National Bank of Cuba. This red mark, like many similar ones on the map, had served merely to acquaint the secretary, who was a stranger in Havana, with the location of the streets.

On the basis of this "evidence," together with the ordinary manifestos of the Communist Party, trade unions and the Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, the indictments were drawn up—heaping together the activities of Communists and anarchists, so as to give the appearance of a "united front" against the government. A number of workers were indicted with Mella.

Bail was refused the accused at first but finally, after considerable pressure, they were liberated under a provisional bail of $1,000 each.

The Union of Factory Workers was declared illegal. At the same time a wholesale deportation of foreigners was carried out, including all those who had expressed "anti-American opinions."

Notwithstanding indifference of the public in the face of these police outrages, the police felt it necessary to justify their conduct, and on September 17 arranged the explosion of a few small bombs in various parts of the city, with such ill effect that even the bourgeoisie, refused to become panic-stricken and no one paid any attention to the matter.

The student leader, Julio Antonio Mella, out on bail, redoubled his activities in the anti-imperialist league, in the Communist Party and in the trade union centers, as well as among the students of the national university.

The Hand of the Sugar Trust.

The economic crisis in Cuba was now at its height, aggravated considerably by the low price paid to the "colonos" for their sugar which did not cover the cost of production. The "colonos," accordingly, organized and refused to continue cutting cane. In order to bring pressure upon them in the interest of the Wall Street combines, President Machado took immediate action. Determined at all cost to prevent the activities of labor leaders on behalf of the "colonos," the government resurrected the forgotten incident of the bomb explosions of September 17, suddenly revoking the bail of all those accused of having violated the law regarding explosives. On November 27, Mella and twelve labor leaders were imprisoned. Undoubtedly a contributing cause of the arrest of Mella was his activity against American imperialism among the students of the national university, whose strong stand against American interference in the affairs of Cuba had "embarassed" the president in his relations with Ambassador Crowder.

As will be seen from the facts given above, the indictment and the imprisonments are the result of a long period of preliminary maneuvers, hedged around with imaginary and fantastic plots, carried out with the authorization of a manifestly partial judiciary, the arrests were preceded by repeated threats of assassination against Mella—threats which were not to be taken lightly after the mysterious murders of the editor of El Dia (newspaper opposing the government), of the labor leader Varona (who organized the big 1924 strike in the sugar centrals controlled by the American companies) and of the Catalonian, Couxart (who was murdered in the military fortress of La Cabana, Havana).

Meanwhile the government intercepts all news from the provinces, preventing knowledge of the consequences (probably bloody) of the active protest of the peasants in the sugar fields. It is known, however, that military "supervisors" have been named for the sugar centrals, with instructions to do their duty without too much recourse to persuasion. It is known also that the peasants have not given up the fight; they refuse to carry out orders that do not come from the "colonos," who guarantee their wages and who are the ones who at the present moment are refusing to cut cane because of the miserable prices paid by the American companies.

Imperialist "Law and Order."

THE outrages we are describing in this circular may be explained by the public declarations of General Machado in the United States, which he visited a month before taking office as president of the republic. At that time he stated that his government would be a better "Platt amendment" than the amendment itself. He promised the American interests that "law and order" would reign thruout the republic and no strike would last 48 hours without being repressed by force.

For Machado, disorder consists in the righteous claims of the working class, in the campaigns against American imperialism among all sections of the population and in the activities of the students of the national university in behalf of the liberation of their country.

"Law and order" for Machado, just as for President Chiari of Panama, signifies security and development of American interests at the sacrifice of native victims, at the sacrifice of the economic independence of the state.

If in Panama a simple rent strike of worker tenants could bring about the intervention of Yankee soldiers, we can expect that in the present situation in Cuba the bloodlust of Wall Street will not be satisfied with the indictments and arrests so far undertaken by the Cuban government, but will insist upon still greater outrages.

In spite of the reprisals, the Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League will continue its activity in the national university (as long as the university is allowed to remain open); in the labor organizations, etc. It will give full voice to its program: Abolition of the Platt amendment which makes Cuba a mere protectorate of the United States, abolition of the American naval base at Guantanmo, campaign against the forced loans from Wall Street—particularly the $100.000.000 loan now in project. We denounce before all the peoples of the Americas the outrages now being committed on Cuban soil.

Mella and the labor leaders are in jail by order of American imperialism. The students, workers and vital forces of the entire continent must demand their liberty.—Havana, Nov. 28, 1925.

Decembrists Put to Death in Russia in 1825 faces were serious as if they were thinking about a very important matter. . .

"They were preparing themselves to die. They looked to the sky for the last time, but with such a look that we all started to shiver. They did not like the sacks over their heads. Rilyev said when they started to pull on the sack 'What is this for?' When everything was ready the nooses were put on their necks and the floor upon which they stood started to sink. That is how it was arranged. The middle three ropes broke and the condemned fell thru the traps onto the ground below. The ones on the ends remained hanging. Pyostel and Kakhovsky. The three middle men had fallen from a height and were bruised to the point of bleeding. The sack fell off of Rilyev and blood was seen over his eye brow and behind the left ear. He was sitting shriveled up, as he had fallen from the scaffold. 'What bad luck' said he.

"'Hang him, hang quicker,'" hollered Kutusov, cursing.

The floor again was raised and the nooses again thrown on their necks. But they were not supposed to be hanged a second time. This was Kutusov's fault.

"When they started to hang them a second time"—writes a contemporary in his memories. "Rilyev said. 'How hard it is to die twice.' and Bestuyev said ironically, 'And they could not even make a noose properly.'

"When they were hanged a second time the executioner pulled them by the legs so as to have the noose tighter and the death follow sooner."

THE Russians always knew how to die wonderfully evidently and effectively, but they did not know how to live.

There were exalted ideals and a flaming literature and there was a blazing, flaming youth and eminent, people-loving intellectuals, but the life of the country was the same—a life of slavery, mud, parasites, with a rapping on the snout and general ribaldry.

The heroism of the victims could not raise the life of Russia above the freezing point.

Only the multitude collectively could produce a new heroism, an heroism of achievements, which developed in the later years all over Russia.

The Psychology of Defeat—Is It Passing?

THE fighting spirit shown in the past few weeks by the left wing of several needle trades unions, especially in the New York membership of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, may be a first indication of the beginning of a new period in the struggle of the conscious union members against the control of their organizations by the agents of the employers.

In the left wing which forms the backbone of the trade unions some elements have for the past year and a half been suffering with the psychology of defeat. Rank agents of the employers, such as Green, Lewis, Johnston, Sigman, Hillman and Kaufman, have succeeded in creating an atmosphere of terrorism which had put a pall of pessimism over all but the most determined of the men and women in the unions who wanted to win their unions as weapons of the working class.

Several of the best unions, gutted by the Gompersite bureaucracy at the moment when they were under severest attack by the employers, have shown dangerous signs of disintegration. All efforts to stop the fatal course were met with expulsions or threats of expulsion of the most active members. To many it seemed impossible to meet the dread weapon of expulsion. In this situation weaker men and women were again in danger of the lure of voluntary secession and the unreal theory of "building new unions."

The terrific clashes in the conventions of the Fur Workers' and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Unions have suddenly revealed a fighting spirit and a new confidence. The dangerously near success of Sigman in trying to split the union and thus to get rid of the entire fighting element of the union at one stroke, appears to have been averted by the left wing.

The unanimous passage by both the Fur Workers' and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' conventions of the resolution for the formation of a labor party was a deeply significant repudiation of the servile policies of the dead Gompers and the live Green. There can be no more vital expression of the difference between Gomperism and class consciousness in its early stages than the issue of independent political action which is historically expressed in the United States by the demand for a labor party. From now on, the question of the labor party is a live issue in the trade unions with fresh indorsements by two important A. F. of L. unions.

It is significant that the followers of the social-democrat recently expelled from the Communist Party, Ludwig Lore, launched an active campaign at the present time in the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union in New York against the formation of a labor party. The riddance of Lore has strengthened the Communist Party and made it the better fighting weapon which it has shown itself in these recent trade union battles.

Such advances as have been made in the several unions were foreseen and planned by the Workers (Communist) Party. The bureaucrats understand this. In every sharp fight the Communists were the center of attack by the reaction, and such victories as were gained by the left wing are inseparable from the victories of the Communist Party.

The psychology of the organized workers in the big metropolis is stronger and shows some signs of the beginning of crystalizing into the working class ideology which is so long overdue.

At least the psychology of defeat is being dispelled among the left wing. The psychology of VICTORY—the confidence in its own class strength must be rapidly built up. The dawn of a new period of the struggle in the unions must be consciously hastened.

BEN GITLOW OUTSIDE.

BENJAMIN GITLOW out of jail is a state of things which has a significance to the working class. When political prisoners, or even when one important political prisoner, representing a revolutionary class movement are released from prison by the state power of the ruling class,—this is never an isolated incident disconnected from the play of social forces. The connection may be ever so obscure, but invariably such an incident has something to do with the never-ceasing effort of the state to restore the constantly disturbed equilibrium of social elements.

A famous liberal remarked that "Ben Gitlow is more dangerous in jail than out of jail." Such talk is alright for liberals, but workers have to think more sharply than that. It is true that a certain damage results to the ruling class when representative figures or numbers of the labor movement are kept in prison. But it is also true that many a leader of the working class is destroyed in prison, and that it is indispensable for the workers to have their leaders out of prison. Workers cannot afford to be confused with the futile spirit of Christian martyrdom which says, "Oh, well, the enemy has taken our leader, but he will do the enemy more harm than good." This is the self-delusion of slaves. The fact is that men, and sometimes whole essential cadres of men of a movement are destroyed by the repressive force of the state. A Tom Mooney in the death cell in 1917 was a severe blow to the labor movement and at the same time a weapon of agitation for the working class all over the world; but Tom Mooney neglected in jail in 1925 is a trophy of victory for the capitalist class and a symbol of defeat and servility of the working class.

Working class leaders in prison are a danger to the ruling class only if and while the working class is in process of getting them out. Any period in which representatives of the labor movement remain in prison without becoming the center of an active counter-movement, is a period of pessimism and the spirit of defeat in the working class and the labor movement. On the other hand the release of such men is often connected with a period in which the courage and hope and militancy of the working class is on the rise.

There have been other releases of labor's prisoners of war, at periods which could hardly be called such. Furthermore, Gitlow is only one, and there are many political labor prisoners entering prison even at the moment Gitlow is coming out: for instance, the Pittsburgh victims and Anita Whitney.

Nevertheless the release of Gitlow from New York state prison, coming as a sequel to a deep-going agitation especially concentrated among the trade unions of New York City, coupled with the tremendous ovation upon his appearance at the Philadelphia convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, might very well be counted among the many incidents of a change in the psychology of the working class. A change from the psychology of defeat to the psychology of fighting confidence.

THE DAWES PLAN.

THE Dawes plan works in Germany. As many as six or seven working people per day commit suicide in the city of Berlin to escape unbearable poverty. Many hundreds of thousands are out of work, and more hundreds of thousands are added every day.

A singular phenomenon is that in Berlin countless numbers of small girls of the working class are, practically speaking, purchased by wealthy bourgeois as house-servants, virtually no compensation being given, as food alone is considered enough for working class girls under the circumstances.

The smaller manufacturing plants and business enterprises close down for lack of credit, which is the process of "deflation" under the Dawes plan which controls credit and turns it only towards the favored larger enterprises.

"The large number of bankruptcies is regarded as a healthy sign," says a bourgeois newspaper correspondent, Mr. E. A. Mowrer, in the Chicago Daily News, "because of the absolute necessity of reducing the number of middlemen to something like the prewar figure."

The sharpest uneasiness is developing among the masses of workers of Berlin and the Ruhr mining district.

These are times in which the German social-democratic traitors who sold the German working class into this slavery can be expected to lose their power over the masses. The cold steel of experience is driving the German working class to the only road, to the Communist Party and to the fight for proletarian dictatorship and the Soviet republic of Germany.

The Dawes plan is working.

Negro Workers!

IS there so base, one of your race,
Who bids you bend the knee
Unto the blight, in vested might,
Of Nordic tyranny?
Then damn the traitor to his face—
Down with humility!

OR white or black, it is the back
Of Labor bears the load;
Not black or white in Profits' sight
Who staggers 'neath the goad,
But only slaves to thumb and rack
For debts they never owed.

HERE is your class, the working mass,
With it you rise or fall,
Black, yellow, white as one must fight,
Must batter down the wall
Of prejudice, stand as a class,
And triumph over all!

AMONG Domingo's hills and China's trees
The empire's shadow marches to and fro:
Its cruisers plow through all the seven seas,
Its bayonets gleam in sunlight and in snow.

The silk-tongued diplomat has spun his lies,
The infantile Marine has fired his shot:
O clip the coupons! for "Old Glory" flies
Where Haitians slave and Nicaraguans rot.

Now look beyond the figures and the charts
In this brief chronicle of tyrants' deeds;
And see how bankers haggle in the marts
While the world cries in agony and bleeds;

And glimpse the looming clouds of a new war
And workers rising with a mighty roar!

The Vital Problems of Our Movement

By LENIN.

(Translated by B. Borisoff.)

(From Iskra, December, 1900. The term "Social Democracy" was at that time used in Russia as it was used thruout the world as applying to the revolutionary Marxian workers' movement.)

THE Russian social democracy has proclaimed more than once that the immediate political task of the Russian labor party must be the overthrow of autocracy, the conquest of political freedom. This was proclaimed over fifteen years ago by the representatives of the Russian social democracy, members of the group Osvobozhdenie Truda (Liberation of Labor); this was also proclaimed two and a half years ago by the representatives of the Russian social-democratic organizations, who formed in the spring of 1898 the Russian Social-Democratic Labor Party. But despite these repeated declarations the question of the political problems of the social democracy in Russia is once more in the forefront at the present time. Many representatives of our movement are expressing doubt as to the correctness of the above mentioned solution of the question. 'It is said that the economic struggle is of predominant importance; the political problems of the proletariat are pushed to the background. These problems are narrowed and restricted and it is ever proclaimed that discussion about the formation of an independent workers' party in Russia is simply a repetition of what is said by others and that the workers must carry on only economic struggle, leaving politics to the alliance of intellectuals and liberals. This latter proclamation of the new symbol of faith (the famous Credo) leads directly to the acknowledgement that the Russian proletariat is not yet of age and to the complete negation of the social-democratic program.

The Robochaya Misl (The Workers' Thot), especially in its supplement, has explained itself essentially in the same sense. The Russian social-democracy is living thru a period of doubts, bordering on self negation. On the one hand the labor movement is breaking away from socialism; the workers are being assisted in the carrying on of the economic struggle, but the socialist aims and political problems of the movement as a whole are not at all made clear to them. On the other hand, socialism is breaking away from the labor movement. The Russian socialists again begin more and more to say that the intelligentsia must carry on the struggle against czarism with its own forces, because the workers are limiting themselves to the economic struggle alone.

Conditions of a threefold kind have, in our opinion, prepared the soil for these said phenomena. First, at the beginning of their activity the Russian social-democrats limited themselves to the propagandist work in small circles (Kruzhok). Having passed to agitation among the masses, we have not always been able to refrain from falling into another extreme. Second, at the beginning of our activity we were very frequently compelled to defend our right to exist in the struggle against the Narodovoltsi, who conceived of "politics" as a form of activity detached from the labor movement, and who narrowed politics down to a conspiratorial struggle alone. Rejecting such politics, the social-democrats have fallen into the extreme position of pushing politics, generally, to the background. Third, acting in a disjointed manner in the small local workers' circles, the social-democrats did not pay sufficient attention to the necessity of organizing the revolutionary party, unifying the entire activity of the local groups and furnishing the possibility correctly to establish the revolutionary work. But the predominance of disjointed work is naturally tied up with the predominance of an economic struggle.

The circumstances which we have pointed out have produced an absorption in one side of the movement. The "economic" tendency (in as much as one can speak here of a "tendency") has created attempts to elevate this narrowness into a special theory, attempts to use for this purpose the fashionable "Bernsteiniad," the fashionable "criticism of Marxism," which smuggles in under a new flag the old bourgeois ideas. These attempts alone have created the danger of weakening the contacts between the Russian labor movement and the Russian social-democracy as the foremost champion of political freedom. And the most vital problem of our movement at present consists in the strengthening of this contact.

The social-democracy is the connection of the labor movement with socialism, and its problem is not a passive service to the labor movement at its every separate stage, but the representation of the interests of the entire movement as a whole, the pointing out to this movement of its final goal, its political tasks, the guardianship of its political and ideological independence. Detached from the social-democracy, the labor movement grows shallow and falls necessarily into bourgeois-ism: carrying on the economic struggle only, the working class loses its political independence, becomes the tail of other parties, betrays the great injunction "the liberation of the workers must be the cause of the workers themselves." In all countries there was a period when the labor movement and socialism existed separately and followed a separate road—and in all countries such a separation brought about the weakness of socialism and of the labor movement; in all countries the connection of socialism with the labor movement alone created a solid foundation both for the one and for the other. But in each country this connection of socialism with the labor movement has worked itself out historically, has worked itself out in a peculiar way depending upon the conditions of place and time. In Russia the necessity of the connection of socialism and the labor movement has been proclaimed theoretically long ago,—but practically this connection is being worked out only at the present time. The process of this working out is a very difficult one and there is nothing remarkable in its being accompanied by various vacillations and doubts.

What lesson for us, then, flows from the past?

The history of the whole of Russian socialism has brought about the fact that its most vital problem became the struggle against the autocratic government, the conquest of political freedom; our socialist movement has concentrated, one may say, upon the struggle against autocracy. On the other hand, history has shown that the separation of socialist thought from the advanced representatives of the toiling classes is much greater in Russia than in other countries and that with such detachment the Russian revolutionary movement is condemned to impotence. Out of this there flows of itself the task which the Russian social democracy is called upon to fulfill, to instill socialistic ideas and political consciousness into the mass of the proletariat and to organize the revolutionary party, connected inseparably with the elemental labor movement. A great deal is already accomplished in this respect by the Russian social democracy; but a great deal more still remains to be done. With the growth of the movement the field of activity for the social democracy becomes even wider, the work ever more many-sided, an ever greater number of the active members of the movement concentrate their forces upon the accomplishment of various tasks which are pushed to the forefront by the every-day needs of propaganda and agitation. This phenomenon is entirely legitimate and inevitable, but it compels particular attention in order that the special tasks of activity and the particular methods of struggle are not elevated into self-sufficiency, and in order that the preparatory work should not be raised to the status of the main and only work.

To help the political development and political organization of the working class is our main and basic problem. Everyone who pushes this problem to the background, everyone who does not subordinate to it all of the particular tasks and special methods of struggle, takes a false road and inflicts serious harm upon the movement. Those, however, who relegate it to the background are, first, they who call the revolutionaries to the struggle against the government with the forces of the isolated conspiratorial circles that are detached from the labor movement; second, they who restrict the content and scope of the political propaganda, agitation and organization, they who consider it possible and timely to treat the workers to "politics" only at the exceptional moments of their lives, only on solemn occasions, they who are too careful to trade off the political struggle against autocracy in exchange for demands for some partial concessions from the autocracy, and who are not careful enough to elevate these demands for partial concessions into a systematic and unflinching struggle of a revolutionary party against the autocracy.

"Organize" repeats the newspaper "Robochaya Misl", to the workers in many various ways. "Organize" repeat all the partisans of the "economic" tendency. And we, of course, join wholeheartedly in this appeal, but we will without fail add to it: Organize; not only into mutual aid societies, strike-benefit associations and workmen's circles, but also organize into a poltical party, organize for decisive struggle against the autocratic government and against the entire capitalist society. Without such an organization the proletariat is not able to raise itself to a conscious struggle; without such an organization the labor movement is condemned to impotency; and with its funds, circles and mutual aid societies alone the working class will never succeed in fulfilling the great historic task which rests upon it: to liberate itself and the whole Russian people from political and economical slavery. Not a single class in history ever attained domination, without having put forward its political leaders, its advanced representatives, capable of organizing the movement and of guiding it. And the Russian working class has shown already that it is capable of putting forward such men; the wide-spread struggle of the Russian workers for the last five or six years has proven what a volume of revolutionary forces is hidden within the working class, how the most desperate governmental persecutions do not diminish but increase the number of workers striving for socialism, for political consciousness and poltical struggle. The congress of our comrades in 1898 correctly formulated the problem, and did not merely repeat the words of others; it did not express merely the preoccupations of the "intellectuals." And we must decisively begin to fulfill these tasks, putting on the order of the day the question of the program, organization and tactics of the party. How we view the basic theses of our program, we have already stated, and to develop these theses in detail is, of course, not in place here. To the organizational question we intend to devote a series of articles in the earliest issues. This is one of our sorest questions. We have in this respect lagged considerably behind the old actives of the Russian revolutionary movement; it is necessary directly to acknowledge this shortcoming and to turn our forces toward working out of a more conspiratory arrangement of activity, toward a systematic propagation of the rules for conducting activity, and of methods of deceiving the gendarms and avoiding the nets of the police. It is necessary to prepare men who will devote to the revolution not only their free evenings but their entire lives; it is necessary to prepare an organization so large that it will permit a strict division of labor between the different kinds of our work. Finally, as to the question of tactics, we shall limit ourselve here to the following: the social democracy does not tie its hands, does not narrow its activity by a mere preconceived plan or method of political struggle; it recognizes all means of struggle, if only they correspond to the available forces of the party and afford the possibility of achieving the greatest results attainable under the given conditions. With a strongly organized party a single strike can be transformed into a political demonstration, into a political victory over the government. With a strongly organized party an uprising in a single locality can grow into a victorious revolution. We must remember that the struggle against the government for partial demands, the conquest of partial concessions—that this is only small skirmishes with the enemy, that this is small clashes at the outposts, and that the decisive struggle is yet ahead.

Before us stands in all its power an enemy fortress from which are showered upon us thousands of shells and bullets that carry away the best fighters. We must take this fortress and we shall take it if we unite all the forces of the awakening proletariat with all the forces of the Russian revolutionaries into one party, toward which will stream all that is live and honest in Russia. And only then the great prophecy of a Russian worker revolutionist, Peter Aleyev, shall be fulfilled: "The muscular hand of the millions of the working people will be raised, and the yoke of despotism guarded by the soldiers' bayonet will be shattered to dust!"

Mr. Bryan in the Embrace of the Angels

THIRTEEN - By Mark Kolosov

(Copyright, 1925 by International Publishers Co., Inc.)

VANKA is 13, and his 13 years manifest themselves in everything. They jump like thirteen tiny imps over Vanka's joys, and they crouch silently beside his sorrows. And Vanka himself, tiny, weak, resembling a callow kitten, seems to be the victim of his 13. It is not he who scurries joyfully thru all the departments, squeals, and shakes hands with everyone he meets when a Communist from the factory is elected to the Moscow Soviet, and it is not he who whistles frenziedly and shouts "Down!" when some menshevik attempts to bamboozle his comrades.

It's the 13 that do all this.

Vanka himself is quiet and bashful, modest and timid.

And when it happens that the menacing clouds of a shut-down gather over the factory, Vanka feels with all his little inner self his 13 becoming alarmed, and then little gray wrinkles appear on his straight, childish forehead, and the little bells of his voice cease ringing thru the corridors. The blue, oily shirt wanders about like a silent shadow, and does not know which way to turn.

Vanka is afraid to go to the director, tho he knows that the director is a red—one of their own, a workman-director, a Communist.

The atmosphere of the director's office is somewhat oppressive. The place breathes great sternness, and it is as if the walls are about to come together and crush little Vanka. And on the walls: "Be brief," "Time is money," and many other posters, and among them, a portrait of old Lenin himself, Vladimir Ilyich, so dear and near, asks smilingly:

"What have you come for, Vanka? You little rascal, don't disturb the director."

This means that he must go out thru the corridor to the yard, and thru the yard into the repair shop, then to the outhouse where, upon a little door, there is a modest inscription:

The R. C. S. M. nucleus is located here.

Vanka is 13, and the constitution requires 14! Here is exactly what it says: "Any young worker, fourteen years of age or over, is eligible to membership in the league."

And in the meantime he is allowed a voice but not a vote. Oh, how he longs not to be just advisory: It makes one feel hurt and wronged; Grishka is a member with a full vote, and he is in the same grade and in the same shop . . . And so are Fedka, Senka, Vaska, Stenka, and Skinny Vanka. What have they done to deserve it?

It's all the fault of the 13.

And when a resolution is being voted upon at a meeting, and a whole forest of hands springs up above the blond moss of heads—he wants so much, so much to raise his hand together with the rest, but he is afraid: It seems to him that everyone is eyeing him with the warning, "Vanka, don't forget the constitution!"

Every evening the entire factory gathers at the big club. The grown-ups in the reading room with the newspapers; the young people each according to his inclination.

First of all—the girls go to Maslov, to the library:

"Give us a novel. . ."

"Now, what's the bright idea?"

They become dumb and hide behind Jolly Manka. And Jolly Manka says saucily and coquettishly:

"A novel, an interesting one, where they write about love. . ."

"You fool, don't you know that those books are not for us? They're written for high-school girls?"

"That's enuf, now; beat it."

Manka swiftly puts her hand into her bosom and pulls out a book, and on the books it says: "The Keys to Happiness. A Novel by Verbitskaya."

"There, take a look at this!"

And she scampers off to the hall—the others trailing after her.

Twilight fills the hall. From the row of cards, appeals, and posters, only one stands out boldly —"The Code of Labor Laws,"—and under the "Code" a group of youngsters stand listening to Mitry, the chief of the "Bureau." Mitry is speaking about god. And it seems as if Mitry has a dynamo in his head, and that 15 thin, invisible belts extend to the 15 little heads. Brain mechanisms are awhirl.

Manka cries shrilly:

"Ah! Vanka! Vanka is here! . . ."

And she begins to sing:

"Vanka, little Vankapuff;
About as big as a pinch of snuff;
Now we're all in the Consomol,
Only Vanka is too small—
He has no party—he is barred,
The only one without a card.
Tell me, little shpingalet,—*
Why haven't you got your card as yet?—"

Vanka starts, and the little belt that bound him to Mitry snaps and breaks.

Mitry says softly:

"Why do you disturb us? Better listen to our discussion."

"Discussion indeed! All nonsense. . . And don't you stick up for your brother; he can look out for himself."

Fedka whispers:

"Vanka, give her one! . . ."

"Ah, the deuce with her. . ."

And black anger stirs within Vanka.

Then Manka and the other girls surround the youths in a close ring.

"Tell us, Mitry, about the fires of the revolution."

The anger scatters like a white cloud. The black lump in Vanka's throat breaks up, his tongue moves from behind the hot lips:

"Yes, yes, the fires of the revolution!"

At night Vanka sleeps in a dark, close room in the same bed with his brother Mitry. Mitry sleeps sweetly, deeply, breathes heavily thru his hot nose, and all about him is a stream of sweaty, bitter breath.

Vanka gazes for a long time at his brother's "full-voting" face, catches greedily the beats of his heart, breathes the close air, and ventures:

"Mitry, oh, Mitry! . . ."

"What is it?"

"'Bout the nucleus. . ."

"What, again?—again about the school? . . . Tomorrow, tomorrow. . ."

"No, not 'bout that. . ."

"Makes no difference . . . tomorrow; it's time to sleep now."

"Why does it say fourteen?"

"What fourteen?"

"In the constitution."

"In what constitution?"

"Of the Comsomol."

"It's there so as to keep shpingalets like you out of the league. Understand?"

"Yes. But Mitry, why am I worse than the others?"

Mitry's answer is curt and grouchy:

"It's there so as to keep shpingalets like you

"It ain't allowed. . . He knows, darn him, that it ain't allowed, and still he wants to butt in. . ."

That's how it goes. . . Better to sleep and stop bellyaching.

"U-uh, the——!" Bold and malicious thots rise up. His head feels heavy, his chest tightly compressed.

"All right, Mitry, all right—and he calls himself an activist! . . ."

The wind howls crazily in the dead of night and dances like a reckless Comsomoletz. The stars twinkle in different shades—some agree, others disagree, and the meeting ends with the morning.

And when there are no more stars and no more wind, and a thick fog envelops the great auditorium of the sky, then black, leather-clad Petro pulls the thin nerve of the factory, and the factory yells with all the power of its mechanical throat:

"Huh. . . Huh. . . Huh! . . ."

In the house, the mother rises slowly. One can hear her moving about behind the partition, her mouth twisted in a sweet, languid yawn:

"Oh-oh-oh. . . Our heavy sins. . ."

White shadows crawl over the walls; they climb over the cornices, like white lambkins, and become entangled in Marx's beard in the picture on the wall. And Vanka knows that his father will wake up presently and say softly: "Mother, eh, mother, how about a samovar?" And then, louder: "Hey, Comsomol, d'y hear—mother is waiting for us." And it seems to Vanka that his father says that about the Comsomol on purpose . . . For he knows that Vanka has no membership card.

In the morning the samovar grumbles like a dull-edged tool-bit over iron; in the morning the windows are damp with the sap of the departed night. Father and Mitry drink tea and look into the blue haze, talking about party affairs. Mother looks after Vanka: Her hands are sinewy; her kind, caressing eyes watch his chin steadily:

"Drink, drink, Vaniuska, and take some bread, sonny. You're getting too thin in your Comsomol."

A sense of hurt swells in Vanka's heart. Oh, how he hates mother with her caresses and her care! How he would like to join in the conversation of his father and his brother!

II

TIME is a huge lace-frame weaving the endless lace-work of days. It stretches in white and red streaks that wind about the pulley of the universe. And thousands of living human beings keep winding up their powers, as upon spools, and stretch out in thin threads, becoming interwoven in the moving lacework of life. And if one grows slack, and unravels—out of the machine he goes. New, fresh little spools with pink, silken twine are waiting in the raw-material department.

Fedor Ivanych—Comrade Rodin—the teacher of political rudiments, says that life is moving towards Communism. And that the lace-frame of life is tended by the best men of the working class—the Communists. Firmly welded together, they comb with a strong, steel comb millions of threads, and weave them into the most intricate designs. And the first weaver of them all is Vladimir Ilyich.

The spools find it hard work at times, so do the steel comb and the aids, but the hardest task of all is that of the chief weaver. The pulleys turn and grumble, the flywheels swish, the belts tremble rhythmically, the leather-paths wheeze. The filmy dust from the threads floats in the air, settles on faces and shirts, poisons the body. It seems that something is just on the verge of breaking down, and then the gigantic machine will stop. Only, the strong spring in the forehead will not give way; the searchlight of the eye gazes firmly, the aids stand firm.

At night Vanka sleeps in a close, dark room in one bed with his brother Mitry. Vanka sleeps. He dreams that a locomotive of tremendous power is hitched to the lace-frame department. "Uh!"—it blew a deep blast, sprang forward with a jerk, and went on and on toward Moscow River. And Moscow River is not a river at all, but a sea, the sea of the social revolution. The locomotive, without a pause—straight across the waves. The waves splash over the roof, flood inside of the engine. The flame of the furnace flares up, burns the greedy tongues of the sea, and heavy logs are spluttering and hissing.

And Vanka is the fireman beside the furnace.

His skin is all in blisters; they spring up in little white knobs; the waves lick them and break them. Ah! . . . it would be nice to get away from this damned furnace, to jump into the embrace of the waves, to refresh the body; but Vanka hears a voice:

"Tired, Comrade Nazarenko?"

He looks up and sees—Lenin!

Foam froths in the heart. Imps in the foam. Gosh! . . . How they dance, the sons of——!

"No . . . not tired, Comrade Lenin."

"And what do you think—will we make Communism?"

"We'll make it, Comrade Lenin."

"Well, then, keep going, brother; it's not far from here."

"Aye, aye, Comrade Lenin!"

The skin is all in blisters; they spring up in little white knobs; the waves lick them and break them.

Suddenly—stop! . . . an island!

On the island it is summer. Streams of sunlight. The wind plays caressingly. Houses glow with colors. People appear.

"Good morning Comrade Lenin, and who is this with you?"

"This is Comsomoletz Nazarenko."

"No, Comrade Lenin, I am not a Comsomolets. I am one year short in age, according to the constitution."

"Ah, really?"

And suddenly Lenin produces a brand-new Comsomol card and gives it to Vanka. Vanka sees his name on it, his surname. . . Ah! . . .

"Vanka, hey, Vanka!"

"What is it, Comrade Lenin?"

He opens his sleepy eyes and sees Mitry.

"Why—the card—where is the card?"

"What card?"

"The card of the league."

"Whose?"

"Mine."

"Where'd you get it?"

"Comrade Lenin gave it to me. . ."

And suddenly Vanka realizes that he had seen Lenin only in a dream—and that nothing had really happened.

With bitter sadness he told Mitry about it.

Mitry was touched:

"I see, Vanka, that you'll make a good Comsomolets. Only, you and I are now in the same boat—you want to join the Comsomol, I the party. . . I'm in a fix, just like you;—I'm too young—that's what they say. . ."

His brother's words echo with a low peal in Vanka's heart.

"That's right, that's right, Mitry, we both need just one year; let's make an agreement—we'll join together next year."

"That's a go!"

And their tongues rattled till sunrise.

Again the samovar grunts like a dull-edged tool-bit over iron. Again the windows are damp with the sap of the departed night. Father and Mitry listen in silence to Vanka's dream.

"Oh-oh-oh!" his mother crosses herself. "What dreams, what dreams, you have, sonny!" . . .

Very gently she pushes another slice of bread toward Vanka.

Vanka has no eyes for his mother, and he does not see his father and brother:

"And there stands, he hmiself, and says: 'What do you think, Comrade Nazarenko, will we make Communism?' 'We'll make it, Comrade Lenin,' says I."

And Vanka experiences something that never happened before; his father's strong arm reaches out, the lad feels the touch of his coarse hair, his black beard is like a brush. Smack-smack—the hot lips on the little forehead.

III

THE clouds swell like a mixture of brown-rubber in the overturned caldron of the sky; they hang over the gray tub of the suburbs. They seem ready to tear themselves away and come trembling down upon the cold mass of snow; viscid—they will plaster the buildings, will cover the earth with a thick spread. Muddy brooks will run from the yards into Moscow River. Little streams will stretch like wire-threads over the rough, unsteady ice. The sun will flare up like a fiery bason. The air will become close, and on the next day Moscow River will start to move, will start without any ice-cakes, clear as molten metal, and where it will move to—who can say? And then the little yard will begin to blossom, the little yard that stretches down like a chin. Its cheeks will become overgrown with grass, and prickly warts of bushes will stick out from under the piles of rubbish. And in the garden, which is half a verst from the factory, falling petals will begin to whirl; white petals from the trees, yellow petals from the flowers; they will whirl like soft down, like the shavings in the wood-turner's lathe in the repair shop. And then summer will come, like a young weaver in a skirt of many colors, carrying a load of woven stuffs.

The old garden will become shaggy, like Karl Marx, and will shake its locks and beard. . . Excursions will begin. . . The young folk will go to the sovkhoz. Rough hands will have a rest, the brain-stuff will relax, and the boys will flip coins, bowl, play football, tag and "pegs,"—and then autumn will come, and—14.

Vanka crouches like a hedgehog on the porch of the Rabcom. Something bristles in Vanka's heart like a hedgehog but he does not know what it is. The air of March sends a chill thru the body, but warm joy flows thru the body, too, like a brook.

And the 13 already anticipate the coming of the 14th. What a joy it will be! Vanka and Mitry will walk up to their father and say:

"Congratulations, Comrade Alexei,
To you and sons are due this day."

That is just how they will say it. And there will be three cards in the house—no, four—Mitry will remain in the Comsomol until he is 23.

And if there comes a call to the front, Vanka will say—as Mitry used to say: "In accordance with the decision of the general meeting I am going to defend the revolution."

And father will say "Go, my boy," because he is a member of the party, and because he has calloused hands. Only, mother will probably cry, wailing, "But you are so little, so little," and this will offend him; but no, she will not say it, after all, because he will be grown up by then—he will be 14 years old.

Near him, on the porch, two little girls, about eight years of age, drawl mournfully in tremulous voices as they sway from side to side:

"I loved, I suffered—ah, but he,
The scoundrel, soon deserted me."

The sounds fill Vanka's ears and taunt his throat. Like a little rooster, he bursts forth:

"Forward, to meet the dawn!
Comrades, thru struggle!
We go to blaze the trail,
Comrades, to meet the dawn!"

The wind was softly spreading twilight over the earth, but the twilight would not come, and the wind grew angry. Then the twilight came, driven by the wind. And the workers were returning home from the factory, and the wind kept urging the workers on homeward from the factory.

And two tunes were still struggling in the cold air; one beaten, mournful, beseeching, begging for mercy; the other triumphant, lacerating, and merciless. And it seemed as if they were both calling the March day, one back to winter, the other forward toward spring.

Volodin, a lathe-hand, walks slowly toward the gate from the repair-shop. On seeing Vanka he winks and yells:

"Van—kou. . ."

Vanka comes skipping to the lathe-hand, takes him by the hand:

"Uncle Van, I am joining. . ."

The lathe-hand smiles slyly, his white teeth shine like little, gleaming plates.

"It's taking you awful long. . ."

"No, now we'll join together with Mitry . . ."

"How can that be, when Mitry is an active member already?"

"No; we made an agreement for next year—he'll join the party, and I the Comsomol—we both need one more year. . ."

"So you've agreed on it?"

"Yes, and it'll be on the same day, too, and the main thing is, Uncle Van, that now it's not so hard, for I'm not alone like before. . ."

"Well, kid, this makes it easier for you?"

Vanka flushes with embarrassment, then he says:

"Sure it does! . . ."

Great coarse fingers—very, very warm they are—rub Vanka behind the ear, crawl slowly up his neck, and pinch his cheeks.

"Say, Vanka . . . and why do you want so much to join the Comsomol? Is it just because everybody is in the Comsomol?"

Vanka's thots string out like thin shavings; they even gather on his forehead like a tangle of wires.

"No, Uncle Van, it ain't that—or maybe, I don't know; I can't say 'gzactly; but the main thing, the oratere said, 'Comsomol,' says he, 'is the brain of youth.' I want to be with the brain, Uncle Van. . ."

Vanka's heart beats like a drum; he cannot catch his breath, and the big warm fingers creep closer and pinch his cheeks softly and tenderly, and the evening fawns upon Vanka like a great, shaggy cat.

IV

SUNDAY, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and again Sunday, again Monday —so it stretches out—the lacework of days.

Here comes a bit of bright and gay-colored lace, the festivity of the Comsomol Christmas. It is celebrated with a carnival: Vanka rigged himself out as a little black devil. Fedka as a deacon, Mishka as a priest, Mitry as a witch,—whatever came into their heads.

They jumped, shrieked, giggled, sang, danced.

In the morning they went to the district headquarters. They met others. Merged together. Flowed in a stream along the streets and sidewalks. And in the evening—a party. Girls, youths, young and old, not one of them cared a straw for god or devil.

The holidays rolled away and a campaign rolled in. The campaign was called "The Red-Fleet Campaign." A comrade with a brief-case came, called a general meeting of the local, gathered the factory youth. The comrade spoke about the local. Then came a sailor with a gold tooth in the front of his mouth and spoke about the existing situation in the fleet. It was decided to render assistance with men and money.

In order to help out with men—Senka was sent. At the nucleus, at the headquarters, on the Red Square, they threw Senka up in the air and caught him again with shouts of "Hurrah!" And because of this Senka walked about as stiff as a ramrod. The girls pestered him, gazed at his sailor's clothes, and sang the navy ditty:

"'Ho! little apple—where are you rolling?'
'Oh, mother, my sweetheart is calling!
Not Lenin or Trotsky I'm going to meet,
But a young sailor o' the Baltic Fleet!'"

Old workers glanced up at him and said, "There's the salvation of the fleet."

In short, Senka was a hero.

They escorted Senka to the depot. They instructed him: "Don't be a slouch," promised him presents, asked him to write. Senka was all excited and his former swagger was gone. He pledged himself not to "compromise" the local.

"Good-by, Moscow, good-by Comsomol,
In the Red Navy we're going to enroll . . ."

And when the intoxication of joy had passed, Vanka again wished for the coming of autumn, that would bring with it his membership card.

Old Petro stuck up a poster in a prominent place in the repair shop:

Official Announcement

. . . In view of a considerable turn for the worse, a daily bulletin will be issued from this date, about the state of health of V. I. Lenin.

From early morning people keep crowding about the poster. They read the announcement and disperse silently. Foreheads frown, shoulders stoop, eyes grow cold beneath the eyelids.

"It's pretty bad with Vladimir Ilyich. . ."

"Pretty bad. . ."

And at the nucleus of the R. C. S. M., the secretary reads to the meeting:

Circular Letter

Concerning the 25th anniversary of the R. C. P. (Bolsheviks). The best gift that the Comsomol can make to the party would unquestionably be the transfer to the party of the pick of the youth from the workers' nuclei.

Secretary, M. C.

On this day work would not go forward at the factory. Women continually broke threads in the basons, and deft hands struggled clumsily with the clutching steel-spiders. The weavers got their designs all wrong, their machines stopped suddenly, and sharp experienced eyes could not locate at once the cause of the trouble.

The same condition prevailed in the repair shop, in the button department, in the winding department; and even the old blacksmith, all shaggy and hirsute, who never spoke to anyone except to his tools, scorched his long, gray beard, after which he said to Vanka (Vanka was the old man's assistant):

"Ah, it won't go, somehow. . ."

And then, frowning, and damping the fire:

"Listen, youngster; even tho you are a Comsomoletz and don't know beans from nothing, and less about work, still I will ask you, for it ain't proper for an old man like me to ask the grown-up Communists. I don't like them, they ain't real Communists; they just worry about their pockets, and they ain't got a proprietor's eye to things,—not they."

Little Vanka dries the beads of sweat, and wipes his nose, too, with his hand. He straightens up and his eyes dance toward the old man.

"Gladly, Antipych. . ."

"Gladly. . . . I know myself about 'gladly'—. You're always glad to chatter, just to get away from work; I know you, you son of a——. But tell me . . ."

His voice trembled.

"It it true that Ilyich is . . . er . . . pretty bad?"

"It is true, Antipych. . . ."

The old man quietly sat down on the anvil, crossed himself with a wide sweep, three times, and whispered: "God forbid!" . . .

Vanka, uncertainly:

"What, grandad,—it seems you are for Ilyich?"

"For whom else?"

Joy flooded Vanka's brain. He shouted in a ringing, challenging voice:

"But he is a Communist. . ."

The old man rose, straightened out his mighty stature, and grumbled:

"Let's work. Never mind jabbering now. . ."

And choked. And when the fire was roaring again, the bellows panting, and the iron hissing, the old man mumbled slowly and grudgingly, in tune with the iron:

"Well, what of it? Suppose he is a Communist? There are all sorts of Communists. If they were all like him, there wouldn't be no need of this here Communism—it would be just a name. . ."

And at the bason shops and repair shops little groups gathered to discuss, and nobody bade them disperse. The young people even walked out into the yard. Jolly Manka cast down her eyes and was as quiet as a hen.

"Friends, where can we find the secretary?"

"He went away to the Raicom."

"And Mitry?"

"He too. . ."

Each of them shrinks, becoming like a heavy lump, and their hearts shrink; forebodings dart about lite shuttles.

And Vanka stands at the window. Vanka burns to join his gang. Tremulously and slyly he says:

"I'll be back in a second, Antipych. . . I'll find out everything. . ."

"Well, go ahead."

The bell rang clangingly in the factory school. The youngsters ran out like rabbits. Long Petka, in front of all, shouts:

"Well, friends, why do you hang your heads?"

Manka, angrily:

"Don't you know?"

Long Petka assumes an oratorical air:

"I know, but what of it? . . . What's the good of this here desperation? Help, doctors,—that's what's neded, for there ain't no god to take pity on us, and they'll get doctors without us. But here is what we can do, comrades. A circular just came to the nuceus about the party jubilee. We must get up for the party a present that'll beat the present to the fleet—that's how we can help Ilyich, the devil take you. . . For there ain't many workers in the party, and Ilyich has overworked himself. . ."

The youngsters felt a bit bitter, as if Long Petka had blown with long bellows into their hearts and had cleared and spread apart the contracting walls. Eyes sparkled and blossomed beneath the open eyelids.

Little Vanka shouts eagerly:

"Brothers, but whom shall we send?"

"It won't be you, shpingalet."

Oh, what a sting Vanka felt in his breast! Something struck his brain, parched his throat, the whites of his eyes turned moist. He whispered in embarrassment:

"No . . . 'course I ain't talking 'bout myself. . ."

"Don't butt in, then. . ."

Vanka slunk to the background, but he felt first of all like smashing Manka's face with his little fist, and then saying to all of them aloud: "Do you know, all of you, if you want to know, that Mitry, whom you're surely going to elect, won't join the party till the very time when you'll take me into the Comsomol, for we're agreed on that. We're both a year short." But he did not say it—let Mitry himself announce that at the meeting.

Then Jolly Manka, pensively:

"Well, and whom are we really going to send?"

Senka, thotfully:

"I think, friends, that this is up to the booreau; we'll send whom they'll propose, because . . ."

Long Petka interrupted, mockingly:

"Because, because, you dumbell. What kind of a Comsomoletz is the fellow that's always depending on the bureau, and ain't got a penn 'orth of 'nitiative? . . ."

"And what d'ye think the bureau's for,—just to run errands?"

Manka, pacifyingly:

"Cut it out boys,—just nonsense. . . . Of course, we must talk it over. . ."

Senka, scenting defeat, bristled up and clenched his fists:

"We'll talk it over, all right. But now, just tell me —I'm a dumbbell . . . am I?"

And whack! Petka got it under the ribs.

"There's a dumbbell for you! . . . Take that! . . ." he fumed and shouted.

Long Petka became distorted with rage:

"Oh, you dog! Just wait; I'll trim your dirty mug for you. . . Take that, and that, and that, you son of a fascisti!"

A fight started. Little by little all joined in. Vanka pushed eagerly at Manka; he aimed to give her a blue eye, but missed,—Vanka cannot reach the cursed eye; in his rage he began to punch her below the breasts.

The non-Communist workers from the repair shop, and the women from the bason department look on:

"There, just look what's going on; see what keeps the Comsomol busy! . . ."

The master-mechanic appeared. He sees the fray and shouts:

"Hey, you, vamoose; this is no time for tomfoolery."

And while they were dispersing, Vanka rejoiced; he felt the realization of his eager wish close at hand. That would be a nice pill for Manka to swallow!

And on the next day the Comsomol gathered at the club. The party-secretary, Pal Mironych, spoke about

Political Christianity Faces East

By HARRY GANNES.

THE old missionary, reeking syphilis and booze, is out of style. Modern capitalism requires improved methods and a different type of man. The new traveling salesman Messiah must be versed in political christianity. Penetration into foreign and undeveloped territories, particularly China, Africa, Egypt and other parts of Asia is unavoidable under imperialism. Peaceful penetration as a policy and practice disappeared with the Spanish-American war. With the imperialist army, or before it, must still go, however, some institution that carries along the morale of capitalism. It has been found that even tho bayonets hold conquered territory and permit the flow of capital into it, a system of simple training is necessary to transform colonials into submissive proletarians.

THE organization selected for this work by international capitalism in general, and by its American representative in particular, is the Young Men's Christian Association.

Pleased with its excellent work in the United States, the American ruling class, regardless of race or religion, has united in its support of the Y. M. C. A. Julius Rosenwald, the Jew, contributes millions; John D. Rockefeller, the protestant, doubles the amount; and a long list of catholics add their names Experience has taught the American capitalists that a propaganda organization is absolutely necessary to endeavor to pacify the young Chinese, African, Egyptian and other Asiatic students and workers. Experience has further taught them that religion is the best guise for this work of infiltration and penetration of capitalist ideas so that exploitation could follow more swiftly and surely.

THE Y. M. C. A. has a foreign division whose activities are directed most particularly to the colonies of capitalism. During the past few years, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the entire Rockefeller family have contributed more than $5,000,000 to the Y. M. C. A. for this foreign work. Nettie McCormick, whose family interests, likewise, extend to undeveloped territories, contributed during the same time over $1,000,000. And other capitalists join in the work to such an extent that the foreign department is able to publish very expensive propaganda literature and print thereon "The expense of this book is met by a special gift." A very rare thing for the Y. M. C. A., considering its war experience when it made the American soldiers pay for the souvenirs sent "free" to them.

Two hundred and seventy-five men are in charge of the Y. M. C. A. department of capitalist morale for the colonies. The Y. M. C. A. when speaking of these men emphasizes the statement that they are "carefully chosen men working as representatives of the movement in the United States in foreign lands."

CHINA is particularly a target of the Y. M. C. A. The Rockefeller interests in China are immense. China becomes more and more an important objective of international capitalism. The Chinese, however, unlike many of the colonial nations, have proved to be a people who were not ready meekly to submit to the yoke of world finance. The Chinese have repeatedly offered resistence, with telling effect. Hence the greatest amount of christian (capitalist) propaganda has been directed against China.

At first the efforts of the Y. M. C. A. had little success. But in the past fifteen years thanks to the millions spent in the work, the help of the army and to the facilities offered it by the various Chinese governments, the christian agent of imperialism has advanced rapidly.

There have been established in China 2,600 schools of so-called higher learning, with a student body of 260,000, who "name themselves the name of Jesus Christ." The Y. M. C. A. has headquarters in forty-two of the leading cities of China. Of course, they are to be found mainly in industrial and shipping districts, such as Shanghai, Nanking, Canton, Hongkong, Tsingtau, and others.

All along, however, the more enlightened Chinese students and workers have carried on a struggle against the pernicious influence of the Y. M. C. A. The Chinese youth does not swallow the "Y" without protest. Repeated demonstrations and protests against the invasion of this capitalist vanguard has been made and is meeting with response among the Chinese youth. As a reply, the Y. M. C. A. pours into China more men and money.

IN India, the Y. M. C. A. has established itself in 68 villages, carrying on its propaganda in disguised forms, thru lantern slide lectures, thru educational campaigns, and thru amusements and entertainments. Its main purpose, however, is to defeat the freeing of India from the yoke of Great Britain, and to keep the natives content with foreign domination, thru the preaching of brotherly love for the white brethren who own the mills. The "Y" very baldly announces that it desires to reconcile the downtrodden Hindu to his present position and to prevent any national aspirations.

In a prayer for the success of its work in India, the sky-pilots end with this peroration: "That they (the Y. M. C. A. men in India) may have guidance in helping to solve the great national problem of reconciliation." Knowing the horrible conditions of the Indian workers and peasants, "reconciliation" can mean only one thing.

THE entire orient is covered by the Y. M. C. A. as by a net. No country is too small or out-of-the-way when the expenses are paid by some capitalist. For instance, the Y. M. C. A. tells of the inauguration of its work in Jerusalem as follows:

> "On Christmas eve, 1924, there was put into the hands of the Y. M. C. A. a draft for the expense of a modern building to be erected on a site just outside the Jaffa Gate, on the highest point in Jerusalem. (The name of the donor is discreetly omitted.) From its doors will stream an influence which will reach Arabia, Syria, Persia, and Transjordania."

Should the Communist International establish such a "modern building" to stream its influence into these countries, the capitalist world would be aflame with protest.

But from the birthplace of Christianity will surge thruout the East, young, well-trained, go-getting Y. M. C. A. crusaders bearing the message of submission to Christ and to his favored devotees, Rockefeller, McCormick, Morgan and others high in church circles.

IN Alexandria and Cairo, Egypt, the Y. M. C. A. has a membership of over 700 men. A strong student work is carried on at Assuit and in the Christian College. The foreign department—sounds ominously political—enthusiastically announces that, "altho the population is ninety-five per cent Mohammedan, the Y. M. C. A. has established and maintained its full Christian character and program and control."

There is a new spirit of nationalism arising that seems well nigh sufficient to defeat the efforts of these Christian crusaders. Yet they are not to submit so readily, especially when the home office has so bountifully a supply of shekles. A new plan has been adopted and that is to inculcate Egyptians into the art of misleading their own fellow sufferers. Says the instructions to the Y. M. C. A. men, "It is plain that the leadership of the association must be Egyptian. Foreigners are under suspicion. A national development is essential."

Among the other Asiatic countries which are intensively plied with political christianity, a la Y. M. C. A., are Korea, Burma, Ceylon, Japan, the Philippine Islands and Turkey.

THE foreign department eyes Russia with longing and flirtatious glances. What an opportunity for propaganda under the guise of religious and social welfare work. And prevented merely by the prejudice of an irreligious Communist government!

The Y. M. C. A. must admit that it could do very little in Russia. It says that its chief task has been one of "salvage." It claims it disregards political lines; but we cannot forget its activities before and during the Russian revolution. The allied army of intervention in Siberia in 1918 consisted of 80,000 men. The Y. M. C. A. had 200 secretaries working among the Czechs, white guard Russians and American troops. The cost of this work was $2,000,000, and was mainly directed against the workers' government. When the revolution was successful, the Y. M. C. A. dismissed any of its secretaries who talked in favor of Russian recognition.

Now, having failed in its nefarious work of aiding to drown in blood the first workers' republic, the sanctimonious soldiers can merely hold up their hands in holy horror and exclaim, "The repression and devastation being visited upon all religion in Soviet Russia by the regime in power and its supporting party, Communist, are proceeding with terrible reality from the doctrine that religion and Communism are incompatible, both theoretically and practically. Here is a major fact in the Christian world and without parallel in the history of Christianity."

the Comsomol. Helpers for Vladimir Ilyich are needed now, he says, "for he is overorked." And the Comsomol is training the aids. So now the time has come for sending the helpers.

All this is perfectly clear to Vanka, but what if Mitry should suddenly accept? . . . How the boys will make fun of Vanka! What will Volodin, the lathe-hand, say? . . . No, this cannot be; didn't they make a compact? And besides, Mironych will say that it won't do—Mitry's a year short, according to the constitution.

The chairman, a gay, reckless fellow, rings two bells at the one time: one of copper, and the other—his throat; he knows his business.

"Comrades, the bureau of the nucleus proposes Anna Solodkova, 19, and Mitry Nazarenko, 17. They are surely known to all of you, and they've given their consent."

Voices respond like a humming bee-hive:

"Right you are . . . we know . . . seconded . . . we thot of 'em ourselves. . ."

Vanka looks at his brother and sees that his eyes burn in an unusual way. But what about Mironych?

Mironych?—nothing; he raises no objection:

"So they are considered accepted."

And Vanka hears nothing more of what is being said; he only feels that his head is swimming, the young comrades around him begin to whirl and whirl; tables and chairs whirl . . . his head swims; the comrades whirl around; tables and chairs whirl. . . .

"Ah . . . what's that? . . . Vanka's fainting! . . ."

"Well, if he ain't!"

Voices clamored and shrieked, rumbled, shouted, yelled. . .

"What's wrong with him?"

"It must be from joy; his brother Mitry is transferred to the party."

"No, it's not joy. They had a compact, you know, to join together, one the party, the other the Comsomol, so I bet he's sore. . ."

"So that's it? . . . Ain't he a Comsomoletz yet?"

"That's just it; he's only thirteen and, the main thing, he's the only one of that age, otherwise we would organize the 'pioneers'."

The night was warm, almost like spring. In the overturned caldron of the sky there were washes of every shade of blue. White, button-like glow-worms swam in the washes, just like in the button department.

The young folk are gathered at the gates to pass a few hours together, and in the house Vanka lies on the bed like a small, ungainly lump. Shavings of thot flash like lighting thru his brain. Questions flare up like bluish puffs of smoke. And the oil in the brain-machine keeps on burning and burning. "How's is this, now . . . how is this . . . is Mitry right or wrong?"

The shavings of thot squirm and coil, clutch boldly at each other, surround his head with a ring of fire, and all the thots reduce themselves to this:

"Who is more important—Vanka, or Lenin?"

At Moscow, in the Khamovniky section, on the night before the twelfth of March, the big auditorium of the Second University burst out into blossom. It blossomed with the lilacs of eyes. And because of this the faded eyes of the Nachpur, Comrade Antonov, also turned lilac, and his voice became as sweet as lilacs, for Antonov was speaking about the jubilee of the party.

And after Antonov, the "Trumpet" spoke, and recalled the days of underground work in the time of the czar, others with faded eyes spoke and brot up reminiscences. Their speches revived the lilacs that had faded away in distant prisons. They threw it in clusters to the audience, crowning the young heads.

And from all sides of the spacious hall, little folded notes streamed like a white brook over the heads—a brook that seemed to ooze thru the tangled moss of hair.

The notes contained greetings to Lenin, wishes for his rapid recovery; and from all these notes, whether written well or badly, in smooth style or clumsily, there seemed to rise the odor of new-formed callus, unspent sweat, untilled grains.

And when the elected were being transferred from the Comsomol to the party, and as each of the transferred, swayed by a whirlwind of emotions, made his way to the table, received the candidate's card, Bukharin's booklet—"The A. B. C. of Communism"—and a jubilee badge, the audience choked in the frenzied waving of arms, uproar of shouts, ringing of congratulations, and the orchestra was drowned in the wild clamor of the youngsters' throats.

A whirlwind of stormy joy swept thru the audience. It beat against the walls in a frenzied impact. And there was no Vanka in the audience, just as there were no other Vankas, Kolkas, Petkas, Dunkas, Mankas. There was one many-eyed many-headed monster; one joy played in its breast, one love flamed up, one devotion and readiness for sacrifice.

And when Mitry approached the tribune, Vanka shouted with all his might, closing his eyes in his frenzied exertion:

"Mitry, remember, don't disgrace the Comsomol. . . Be a true helper to Ilyich. . ."

And people turned toward Vanka and saw his ungainly little figure enveloped in the flood of joy. And Vanka yanked out a notebook from his pocket, tore out a page, and began feverishly to scrawl on it in an uneven hand; then he passed it to his neighbor and whispered:

"Write. . ."

"Sure. . ."

"Once more . . . please, please, send greetings . . . to the dear leader of the ploritariat, V. Lenin."

By V. N. of the lace-factory, named for Comrade Sverdlov.

And the lone little note floated like a frail boat toward the chairman, nearer, nearer, nearer. He reached out for it, took it, opened it, and smiled:

"Comrades, I have here another motion to send greetings to Vladimir Ilyich. Any objections?" Not a single one.

The Story Nosovitsky Didn't Tell

By C. E. Ruthenberg

SOME time during the month of August, this year, Jacob Nosovitsky came into the National Office of the Workers (Communist) Party.

I happened to be in the outer office and he addressed me with, "Don't you remember me?"

"I remember you quite well," I answered, intending that he should get the significance of the emphasis.

He explained that he had heard that there was a printed pamphlet containing the testimony in the investigation of the charge against Louis C. Fraina and that in this pamphlet suspicion was cast upon him and he wanted a copy of this pamphlet so that he could clear himself of this suspicion.

I told him I knew nothing about this pamphlet and could not give him a copy and was not interested in the matter and left him.

A day or two later Nosovitsky came back into the headquarters of the party accompanied by another man, and demanded to see me. I sent back word that I was too busy and didn't want to talk to him. He sent a message that the man with him was a Michigan doctor whose papers he had given to me in 1919, and that the doctor needed these, and wouldn't I find them for him. My answer was that I knew nothing about his papers and did not want anything to do with him.

Evidently he was gathering material for the series of stories with which he has entertained the gullible readers of a capitalist newspaper. He thought that six years after every Communist knew his true role—that of provocateur and spy—he could still pull the bluff of injured innocence.

Nosovitsky the Bluffer.

Since that time Nosovitsky has painted his own picture in the series of articles which have been appearing in the Hearst papers. He has acknowledged, not only that he was a spy working for Scotland Yard and the United States department of justice in the labor and Communist movement, but also that he tricked his capitalist employers by palming off on them forged documents purporting to give information about the Communists.

Nosovitsky's picture of himself, however, is not complete.

In his story of himself he is the clever international spy, knowing everything, forseeing everything, ready for every emergency. He was able to dupe everybody. Soviet government officials and Communist leaders, and never once did he make a misstep and expose himself. He is the perfect hero of romance who comes out on top in every situation.

So that this legend of Nosovitsky may not become the established version of his relation to the Communist movement, I want to tell a little story which Nosovitsky carefully omitted from his narrative. It isn't much to his credit as a brainy, unconquerable, international spy. It will serve to splash a little the picture of perfection, which is Nosovitsky's version of himself.

Nosovitsky Expelled as Provocateur.

My first contact with Nosovitsky was some time late in November, 1919. The Communist Party of America, formed a few months before, wished to establish contact with the international movement and Louis C. Fraina had been elected to go abroad for that purpose. Nosovitsky had been sent from New York by a committee there, as one able to make the necessary arrangements for Fraina's trip.

With two other members of the party I went to confer with him at the Morrison Hotel.

He met us dressed in the full regalia of an assistant surgeon of an ocean liner, the part which he was playing at the time.

Our first talk was about his status in relation to the party.

Nosovitsky had been expelled from the Russian seciton of the party on suspicion that he was a provocateur, some months before. The basis of this action was his urgent offers of automatic pistols made to the members of the leading committee of the Russian section. He seemed to have an unlimited supply of these at this command and wanted every one to have one. Since the Communists were interested in printing their newspapers, books and pamphlets to educate the workers as to the nature of the class struggle, and had no particular use for automatic pistols under the existing conditions of the class struggle, his actions aroused suspicion. There was no definite evidence against him, but on general principles he was considered as an undesirable member of the party, and was expelled.

Nosovitsky offered a batch of documents, giving his history and work, in order to exonerate himself. The committee which had expelled him thought it might have been mistaken in its action, and that his assistance could be accepted in facillitating Fraina's trip.

Nosovitsky pleaded, that if he was to help Fraina he must be reinstated as a member of the party and be given a credential as a representative of the Central Executive Committee of the party.

The weasel-faced, shifty Nosovitsky did not, however, make a good impression on us, and after leaving him and discussing the matter, we decided that we could not reinstate him to membership in the party and give him credentials which would enable him to pose as a representative of the party. On the other hand we needed his aid to make the arrangements for Fraina's trip. We decided to make use of whatever services he could render, without exposing ourselves through any breach of faith on his part.

We gave him a note stating he was authorized to receive printed literature and deliver same to our party, an authority he already had from other sources, and told him he could proceed with making the technical arrangement to have Fraina travel with him on his ship.

The Untold Story.

The next I heard of Nosovitsky was upon his return from Europe after having taken Fraina across. He sent word that he wished to report on having successfully fulfilled his duty.

Another comrade and I called upon him at his home somewhere in the one hundred and twenties of Lenox Ave. in New York. First he pulled out a suitcase filled with the latest books, pamphlets and newspapers published by the Communist movement in Europe—literature which we had been endeavoring to secure for months—and turned it over to us. Much of this literature was later translated and published in the United States. Then he handed back the note authorizing him to receive literature for us.

He was evidently paving the way to be trusted further, by apparent frankness in surrendering the only document which gave him any standing in relation to the movement.

What he was playing for soon came out. He demanded to appear before the Central Executive Committee of the party and submit a report on the Amsterdam conference of European Communists, which he declared he had attended with Fraina.

That was quite another story. The time was February, 1920, after the Palmer raids in which four thousand members of the party had been arrested, indicted and held for deportation and imprisonment. All the members of the Central Executive Committee were under indictment, and the police were looking for them in order to place the leadership of the party behind prison bars.

We gathered up our literature and departed, telling Nosovitsky we would bring his request before the Central Executive Committee and advise him later as to its decision.

Since it has a bearing on the later developments of this story, I want to remark here that Nosovitsky was lavish in his offer of entertainment. He brought forth a profusion of boxes of candy, nuts, dates, figs, fruits, etc., which he pressed upon us before we were able to effect our departure.

In Washington Park.

During the weeks which followed I heard frequently from Nosovitsky, who pressed his demand that he appear before the Central Executive Committee. He sent word and telephoned that he had many important matters to report which he had been instructed to tell only to the committee.

After many urgent calls I finally agreed to meet him again. The appointment was made for a certain bench in Washington Park. Another comrade accompanied me.

At this meeting Nosovitsky pleaded at lenght for the right to appear before the committee.

"Don't you trust me after the work I have done for the movement?" he demanded.

I asked him why he could not write out his report and give it to me. He countered that he had been instructed to submit a report in person—and must carry out the instructions he had received.

After further argument, seeing that the matter was going against him, he cried out:

"I may be starving, and you have not even asked me whether I had my lunch," and burst into tears.

The tears of insulted virtue rolling down his cheeks, accompanied by all the evidence of a complete breakdown because of the lack of confidence in his revolutionary honor, shook me for a moment, and I answered,

"Give me your telephone number, and I will take the matter up again and advise you of the decision."

"Call me at Vanderbilt 6000" he said, and brightened perceptible.

We parted.

A few hours later I had a friend call the number which he had given me and asked what place it was.

"Hotel Commodore" came back the answer of the telephone operator; "Mr. Nosovitsky isn't in his room."

The great clever, cunning international spy who pretended to be starving was living at one of the most expensive hotels in New York.

That was the end of Nosovitsky so far as any relationship with the Communist Party was concerned.

No More Deaf, No More Dumb, No More Blind.

THE Grey Ghost whistles from the rigging,
The Green Ghost whispers from the trees,
And the Red Ghost bellows
Where the black coal yellows,
But their words go wasted down the breeze.

For he hears not, speaks not, sees not,
He is deaf, he is dumb, he is blind
To the jingle of the keys
With their clue to mysteries
That have kept him a captive in his mind.

The Ocean is still for a saying,
The Mountains are mute for a word,
That the Factories would siren
With escaping steam on iron
Could the voice of their void be but heard.

But he hears not, speaks not, sees not,
He is deaf, he is blind, he is dumb,
And the Open Sesame,
That would set him prison-free,
Stumbles on his tongue and will not come.

The gates are ready to glide open,
The curtain of the sky to rise,
And the Earth her bosom bare,
Flowing milk and honey rare,
For a glimpse, for a glance, from his eyes.

But he hears not, speaks not, sees not,
He is deaf, he is dumb, he is blind,
Living night-shift, like a mole,
Face deflected from the goal,
Where the paths to light and life unwind.

Thunder—on either side the Urals!
Wonder—the rising of Red Dawn!
And underneath the silence
Voices in defiance—
Mutter of the millions marching on!

Keen to the roar of Revolution,
Quick to the clamor of his kind,
He plunges to their aid
By the surging barricade,
No more deaf, no more dumb, no more blind!

In the Flames of Revolt Twenty Years Ago

EDITOR'S NOTE:—In connection with the 20th anniversary of the revolution of 1905 we publish this series of word pictures of the revolution as told by a comrade who participated in the events of that time. This is the fifth story.

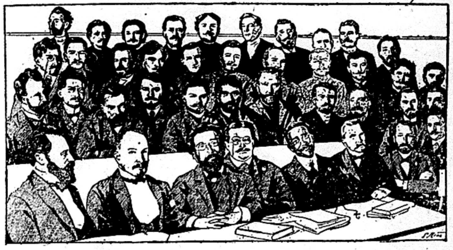
The October Days of 1905.

UNDER the rule of the czars the censorship was so strict that every printed word had to pass a censor. The chief of police usually acted as the censor. In circulars announcing a clothing sale or a grocery sale the censor would cut out the word "big" and leave only "sale" if the merchant would not come across with some graft. If they would come across, they could use the words "big," "great," "grand," etc. Every circular or other printed matter had to carry the legend: "Permitted by the censor, chief of police," and his name.



MEMBERS OF THE FIRST PETERSBURG SOVIET OF 1905 ON TRIAL IN CZARIST COURT.

Newspaper material used to be sent to the censor in galley proofs before it was made up into pages. The censor would cut out a word, a line, a paragraph or a whole article.

After the Bloody Sunday of January 9, 1905, (Jan. 22, new style), when thousands of workers in Petersburg went to the czar under the leadership of the priest Gapon, to beg for bread and freedom and were shot down in cold blood, the censorship became more strict. Things that were printed in a newspaper in one city would not be allowed in another city. The censor mercilessly cut article after article. It became too expensive for the publishers to "kill" so much composition and the editors finally decided to run the newspapers with blank space where the articles cut by the censor were to appear. The higher the revolutionary wave had grown the bigger became the blank space in the newspapers. On the eve of the October days many a newspaper in Russia appeared absolutely blank except for the name of the paper and sometime the headlines of the articles which were cut by the censor.

But the truth gradually began to spread all over the country. The revolutionary underground press of the party told how thousands of workers with their wives and children carrying holy pictures of saints from the churches and portraits of the czar went to him as children to a father to beg for freedom and bread, and how he met them with bullets, how the children who climbed up trees in Alexandrovsky park were shot down, etc.

"You have no more a czar! He is the killer of the workers! Down with him! Long live the revolution!" cried our underground newspapers, pamphlets and circulars. Street demonstrations became more frequent, strikes more numerous. The country began to boil with revolt. Finally in the middle of October a strike began in Petersburg which by October 17, had grown into a general strike all over the country.

The railroads and telegraphs which even at that time were government owned and controlled, stopped working, all the factories shut down, business was paralyzed. Only the news of the spreading of the strike was flashed to the newspapers. In Petersburg they organized a Soviet of Workers' Deputies.

When the telegrams about the strike reached the office of the liberal newspaper in our city, the printers were among the first to go out on strike. By that time we had already a good underground printers' union organized and functioning in spite of the law prohibiting unions. Only "extras," containing strike telegrams, were published. Within two days the strike became general in the city. The street cars kept on running, but after a few of them were turned over and barricades built of them, the rest disappeared from the streets.

The strikers swarmed into the streets. They went in big throngs from store to store pulling out the clerks, and from shop to shop calling out the workers who had not joined by that time. The police disappeared. The local administration lost its head.

Very seldom did we meet with any resistance. Only near the barracks of the dragoons where a big flower mill was located, a stubborn fight was put up. The dragoons freely used their sabers and some comrades were taken away to the hospital.

And then came the flash:

"Freedom! His Imperial majesty signed manifesto granting freedom of speech, assembly, conscience, etc. Duma to be called."

And later came the manifesto on the wires. The news spread over the city in an instance. Everybody swarmed into the streets. A great crowd collected in front of the newspaper office and the manifesto was read from the balcony before it appeared in print.

Spontaneous processions formed, red flags appeared, open air meetings started all over the city. Strangers congratulated each other with the newly won liberty, friends and mere acquaintances kissed each other in the streets. People were crying and laughing at the same time. Everything red was at once absorbed. There were red flags, red ribbons, red streamers, red, red all over.

The shop keepers, the landlords, the petty bourgeois intellectuals, the middle class in general, everybody alongside with the revolutionary workers, wore red in the buttonholes and smiles on their faces as if trying to say: "I was always for the revolution, you know."

A big procession went to the jail, where after a brief conference with the jail officials, the political prisoners were released and met with enthusiastic cheers of the crowds.

Other processions went to the center of the city, Alexandrovsky Prospect, and from there to German Square, the biggest square in town. A monster mass meeting started there that lasted until dark. Speakers of the different revolutionary parties presented their programs to the huge crowds. The shop keepers and the petty bourgeoisie had no platform nor party, they had nothing to present.

Tired and happy the crowds went home to assemble again in the morning. The next day another monster meeting was held on the same square. Crowds were continuously coming and going.

About noontime a few comrades came rushing in "drojkas" (cabs) and reported to the party leaders that the "Black Hundred" (patriotic hooligans) are assembling at the Chuflin Square. Later it was reported that the widow of police captain Ossovsky who was killed after the demonstration at Skulianskaya Rogatka, was addressing the meeting of the Black Hundred. The crowds also heard about it and became alarmed. The meeting broke up.

The members of the military organization of the party were advised to arm and assemble in the vicinity of the Chuflin square where the hooligans were holding their meeting.

Before we had time to do it, they ended their meeting and began to march to the cathedral, carrying national three collor flags and portraits of the czar. When they reached the main crossing on Alexandrovsky Prospect they spied a few unarmed comrades on the corner. A group of hooligans left the parade and made a rush for them. They escaped into buildings and yards shutting the doors after them, but one girl was hit over the head with a club as she was trying to run up a few stairs into a restaurant. She fell on the stairs, the blood gushing from the wound. The frenzied patriots began to hit her with clubs and kick her with their boots until her head was smashed into a pulp. When they tired and stopped there were still signs of life in her. Two shots were fired into her body as they left.

The Black Hundred marched on to the cathedral which was located in the center of a big city park. There a public prayer was held for the czar and the House of the Romanovs. By the time the prayer was over a solid group of members of the "B. O." (Boyenoy Otryad: military organization of the party) assebmled in the vicinity. Most of them were armed. A few hardware stores were broken into and all the arms found distributed to party members and sympathizers.

As soon as the prayer was over the patriots began to swarm out of the park and started to smash windows in the stores; and a fire was started in the biggest book store of the city that was located opposite the park. Our group advanced and began to fire from "Brownings," as the automatics were called, and other revolvers that were on hand. The hooligans at once retreated to the park. Two policemen in uniform, hiding behind trees, began to shoot at us. A lively duel ensued, that lasted for about twenty minutes. Then some comrades noticed a group of policemen coming up from a side street. We began to retreat. Comrade A., who did not notice our retreat, remained alone at the entrance continuing to fire. The hooligans not knowing the reason of our retreat did not dare to advance against him. He alone held back a couple hundred of them. A warning was cried out to him but in the heat of the battle he did not hear. Finally he also noticed the advance of the police and retreated. The former comrade A. is now a big business man in Chicago and would have nothing whatever to do with "Reds."

As soon as the police reached the scene the pogrom was again in full blast.

This time they did not care to rob much. Neither was it a pogrom against the Jews only. Many christians were killed by the hooligans. It was a strictly political affair. Right after the pogrom appeared a patriotic song:

"The Russian czar gave us freedom
To beat the Jews and mutineers."

They were after the "mutineers" first of all, that explains the great number of Jews and christians killed at that time.

The horrors of 1903 were repeated, but on a larger scale, and not only in our city but all over Russia. Especially horrible were the pogroms in the central gubernias where no Jews were permitted to live. In one railroad district the telegraphers and students who barricaded themselves in a building, were burned up alive. The police and hooligans kept on shooting on every one who tried to escape from the burning building. The students did not dare to show upon the streets in their uniforms.* Many of the political prisoners who were liberated during the first days of freedom, were later hunted up by the police and gendarmes and killed in cold blood.

In our city the pogrom lasted for three full days. All during that time the army and the police were in full charge of the situation. Their business was to protect and defend the hooligans, and occasionally to join in the murders and robberies. All individuals who were suspected of being students, were fired upon without much ado. Walking with a comrade, I came upon a squad of soldiers who suddenly turned a corner about a half a block away. Without a word they opened fire upon us. As we flatened out against a wall the bullets began to clatter on the cubblestones. Many a child was killed during this period by stray bullets of the police and soldiers.

The most bitter enemies of ours during those dark days were the shop keepers, petty bourgeois intellectuals, the landlords, and all those who for the moment had fallen in love with the red ribbons. They cursed us with bitter hate blaming us for the pogrom.

These strange bedfellows were with us as long as we were celebrating, but when it came to a fight, we had to fight alone. It was quite a valuable lesson that we learned during those days.

That lesson came in very handy during the October days of 1917.

OPEN WAR IN WEST ON OLD PARTIES

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

ENGLAND gets the Mosul oil from the league of nations but Turkey may get more than the can. After what Abd-el-Krin did to France and Spain, it is not the part of wisdom to build a tall edifice on the presumption that the Turks are going to melt away like butter on a hot plate when the armies of the league of nations hove in sight. Which armies by the way, will be composed ninety nine per cent of Britain's forces. The Turks are in a fairly good position to thumb their rather elegant nasal appendages at the British.

WALL Street wants to ease the United States into the league of nations via the world court. Rather an interesting line-up in congress. The DAILY WORKER alone of all the daily papers gives the economic background of the opposing forces. How thin the line that separates the democratic and the republican parties? The great bulk of both are for the league because the international bankers are for it and the House of Morgan controls both parties. On the other hand a few senators who represent the middle and far west industrialists are fighting against entrance into the league. The Coolidge administration is run by the bankers and it looks as if the bankers may win this fight.

THE "impartial investigator" who dug up the atrocity stories for England is Gen. Laidoner of Esthonia, who was chiefly responsible with the murder of the Communists in that country recently. LEVIN COUNTS THE VOTES IN AMALGAMATED

Members Take Figures with Grain of Salt

The election of joint board officials in the Chicago Amalgamated Clothing Workers have just come to an end. It will probably take another few days before the results of the election will be announced. There is no doubt that the officials will try to use the figures of the election as a proof for their constant cry that they still enjoy the "full confidence" of the membership, that there is no place for an opposition in the Chicago Amalgamated, that their policies, program and actions of last year are approved by the membership.

In this, as well as in all previous elections, the figures of votes cast do not mean everything. For not until the membership cast their votes overwhelmingly for the progressive program will the disparity between the votes cast and those counted, that has been a notable characteristic of previous elections, continue to prevail.

With Grain of Salt.

The class conscious elements in the Chicago Amalgamated are not so naive as to accept the figures given by the elections committee as the correct ones. Good and sound judgement will be used by this element as to the strength of the opposition to the present leadership.

This election is significant. It is significant in more ways than one. Not only will the results of this election be used by the officials as a license to proceed with an intensification of the same policies and tactics of the past, but they will also utilize it as a counter-agent to the very disturbing upheaval in the New York membership.

Machine Busy.

It must be said that the Amalgamated machine is the most powerful and centralized organization to be found within any union. In order to pile up as big a vote as their unpopularity with the rank and file will permit, the machine has and is utilizing all their forces. Business agents, shop chairman and lieutenants get on the job with all the vigor and energy at their disposal. Sample ballots, printed at union expense, marked out for machine candidates are distributed by the shop chairmen. Shop chairmen are instructed to watch and see that people vote and how they vote. Elections judges are appointed that can be depended upon by the machine.

The opposition candidate happens to be a worker from the shops. He has had to face many difficulties in the campaign. He was refused credentials for watchers to take care of his vote during the counting of the ballots. LOCAL 39 OF THE A. C. W. HOLDS ELECTIONS OF LOCAL OFFICIALS

It became known Saturday that elections for officials of Local 39, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, would be held Monday and Tuesday. Not much time was given to the membership to consider the formation of a slate in opposition to the machine slate.

Local 39 is the largest local, not only in Chicago but in all the Amalgamated. It has an estimated membership of some 10,000. At one time it was the seat of all progressivism in the A. C. W., with real free speech for the members and union democracy the rule. Now, however, it is the seat of gangsterism in the A. C. W.

In Local 39 today progressivism is even yet given some lip service, but it only amounts to words over the corpse. Meetings are packed with sluggers and members terrorized and beaten up if they try to raise their voices for real progressive measures or in any opposition to the machine. That only by a rumor leaking out could the membership learn that an election in the local was coming today, is added proof of the highhanded way of running things now used by the machine.

However, the left wing quickly formed an opposition slate to run against the machine. A progressive platform opposed to the rule of gangsters in the local was adopted.

Among others run by the left wing for the Joint Board are Meyer Berson, Anna Fox and I. Sonkin; while Abe Lerner and Fannie Slofchick are standing for the Executive Board and Mandel Yaglovsky for the Grievance Board.

The whole progressive and left wing slate is pledged to a fight for the abolition of gangsterism and to bring back this great local union to its proud condition of former days when it was really an instrument of the workers.

HEARST HAS JIM CROW NIGHT AT CHRISTMAS EXHIBIT IN BALTIMORE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 20—Negro visitors to the Hearst Baltimore Evening American and Evening News Christmas exhibit, who were in line waiting to enter, were pulled out of line and told that there was a special day set aside for "niggers" and that they could not enter.

Following repeated insults of this type, many of the Negro societies met in conference and issued a call to all Negroes to keep away from the Hearst exhibit on the day set aside for "niggers" and to withdraw their subscriptions from the Hearst papers.

SOVIETS WILL GIVE PLAN TO GENEVA MEET

But Suspect War Move Camouflaged as Peace

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 20—Dispatches from Moscow show that the Soviet government is fully aware of the new angle of British imperialism's diplomatic preparation for making war on the Soviet union by all sorts of hypocritical overtures for peace, the latest of which is the invitation by the league of nations to the Soviet government to attend the preliminary conference on "disarmament" to be held at Genova, on February 15, next.

War Disguised as Peace.

"Under the camouflage of pacification," states the Izvestia, an adroit move in a diplomatic game is being carried on by Great Britain. The Izvestia says, according to dispatches, that Soviet Russia will gladly participate in such conferences, but the charge is made that the conference was set for Geneva purposely to make Soviet participation difficult, since Soviet Russia has a strict boycott on Switzerland since the unpunished assassination at Lausanne, Switzerland, in 1923, of the Soviet Ambassador Vaslav Vorovsky.

"Refusal to participate, however," says the Izvestia, "would be playing into the hands of the league of nations and would brand the Soviet union as an enemy of peace."

That the Soviet government is certain to participate is the conclusion from expressions of opinion quoted as coming from a high official at Moscow. But the Bolsheviks are fully aware of the hypocrites they are dealing with. This, too, is indicated in the official statements, which are quoted as follows:

Will Present a Concrete Plan.

"While we are still skeptical of the European nations' real desire for disarmament, we are willing to make another effort to establish general peace and economic co-operation among all mankind.

"With this end in view, we are ready to put before the conference a concrete and definite plan representing the Russian workers' desire for peace, a new social order and a firm

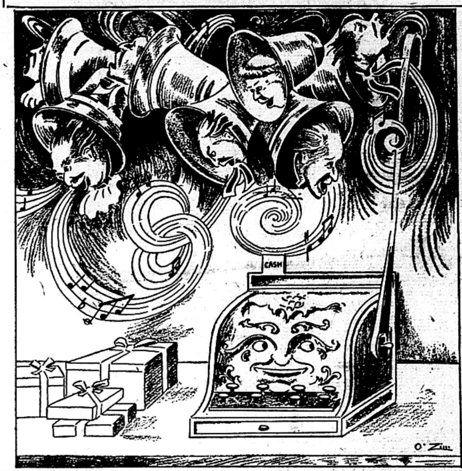
THE BRAZEN TONGUES OF MAMMON



TURKEY WILL GO TO WAR TO DEFEND MOSUL

Tewfik Bey Scorns the League of Nations

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 20.—With the Turkish national assembly sitting day and night trying to determine Turkey's course of action in the face of the decision of the league of nations giving the Mosul oil land to Great Britain's hands by presenting it to the puppet kingdom of Irak, the possibility of war looms in the Near East between Turkey and her possible allies and Great Britain backed by the league of nations.

This possibility of war is made very realistic by the words of Tewfik Rushdi Bey, Turkish foreign minister now in Paris. He says:

"Mosul is Turkish, and Turkey is prepared to fight to defend Turkish territory, despite the league of nation's award of Mosul to Irak and Great Britain. We are being threatened on our own soil."

Concerning the report that Great Britain was considering making offers of loans and concessions to Turkey if it would accept the theft of Mosul, Tewfik said:

"If Great Britain offers reasonable terms we will accept them; but if she offers unreasonable terms—well, what would the United States do if Japan seized some of its territory? Fight, of course.

A British Promise.

"The basis of the Turkish grievance is the promise made by the Marquis Curzon in the Lausanne treaty conference, that Mosul never would be disposed of without the consent of Turkey. Why, then, should it be necessary for Turkey to go to the league?

"We don't care about the league of nations or the Hague tribunal decision. They mean nothing in our lives.

"I would be a fit subject for an insane asylum if I even expected a just decision from the league of nations," concluded the Turks' foreign minister in no uncertain language.

Tewfik Bey, when asked if he had visited Tchitcherin, the Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, now in Paris, stated that he had seen Tchitcherin, but would not speak of what was discussed.

Sweet Case Defendants Released on Bonds

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Dec. 20.—All of the eleven Negro defendants in the Sweet case are out on bonds ranging from $5,000 to $10,000. Dr. Ossian H. Sweet and Leonard Morse have been released after a bitter fight on $10,000 bonds. Mrs. Sweet has been released on her recognizance, thus releasing the $5,000 bail bond put up for her.

It is expected the new trial for the eleven Negroes accused of murdering a white hoodlum, who was in the mob that stoned and fired upon the Sweet residence, will come the early part of January.

Miners Lose Right to Decide Use of Timber

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (FP)—For 13 years, miners employed in the state coal mines in New Zealand have had the right to decide what timbering should be used to make their working places reasonably safe against accident. The government, in order to cheapen production, has now filched this right from the miners. A strike is now in progress as a result of the government's action.

MORE GUNMEN THAN SCABS AT EDISON CO.

But Production Fades as Scabs Vanish

The strike against the Edison Electric Appliance company conducted by the Sheet Metal Workers is now entering the third week with the ranks of the strikers remaining solid and the picket line unbroken.

The company is now working the few scabs overtime and promising to play the role of Santa Claus but in spite of all the promises there are fewer scabs working now than in the beginning of the strike and production is yet paralyzed.

The company is employing more special deputies or gunmen than scabs in order to make the outside world believe that work is being performed. These professional strike-breakers are prowling around the sidewalk supposedly to protect the company's properties but in reality to prevent the strike pickets from talking to the scabs. These plugg-uggilies follow you in the street cars and the elevated trains in order to prevent you from heaving a peaceful argument with those scabbing.

The Edison Appliance Co. is a notorious open shop concern and a subsidiary of the General Electric Co. The struck plant is located on 52nd and 19th St. in Cicero.

NORTH DAKOTA FARMER-LABOR PARTY FORMED

Meeting Agrees on Plan for Northwest Drive

By ALFRED KNUTSON

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, North Dakota, Dec. 20—Despite all of the desperate efforts of several of the old time, die-hard, fossilized nonpartisan leaguers to prevent the formation of a farmer-labor party, a farmer-labor party was formed at the gathering of North Dakota farmers here.

The resolution which was sponsored by the Williams county delegation and was adopted by the conference calls for the organization of the party along class lines.

The platform of the newly organized farmer-labor party among other things, declares for the public ownership of railroads, coal mines and water power; the reduction of tariffs and the gradual abolition of chattel and farm mortgages.

A committee of five was elected to lay plans for the calling of a conference of the northwestern and the Pacific northwest states sometime in March.

CLASSES OF WORKER CORRESPONDENTS TO BE ORGANIZED BY WICKS

During his tour thru the East, which started yesterday in Grand Rapids, Comrade H. M. Wicks will devote considerable time to the organizing of worker correspondents' classes in the various cities that he visits.

This is some of the most important work being conducted by The DAILY WORKER and the party. It is essential that proletarian writers be developed so that a great staff of field correspondents can be created that will know how to handle all labor news in a manner that will appeal to the working class.

All worker correspondents and those who want to take up this work should attend the Wicks meetings and remain afterwards to take up this question with Comrade Wicks.

The following cities will be visited: Detroit, Buffalo, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Pittsburg, Cleveland and Toledo. Time and place of lectures announced elsewhere in today's paper.

WORLD UNITY OF WORKERS NEEDED TO FIGHT BOSSES

Wake Up America! Cry British Unionists

By TOM MANN.

Special London Correspondent for The Daily Worker.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The capitalist international combine formed at Locarno has now been termed the treaty of London, and it is alleged great and glorious results will accrue therefrom. Sir B. Pares has been lecturing at the school of Slavonic studies, where Sir Benjamin gave an address on recent information as to conditions in Russia. He said "The Russian Communists had a great victory at the Trade Union Congress at Scarborough, but that had been followed by a reverse, and the Locarno pact hit them far harder than the resolutions of any political party or the prosecutions of Communist agitators." A principal object of this treaty or pact beyond doubt has been to put a fence round Russia and at least to attempt her isolation.

World Trade Union Unity.

PINCHOT PLAN STILL LEWIS' MAIN PROPOSAL

Yet Willing to Sign 5-Year Contract

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20—Negotiations of settlement of the anthracite coal strike are still unrealized, altho John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers' Union is offering to practically surrender the strike for a five year contract under the tricky "Pinchot plan."

The latest move was an invitation by a committee of seven mayors and burgesses of the anthracite district, sent to both the operators and the union, asking both to confer "on the governor's or any other plan." It is evident that the mayors and burgesses are sticking by Governor Pinchot so far, as their meeting last week declared, "Governor Pinchot's proposals were the proposals of the public, wherein the miners made every possible concession."

Amounts to Surrender.

Miners, in fact are convinced that the said "concessions" are a disgraceful surrender of their demands made at the Tri-District convention, and many are increasingly demanding a withdrawal of maintenance men who are keeping the mines in repair and the declaration of a strike of all coal miners in the United States.

The operators are meeting today and will reach a decision then, but Lewis replied at once that the United Mine Workers were willing to meet in negotiation conferences, "only upon the basis of Governor Pinchot's peace proposals."

Don't Mean Anything.

A little tiff was staged between Inglis, head of the operators and Lewis, when Inglis declared that "Lewis was throwing up a smoke screen to conceal issues." Lewis said Inglis had a brainstorm and had used a "foul and gratuitous falsehood." But this little spat is regarded by the progressive miners like one of Goldberg's cartoons—"It don't mean anything."

It is clear now to the miners that the operators are out to destroy the union or conquer it completely.

economic foundation for the world."

U. S. Will Participate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 20.—President Coolidge is definitely committed to participation in the so-called "disarmament" conference to be held at Geneva in February, altho the general league opposition in the senate keeps him from openly sponsoring the full participation of the United States.

The president has his ideas on disarmament, which are that the European countries should reduce their standing land armies. America has no large standing army to reduce, though it has a tremendous reserve army of conscripts and skeleton forces. But the United States is jealous of its naval power and Coolidge is believed fixed on participating in the conference if, for no other reason, than to see that the United States keeps its arms for support of its imperialistic policies.

Roumanian Persecutions Continue.

COOLIDGE CALLS IN DEMOCRATS TO AID WORLD COURT

Colonel House Visits the White House

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 20.—The senate is on a vacation over the week end, but more fire-works on the world court issue is expected Monday when the dispute is taken up on the question. Those who heard Senator Borah's speech Friday are still talking over his expression that any senator who privately believed joining the court a bad move for the country, and yet who voted for it merely because his party platform endorsed it, would be—"the slimiest creature that ever wriggled into the United States senate."

Wall Street Proposal.

That Coolidge is preparing to use all possible assistance from democrats and other supposed "enemies" of his party to put across the scheme which has clearly received the approval of Wall Street, is seen in the visit of two of the most outstanding league of nations, democratic partisans to the White House.

The first of these two democrats is Colonel E. M. House, once Woodrow Wilson's right hand man and secret representative before the two split over the Versailles treaty. House is now a guest of Coolidge and unquestionably is being used as an advisor to the head of the republican party in the fight to put over the U. S. entry to the world court. He would not, as usual, say anything to reporters of what his business is or what his opinions are.

Underwood Calls.

The second leading democrat called in to help Coolidge on the world court fight is Senator Underwood. He visited Coolidge Saturday afternoon. Underwood is the ranking democratic of the foreign relations committee and a strong propagandist for the league of nations.

The visit of these two ardent supporters of Woodrow Wilson's pet proposals, the league of nations and the world court to aid a republican president, caused some gasps of astonishment, but the knowing only mention the term "Morgan's Siamese Twins."

DAWES PLAN WELCOMED TO RESCUE FRANC

Paris Papers Favor the House of Morgan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 20.—The one hope to save the franc is aid from the United States. This is the public declaration of the new finance minister, Paul Doumer, who followed Caillaux and Loucheur in the job of trying to stabilize French currency.

But the United States can be brot to invest capital in France only under one condition—that is a Dawes' plan for the country. In spite of all the twisting and turning of the government to avoid this fate, there seems no other way out of the muddle.

Already that part of the French press subsidized by the American banking combine under the leadership of J. P. Morgan & company is conducting propaganda for a Dawes' plan by publishing stories about the rise of industry and commerce in Germany under the plan and the sinking of the franc and the general distress threatening the French republic.

The Communists in the chamber of deputies realize the portent of such propaganda and are combatting it with all their might, while the treacherous socialists are secretly in favor of it. Like their kind in other countries they willingly sell themselves to the highest bidder and the one powerful capitalist group able to pay the highest price for prostitution these days is the House of Morgan.

President Asked to Rescind Court-Martial Action on Mitchell

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Representative John N. Tillman, democrat, made an appeal on the floor of the house demanding that President Calvin Coolidge mitigate or quash the sentence which the court-martial decided on in the case of Col. William Mitchell. Col. Mitchell was found guilty of violating military discipline and it was decided to punish him by removing him from the government payroll for five years.

Tillman declared that the court-martial was organized to "get" Mitchell and not to give him a trial. The Mitchell issue and his recommendations are backed by many of the leading democrats against the administration program as contained in the Dwight W. Morrow report.

HUNGRY YOUTH SETS FIRE TO BAKESHOP TO STEAL LOAF OF BREAD

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LAWRENCE, Mass., Dec. 20—Admitting that he set fire to the property of the New England Baking company at 97 Lowell St., an 11-year old youth told the police court here that his purpose was to burn down the door in order to get into the bakeshop and steal a loaf of bread to satisfy his hunger.

One of Five Children.

The lad then told the court that he was one of five children and that his father was dead. His mother is unable to do any work. His mother borrowed money to pay the rent of the small shack she lived in but there are times when she could not borrow and as for food they were often forced to do without it. The lad told police that on the day that he set fire to the bakeshop the meals he had consisted of: for breakfast, a cup of coffee; a few bites at a relative's house and nothing for supper.

Hungers For Bread.

Consumed by a gnawing desire for bread to satisfy his hunger, the youth testified, he formed an idea of burning down the door of the bakeshop, gaining entrance to the plant and stealing a couple of loaves of bread. Then enlisting the aid of two other youths who also were longing for something to eat, they set fire to the building.

The young lad is now in the hands of the Juvenile Court and efforts are being made by the state to send the youth to a detention home as a "criminal" and an "enemy of society."

Levin Counts Votes in Amalgamated

didate, offered to pay the expenses out of his own pocket.

Program "Verboten."

Those workers who were interested in electing the opposition candidate because of the program he subscribed to, distributed a plugger in the shops in the form of a sample ballot. That plugger contained the program upon which he was running. This plugger that contained Green's platform was declared illegal by the officials.

Three workers were arbitrarily removed from their jobs because they distributed it. Manager Levin, who is running for reelection and whom Green opposes, gave out instructions to all shop chairmen to take all people off the jobs who may be found distributing campaign literature for Green. Altho those who have been removed were returned to their jobs after a day, yet it shows to what extent the machine is prepared to go to perpetuate itself in office.

It is exceedingly interesting to note the reasons offered by Manager Levin, who is also a general executive board member for removing those people from their shops. When some of those workers appeared before Levin for an explanation of their removal, he said, "I do not object to your distribution of the plugger announcing Green's candidacy, but I do object to his program appearing on the other side."

Repudiates Convention Policy.

For the present administration to object to a program that demands genuine unemployment insurance, organization of the unorganized, protection against wage cuts, against expulsion of members because of a difference of opinion and against slugging, amounts to saying, "To hell with all progress," and constitutes a repudiation of many of the resolutions endorsed by the last national convention of the A. C. W.

This election proves that the administration machine, in their effort to pile up a big vote used all methods, unscrupulous or not, to pile up a big vote. They terrorized the membership. All manner of intimidation was used. They took advantage of the ignorance of some of the members by having the shop chairmen cast their votes for them. All their tactics were directed toward attempting to instill such fear into the rank and file in opposition to them so that, in the next election, they would not have the courage to place candidates on the ticket again.

The machine will no doubt claim a big vote in this election. But by mere figures they can never hope to convince the rank and file of the left wing and progressive elements that they still enjoy the full confidence of the membership or that their policies and tactics of the past year have been approved.

Can't Stop the Fall of the Franc in France Thru Pawning French Industry

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the "franc statesmen" in Paris are considering another plan for saving French currency. The proposition looks like a mortgage on French industry. The French capitalists, who seem to favor this latest panacea, are evidently willing to impose this "Dawes plan" upon themselves, in order to save their precious profits, before Morgan and other international bankers in Wall Street, do it for them.

• • • •

The suggestion first came from the textile barons of northern France. It is proposed to pawn the assets of French industry for a loan of $400,000,000 to satisfy the rapacious needs of the nation's internal debt, that barks ceaselessly like a devouring wolf at the door of France's treasury. It is declared the metal and pottery interests join in support of the plan.

• • • •

When the French capitalists talk of pawning the assets of French industry, they mean that they are merely pawning their ability and power to exploit the French working class. Without the workers securely harnessed to the capitalist industrial machine, the so-called "mortgage" wouldn't be worth the paper it is written on.

It is only the increasing amount of wealth stolen from German labor that satisfies the demands of the Dawes plan.

French capitalists, attempting to aid their own government out of its financial difficulties, will in turn demand new aid in increasing the exploitation of the French workers; thru cutting wages, worsening labor conditions, increasing the length of the workday and increasing the cost of living necessities. They will ask and receive "favors."

This means a bitterer life imposed upon the whole French working class; worse even than in Germany, because French imperialism has wars to pay for in Africa and the Near East.

• • • •

During these past few days there has been a regular tital wave of propaganda, sweeping thru the profit press, narrating the "great success" of the Dawes plan in Germany. Morgan's man, Gilbert Parker, talks like a press agent for the combined Barnum and Bailey and Ringling Bros. circus. According to his story, the sunrise of capitalist prosperity dawns over Germany. No republican or democratic campaign orator could do better.

But the facts are against Morgan's agent. During the last half of November the number of unemployed in Germany increased more than 50 per cent. Nearly 700,000 unemployed were receiving state aid on Dec. 1st, with the likelihood that the figures would soon reach the million mark. The Dawes-Morgan plan turned Germany into a nation of coolies, but it found no additional markets for German industry. Germany will not be able to meet the increasing reparations demands.

Capitalism may put heavier chains upon the limbs of French labor, cheapening and increasing production, but it is also faced with the problem of finding markets for its goods.

Thus Germany and France are again at each other's throats in spite of all the beautiful language of the Locarno pacts. The smouldering conflict between the mark and the franc still smokes, with its threat of breaking forth at any moment into the raging fires of war.

• • • •

Germany proposes martial law and a dictatorship to meet its industrial crisis. That is only a confession that the nation faces civil war. France drifts toward the brink of the same chasm. There is no power, not even in the House of Morgan, that can stay the downfall of the mark-franc system on both sides of the Rhine.

CANADIAN COURT SENTENCES FIVE MORE STRIKERS

CALGARY, Alberta, Dec. 20—The second case in the trial of the 24 Drumheller coal miners before Judge Boyd for "watching and besetting" has come to an end with the sentencing of five boys to two months in jail without the option of a fine. The ages of the youths range from sixteen to twenty-three.

Police, detectives, coal operators and every shady character that could be found in the district was called in to testify that these youths had sat on a hillside all night around a bonfire waiting for the scabs to appear. One policeman was forced to admit on the witness stand that he had "refreshed" his memory by "glancing" over the preliminary evidence.

The defense in this case was not allowed any peremptory challenges.

During his appeal to the jury, the lawyer for the defense pointed out the class character of the jury. The verdict of the jury was guilty of "watching and besetting" and they had the gall to recommend "mercy." An appeal is being entered in the case as it involves the right of Canadian workers to picket.

After a heated battle a change of venue was won for one of the cases to Red Deer for February 8 and a jury panel of 50 has already been called. The other nine cases were postponed to January 25.

DOWS, Iowa, Dec. 20.—Pouring a continuous barrage of lead from high-powered shotguns and automatics into the homes of terror-stricken villagers here, eight bandits after more than one hour's work, shattered the vault of the Dows State Bank here with six blasts of explosives and escaped with $10,000.

FEDERATION GETS SMALL PROPAGANDA

But Soderstrom Failed To Talk Injunctions

The Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday afternoon was forced to swallow an uncommonly large dose of propaganda for Governor Len Small, who seems to feel a need of friends these days. He found one, tho a rather brass and stupid one in the form of one Soderstrom, author of the injunction limitation act, which, experience proves, does not seem to limit injunctions as it was supposed to do when Soderstrom sold it to the Illinois labor movement.

Being called up to the federation to explain why his bill refuses to work, and how to fight Judge Dennis Sullivan's injunctions against striking workers, Soderstrom changed the subject and, incidentally mentioning anti-labor injunctions launched into political tributes to Governor Small and to Colonel Frank L. Smith, who is trying to get the federation's endorsement as a "friend of labor."

What Soderstrom was getting from Smith to boost him for "our next senator" is undisclosed, but Small won the most fulsome tribute from Soderstrom for appointing Soderstrom as chairman of the "power and utilities" committee of the Illinois legislature.

"Len Small is a political daddy to me," said Soderstrom in a burst of tears. Smith, however, was a less tragic figure, tho he had proved that he was a "friend of labor" by going everywhere telling a particular joke about how god had to keep his eyes on the bosses, but let the labor movement play around his coattails unwatched.

Between tears over Small and jokes over Smith the injunction limitation act, and the method of making it work, somehow got entirely lost in the forest of buncombe. Soderstrom is a member of the International Typographical Union of Streator, Illinois, but he admitted that for eleven years he had occupied "public office."

Illinois Banks Are Worried Over Verdict in Len Small Appeal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Dec. 20.—Banking combines in Illinois that have state funds deposited in their institutions are keenly studying the recent decision down against Len Small, governor of the state, whether they are liable to prosecution for holding out profits made on state funds.

It is expected that if danger threatens their pocket-books, they will unite with the governor, who was found guilty of making away with over $1,000,000 in interest money on state funds, which were intrusted to his care when he was state secretary-treasurer.

The four former secretaries, Lieut.-Governor Fred E. Sterling, Andrew Russell, William J. Ryan, Jr., and Edward E. Mitchell are also watching the case as the outcome of Len Small's case will also determine the outcome of similar charges against them.

Chicago Business Interests Start War on Water Metering

The Chicago board of underwriters, in the interests of the Sears-Roebuck, insurance exchange, stockyards interests and other big industrial concerns in the city, are planning an attack on the new water meter ordinance passed by the city council. The board shows that water costs have increased considerably and declares that it would cost many thousands of dollars more per year to the plants and homes if water is metered.

It points out that the rise in water costs will amount to more than 1,000,000 per year.

PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS AIDS BIG BUSINESS

Discuss Extension of Wall Street Rule

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 20.—At the tenth annual meeting of the Pan-American commercial congress which is now in session at the Hotel Roosevelt, it was stressed that the American consular service be utilized to more fully help develop American capitalism's inroads into south and central America.

The three day meeting opened most auspiciously. Oscar S. Straus, former secretary of commerce and labor presided. There were representatives from every country in North, Central and South America.

Dr. Clarence J. Owens, president of the congress, having related the achievements of past meetings and of the southern commercial congress, under whose auspices this year's meeting is held, declared:

Consular Service Developed.

"We plan practical results to flow from this conference with our Latin-American and Canadian neighbors. We must establish for all time a faithful and undying friendship.

"'Plattsburgs' for business, intensive training camps for the foreign fields of commerce, must be organized at strategetic centers. Surveys must be made in all countries as to the opportunities of economical and commercial advantage in the extension and more intensive utilization of the consular service."

Wants "American" League.

W. J. L. Banham, president of the board of trade and transportation, suggested a sort of western league of nations in resolutions calling for the appointment of two committees, one to work toward the appointment of an international body to settle marine disputes between nations of the western hemisphere, the other to strive toward the elimination of disputes that might conceivably lead to war.

John Barrett spoke at length on what he called, anti-American propaganda, which he said is being spread in South America. He also attacked Soviet Russia.

S. B. Gundy, of the Toronto board of trade, called attention to the fact that his appearance signified the first participation of Canada in any Pan-American congress, and expressed the hope that it signalized drifting away from British financial rule, to that of Wall Street.

Millionaire's Son Goes Back to Prison for "Breaking" Parole

CHESTER, Ill., Dec. 20 — Ira D. Perry, Jr., Chicago millionaire's son, once more is behind the bars of a state prison after a week or so in the limelight as the central figure in a sensational parole release.

He was turned back to the parole board on a technical charge of breaking his parole, the "easy-way-out-of-it" plan adopted to end the "hullabaloo" over the release.

Mussolini Will Go Under Surgeon's Knife

PARIS, Dec. 20—Premier Mussolini, the dictator of Italy, threatened by the possibility of an internal hemorrhage, is planning to go on the operating table next month, it was reported here.

Conferences were in progress among fascist leaders, advices said, to decide how to govern Italy during the operation and convalescence of the premier.

STRIKE DEMONSTRATION IN SHANGHAI ENDS IN ARREST OF STUDENTS

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 20.—Fifteen students, including one girl, have been arrested here for leading a demonstration against a police station and distributing propaganda in the international settlement demanding the release of eighteen strike agitators who were remanded by the mixed court following disturbances in the British and Japanese cotton mills.

The industrial situation is similar to that which existed at the time of the riot last May, except that so far there has been no shooting. It is, however, regarded as grave by the capitalists, owing to the organization of a general labor union by the Chinese workers.

LENIN FUNERAL FILM WILL BE SHOWN IN U. S.

International Workers' Aid Imports Movie

The International Workers' Aid, 1553 W. Madison St., Chicago, has just received from Soviet Russia the "Lenin Funeral Film." This film is being prepared so that it will be ready for use with the Lenin memorial meetings to be held by the Workers (Communist) Party, and reservations can be made now. Due to the fact that there will be only two copies—first come, first served, will be the procedure.

This is the most complete Lenin funeral film to arrive in this country. Some of the capitalist movie concerns managed to get flashes of the funeral parades, but they were not able to get the impressive ceremonies held inside the Hall of Unions, nor the death watches kept by the "Old Guard," nor any of the many other intimate touches that made that funeral one of the greatest manifestations of spontaneous love and respect.

No Lenin memorial meeting should be held without it.

England Continues Dumping Unemployed Into New Zealand

WELLINGTON, Zealand, Dec. 20.—Immigrants are being rushed to New Zealand from Britain despite the fact that there is no work for them on arrival. It is all with the greatest difficulty that they are able to get even housing accommodation or shelter of any kind, owing to the scarcity of houses. The result is that many of them are homeless and starving. A big number of immigrants are offering themselves as "scabs" for employment on the British trains laid up in New Zealand because of the strike—hoping thereby to get back to Britain.

3.6 Pct. Chicago School Tots Have Ear Diseases

There are 14,400 Chicago children who have ear disease and 1,000 are sufficiently deaf to need instruction in lip reading, if conditions found in 6 Chicago schools hold good in the city as a whole. 7,538 children were examined, and of this number 3.6% were suffering from ear disease in some form.

One Killed, Three Hurt in Chemical Explosion

One man is dying, three others are less seriously injured and one small building of the Commercial Acetylene Supply company, southwest of the city, is in ruins as the result of an explosion of chemicals.

JAPAN SEIZES MUKDEN WHILE POWERS SLEEP

Violation of Treaties Is Ignored

PEKING, Dec. 20—Japanese troops are holding Mukden, capital of Manchuria, shutting out Chang Tso-lin as well as his enemy, Kuo Sung-ling. Chang is deeply indignant at being shut out of "his own" capital, especially by the Japanese for whom he has held the territory and etxended his power in olden days. But the Japanese have, as all imperialists, no politeness for a defeated general.

The railway guards outside of Mukden are preventing either army from crossing the zone of the Manchurian line, twelve miles across, and hostilities are confined to telegraphic messages between sub-commanders.

It is an open secret that the imperialist powers are shutting their eyes to the invasion of Manchuria by Japan with thousands of troops from both Korea and Japan. Japan is also supporting Li Ching-lin, governor of Chihli, who is opposing Feng Yu-hsiang. All a violation of the supposedly sacred Washington treaties.

Because of the civil war, the opening session of the nine power imperialist hearing on extra-territoriality has been postponed, the British delegate, Skinner Turner, who is a member of the institution known as the "British Supreme Court for China," being stranded at Tientsin, eighty miles south of Peking with a war going on between him and the conference.

Doctor Discovers Serum to Combat Poison Mushrooms

PARIS, Dec. 20. — Innoculation against poisoning by toadstools is now possible. Dr. Dujarric de la Riviere has reported to the academy of medicine that he has discovered a serum which immunizes against illness from eating poisonous growths, supposed to be mushrooms. The serum is taken from horses suffering from the poison.

"Wrongfully Informed"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Col. William Mitchell replied to ex-Secretary of War Weeks, who recommended to President Coolidge that the flying colonel be not reappointed as assistant chief of army air service because he had given "misleading" testimony to congressional aircraft committee. Mitchell declared that "Weeks and President Coolidge were wrongly and untruthfully informed about the condition of our aviation and national defense by persons who furnished data on which Weeks' letter was based."

Jobs For Mates.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—Wanted, second and third mates, says Captain John F. Milliken, secretary, Neptune Association of Masters, Mates and Pilots—the deck officers' union. Milliken says the shortage is due to the enormous growth of intercoastal tonnage, especially to the Florida coast. Till a few weeks ago the union's rooms were filled with officers looking for berths, now it is the other way about, the companies are looking for the men.

Rob Illinois Bank.

CENTRALIA, Ill., Dec. 20. — The state bank of Dix, 15 miles southeast of here, was robbed. Guards were placed about the bank as soon as the discovery was made pending arrival of bloodhounds to take the trail of the bandits. An estimation of the loss could not be given by officials until a complete check is made.

FENG YU-HSIANG SAYS HE HAS LI CHING-LIN'S ARMIES SURROUNDED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKIN, Dec. 20.—General Feng Yuh Siang now claims to have the forces of Li-Ching Lin surrounded on three sides in the vicinity of Tien Tsin, according to advices received here today. Little fighting is now in progress, due to the severity of the weather. Several hundred thousand troops are entrenched about Tien Tsin.

FORM FASCIST ORGANIZATIONS IN AUSTRALIA

Government Organizes Anti-Union Forces

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

SYDNEY, Australia—(FP)—Fascist organizations have been established thruout Australia. This has now been frankly admitted by the spokesmen of the organizations. That they are fashioned after the Italian model is shown by the statement of commander-in-chief Thatcher who says "we are impressed by the spirit which animates the spirit of the Fascisti in Italy." Mussolini said in Italy early in November that branches of the fascisti had been formed in Australia. Headquarters have been established at Sydney, Melbourne and Brisbane, and branches opened in all leading towns on the continent.

Tho the federal anti-labor government repudiates any connection between the fascisti and the anti-labor political parties, the formation of the fascisti coincides with a speech by prime minister Bruce that he favored a dictatorship to govern Australia.

Government Organize Fascists.

Official documents which the Labor press has secured from unimpeachable source disclose that the federal government has been busy organizing the fascists thruout Australia. The documents include secret orders to the fascist organization of the steps to be taken to restore law and order if the workers get out of hand. These orders read as follows:

"It is of extreme importance that under all circumstances coolness in judgement be used. On no account will a group or member of a group provoke an assault. The civil police, while assured of your support and assistance, must be regarded as the force to take the initiative.

"Group leaders will maintain the closest liaison with the civil police and render all assistance without usurping the usual powers and duties of the civil police."

Attack Union Members.

During the first week of November 750 Fascists marched on Cairns where there was a dispute between the waterside workers and the shipowners regarding the loading of cargoes. Claiming that the Communists had captured the unions, the fascists usurped the civil authority and armed with axes, knives, revolvers, and clubs they set upon several union officials and manhandled them.

The unionists rallied in force, issued an ultimatum to the fascists to quit the town at once, otherwise reprisals would follow. The fascists fled.

Liberal and Tory Papers Amalgamate to Fight Workers

LONDON—(FP)—The sharpening of the class lines in British politics is reflected in the numerous amalgamations of Liberal and Tory papers, to present a united front against labor. A similar lineup was witnessed in the last municipal elections, when Liberals and Tories united generally against Labor. Localities in which newspaper amalgamations have recently taken place include Bath, Plymouth, Torquay and Southampton.

BRITISH LICK THEIR CHOPS OVER OIL GRAB

Baldwin Reports Irak Decision to House

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, yesterday read the text of the decision of the league of nations council on the dispute with Turkey over the boundary of Irak, which decision gave the Mosul oil fields to Great Britain, to the British parliament.

Baldwin faced many questions which he begged to be postponed until after Colonial Minister Amery, who has been in Geneva, returns to London. This will be the early part of the week.

Enough to Get the Oil?

The prime minister said that the extension of the period of the mandate twenty-five years was, in his opinion, more than enough. He asserted that the mandate called for no certain financial or military assistance to Irak, only "advice and assistance." However, the number of questions show that a considerable opposition to the mandate is coming in parliament.

News is reported of a subsidy of $2,500,000 recently granted by Great Britain to Ibn Saud, head of the Wahabi tribesmen who has conquered almost all of the old Arabian kingdom for England. His last opponent, Ali, king of Hedjaz, has been holding out at Jeddah, a corner of the Hedjaz kingdom, and it is understood that Ibn Saud is to use some of the $2,500,000 to buy off Ali to quit his claim.

All Pleased But the Arabs.

Ibn Saud will take the difference between the two sums, Ali will get a fortune out of a slim chance, Britain will get the resources of a great area which stretches from the Persian gulf and the Mesopotamian border to the Red Sea and the Tran-Jordanian and Syrian boundaries. So everybody will be happy, except a few million Arabs who may object at having the land sold out from under them.

The Turkish delegates who got thumbs down at Geneva on the Irak dispute, have returned to Angora to report to the Turkish assembly. The Turkish cabinet is already called into session by Mustapha Kemal Pasha.

Four Convicted in Alcohol Conspiracy Case, Get "Vacations"

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 20.—H. F. Schaller, wealthy Des Moines hotel owner, W. J. Ballance, Jr., manufacturer of Peoria, Ill., John McKiernan, member of the Peoria schol board and M. E. Levy, and Hyman Lipkin also of Peoria, convicted in the Peoria-Des Moines alcohol conspiracy case, boarded a train and were off to Fort Leavenworth prison to begin their vacations of sixteen months each.

Executive clemency is being sought at Washington with Senator W. B. McKinley of Illinois pleading their "cause."

Bread and Tea Is Standard Meal for British Farm Hand

LONDON—(FP)—Meals consisting only of bread and tea are shown to be all too frequent—not only in the slums but in the rural districts of England, according to an official report of the chief medical officer of the British board of health, Sir George Newman, on The Health of the Child. To be a farmer's boy, at least in song and poetry, always seemed to suggest that even if you had hard work, at least you had plenty of wholesome food to eat, but this myth, at least in England, has been effectively disposed of by the report.

In the agricultural districts of the West Riding of Yorkshire 80% of the children are reported to have poor physique, and in Merionethshire, another agricultural district, 47% are reported below normal. Doctors and teachers from rural districts, who contribute to the report, agree that it is poor home conditions and bad feeding, due to low wages, that are responsible for the low physique of many British country children.

Agricultural laborers in Britain average about $8 a week, and out of this they must pay rent, feed themselves and families and meet all other living expenses.

Tammany Politician Flirts with Child Labor Law in House

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Rep. Griffin of New York, Tammany Democrat, has introduced in the house a resolution proposing a compromise child labor amendment to the federal constitution. It would forbid the employment of children under 16 years of age in mines, quarries, mills, factories and other organized industrial plants, but would not interfere with their employment in farming or domestic service.

Fascist Dictatorship Kills 3 Labor Dailies

MILAN, Italy—(FP)—Recent fascist blows against Italian labor include the complete suppression of the three working class dailies, Avanti, Giustizia and Unita, which had continued a somewhat precarious existence in between confiscations and raids, and the turning over to the fascist corporations of the labor temples at Milan and Rome, as well as numerous trade union headquarters. The labor templo at Genoa has been dissolved by prefectorial decree.

Fascist oppression is also responsible for the recent dissolution of the Postal Workers union of Italy.

Carpenters Demand Bread Trust Probe

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Resolutions denouncing the newly formed bread trust and demanding immediate investigation by congress, were sent to Sen. Copeland by the New York State conference of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, and were read to the senate. Upon request of Sen. McNary of Oregon they were later referred to the committee on agriculture.

NEED UNITY OF WORLD LABOR TO WAR ON BOSSES

Wake Up America! Cry British Unionists

this whilst nearly all the British unions are connected with the Amsterdam International. An important meeting was held yesterday in London between delegates of the International Federation of Trade Unions, with headquarters at Amsterdam and the General Council of the British Trade Union Congress, when questions vital to the uniting of the world's industrial forces were discussed. A report of this discussion and decisions will be dealt with by the General Council of the International Federation of Trade Union at Amsterdam and it is hoped the result will be to decide in favor of a special world's congress at which the Russian unions will be present as well as the unions of all other countries. Without a world wide industrial international, we cannot hope to achieve our economic freedom.

Imprisoned Communists.

A vigorous discussion in parliament took place when Ramsey MacDonald attacked the government for instituting the prosecutions of the Communists and for the savage sentences imposed on them. Naturally MacDonald was very careful to dissociate himself and colleagues from any endorsement of Communism both as regards principle and methods. MacDonald's motion was rejected by 351 votes to 127, a majority of 224. Many demonstrations are being held in various parts of the country demanding the release of the twelve.

Hurry up America.

The United States is the land of hustle, in very many ways it is the pace-setting country. On this side we very much wish the American trade unionists would set the pace also in their endeavors to establish a real world wide workers' industrial international. The information we get about the anthracite coal strike in the United States is pitifully inadequate and makes it more difficult to secure class loyalty than would be the case if full and up-to-date information was obtainable.

Mining Commission Investigation.

The mining commission of investigation is dragging along but proceedings were enlivened yesterday when a Mr. Markman was giving evidence as a coal owner, and showed his teeth more than is generally done. He admitted off-handedly that his own income was well over five thousand pounds a year as a director, and severely censured the miners and their families for spending extravagantly by going to the movies. Speed the day when real workers' control of industry shall be a fact thruout civilization.

Two Transport Workers Held for Deportation

They are Jim Bryson, to be deported to Scotland, and David H. Drummond, to be sent to Canada. Both charges are part of a federal campaign against the I. W. W. arising from the international marine workers strike.

The Moscow Academy of Sciences Celebrates Its 200th Anniversary

scientists that had come to Moscow from many foreign lands to participate in the bicentenary celebration. After a few introductory remarks he introduced the Soviet representative, M. I. Kalinin.

"While recognizing the magnitude of the scientific work of the academy in the past," began Kalinin, "we nevertheless must observe that our contribution to world science has been rather modest as compared with that of western Europe. This is historically quite understandable. Russia had entered into scientific intercourse with western Europe at a relatively late period, and besides, while science in western Europe catered to the ruling classes, in czarist Russia it meant catering to czarism. In saying this I do not consider the attempts of individual scientists to devote themselves entirely to science for science's sake.

"The Academy of Sciences has now obtained the widest possibility of contact with the masses of the people, which will yield a steady supply of new forces for the development of science. And it seems to me that the slogan of the academy ought to be: 'Science for the masses, for laboring mankind.'

"The worth of any new idea is measured by the extent to which it may be preserved for posterity, and to which it has been understood and utilized by the masses for their benefit. Our Academy of Sciences from now on belongs to the whole Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and it should concentrate in itself the creative efforts of all the peoples inhabiting our union. I doubt not that the Academy of Sciences of Union of Socialist Soviet Republics will occupy the place it deserves in the building of the new society which will ensure the real brotherhood of nations."

Kalinin then read the following declaration on behalf of the central executive committee and the council of peoples' commissaries of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, which is given here in full:

"To the Academy of Sciences. The central executive committee and the council of people's commissaries of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics tender greetings to the Russian Academy of Sciences on the day of its bicentenary.

"While viewing with profoundest satisfaction the tremendous achievements of the Academy of Sciences which, in some branches, have placed it in the front ranks of the world's scientific institutions, the government of the union deems it necessary on this momentous occasion to indicate both the new conditions for the development of the further activities of the academy and the new tasks with which it now becomes confronted.

"The October revolution has resolutely and forever removed those social relations which were bound to place their stamp upon the nature of scientific activity, restricting its development and diverting it from the straight path of active assistance to human progress. A social order, based on private property, on the exploitation of the majority of the population by a feudal and capitalist minority, and on national oppression, leading to inevitable catastrophes of armed conflicts, retards and distorts the development of scientific thot, retards the process of the human conquest over the forces of nature, and consequently, the general process of the development of the human race.

"The October revolution, having removed the aforesaid obstacles by the heroic efforts of the most oppressed class, the proletariat, has thereby opened a new era in the history of mankind which should consist of a radical reorganization of human relations on the basis of collective and conscious control of the economic system by the whole of society, in which class divisions shall have been abolished. But this great historic task, whose achievement will mean the real victory of humanity over the blind forces of nature, cannot be accomplished without the broad and profound development of science in all its branches. It is for this very reason that the socialist society, more than any other social order, is primarily in need of the broad development of both the abstract and the practical scientific disciplines, and it therefore, takes priority in offering to scientific thot and activity the conditions of genuine liberty and fruitful intercourse with the widest masses of the people. Only under these new social conditions will science finally shake off the old shackles which doomed it to be the hand-maiden of theology and of the worst superstitions of the ruling class.

"This was foreseen and duly appreciated by the great theoretician and organizer of the new social relations —Vladimir Ilyitch Lenin— and this appreciation of the great role of scientific thot, scientific investigation and scientific deduction constitutes the basis of the practical policies of the Soviet commonwealth.

"In the trying years which followed the October revolution, when the Soviet authorities were compelled to take up arms to defnd the very existence of the state, the Soviet government was unable to extend the full assistance and aid it desired to do in regard to scientific work, and to ensure to scientific workers the living conditions necessary for fruitful activity. At the present time, under the conditions of the rapid growth of the Soviet commonwealth, and the consolidation of its material basis both within and without the territory of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, it is one of the primary aims of the government of the union to secure the conditions for the wide organization of scientific activity in the union, for the wide dissemination of scientific knowledge among millions of toilers who have been aroused to historic life, and also for affording the opportunities of scientific activity to the tens of nationalities which, after long years of oppression, have now obtained for the first time, under the conditions of Soviet rule, the facilities of wide cultural and economic development.

"Science is international by its very nature, and it tolerates no national restrictions. The only way for science to make headway is by the generalization of the scientific activity of all nations, and by constant and uninterrupted international intercourse.

"The government of the union, therefore, while greeting the representatives of science who have come to take part in the festival of the Academy of Sciences, will be prepared, on its part, to support all the steps directed towards the unhindered and wide international intercourse among scientific workers.

"Fully confident that the Academy of Sciences in its third century, under the conditions of the new social relations, will be able to develop the full force and scope of its scientific activity, and to attain new scientific achievements, the central executive committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has resolved to recognize the Russian Academy of Sciences as the supreme all-union scientific body, attached to the council of people's commissaries, and to bestow upon it the title of the Academy of Sciences of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

"Signed: M. Kalinin, chairman of the Central Executive Committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics; L. Kamenev, vice-chairman of the Council of People's Commissaries of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics; A. Yenukidze, secretary of the Central Executive Committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics."

The Basis for Communist Unity

By JAY LOVESTONE.

THERE can be no unity without a common political basis. Unity based on any other foundation is short-lived and very dangerous. Unity based on secret, private "understandings" between leaders on the top is a menace to the welfare of the party. Such unity is illusory. Such unity is phantom unity. It is no unity. It is a snare and a delusion. When there are sharp differences of political principle the writer prefers a sharp and energetic political fight to settle the issues rather than mechanical, formal unification.

A Common Political Platform.

AFTER the last party convention and the decision of the Communist International cabled to the convention the party reached the stage where it had a common political platform—a Communist political platform—for all elements which are consciously and sincerely for the Comintern. This Communist platform is today sincerely accepted and fundamentally understood by a great majority of the membership of our party. More than that; in its most complete sense—involving the basic policies of the party—this platform is now consciously endorsed by most of the very sections of the party which formerly fought each other vigorously and at times even with impermissible means.

No doubt our recent controversy has brot quite some damage to our party. But on the whole it has had a beneficial effect on the development of our party. The last factional strife was a very painful, a costly, but a historically necessary cleansing process for our party. The last factional fight was a stage in the process of the growth, in the process of the Bolshevization of our party.

The duration and intensity of the struggle, the character of the issues at stake, the considerable and close attention the American question received from the Comintern in the period of April 1924, to September, 1925 are only proof of the fact that the last factional fight grew out of serious, fundamental differences. If it were not for this struggle and the help of the Comintern, we would not yet have had the correct policies we have today. Above all, we would not have grasped, we would not yet have accepted thru understanding to the extent the membership does now the line of action we fight for today.

Concretely, genuine, organic unity is possible today for the following specific reasons.

1. The Expulsion of Lore.

THE expulsion of Lore—who has shown himself to be an out and out anti-Communist thru his attacks on the Comintern and the party since the convention—has made it very difficult, if not impossible, for the extreme right wing elements in our party to support one group as against another group, to occupy the pivotal point in party disputes and thus to play a role of decisive character in the party.

It is true the party has not yet rid itself completely of the Loreist elements. But we have already thrown out Lore, the most conscious ideological leader, and a big enuf portion of his opportunist following to enable a greatly increased number of our members to see the acute danger of opportunism to our party. This cleansing, this riddance of extraneous elements, non-Communist elements, from our body-politic brings closer together the Communists in our ranks who may have had differences in the recent past. Our whole system has gained much thru the loss of Lore and his satellites.

2. Reorganization—A Bolshevik Sieve.

THE vigorous reorganization campaign which the party has waged since the convention has proven to be another potent factor for the unification of the Communist elements in our party. The reorganization process serves as a sort of a sieve for our membership. On the whole, those who remain in our party after reorganization have a wholesome point of view, have a desire to be Communists and to follow the line of the Comintern in all its implications. Likewise, it can be stated that on the whole those who will leave the party as a result of the reorganization campaign are either not the best material for a Communist party or are unwilling to try to become Communists in fact as well as in fancy.

Thus, the reorganization of our party promotes the ideological homogeneity and consequently the organizational unification of our membership.

3. Greater Political Clarity.

THRU our long discussion and with the considerable help of the Communist International the party has been able to clarify for itself many fundamental questions. We need but cite the labor party problem. The labor party issue is not a temporary, passing issue for the American working class. Therefore, it is a major issue, a fundamental problem for our party. Who is there today in our ranks who can deny that the party is now in a position to avoid errors from the left as well as from the right in the labor party campaigns which we will yet wage before we see the American working class succeed in establishing a mass labor party, in declaring its political independence from the bourgeoisie? It is clear that, at least for some time to come, the labor party question will not prove a source of dispute in our ranks. With the realization of a common political viewpoint in its fundamental aspects towards so basic a problem as the labor party, our leadership and membership are certainly much more firmly welded ideologically.

4. The Role of the Party.

Our membership now has a far better understanding of the role of the party as the leader of the working class army. Our membership today realizes with considerably greater clarity the menace of the theory of mass spontaneity, the dangers of the party bowing before the moods, sentiments and reactions of the masses. We now appreciate more sufficiently the need for the party's taking into consideration as objective factors the moods, sentiments and reactions of the masses while at the same time fulfilling the role of directing, guiding and turning these attitudes of the proletariat into revolutionary channels.

In short, today most of the party leadership understands better the tactics and strategy of keeping closer to the masses without at the same time allowing ourselves to give up our position of pointing out in advance to these masses the course of economic and political development. We now know better how to lead the masses, how to be in advance of the masses politically without at the same time losing contact with the army of the proletariat whose vanguard we must be.

Temporary downward trends of working class political developments do not today breed as much pessimism and passivity in our ranks as they did in November, 1924, after the presidential election. On the contrary, our leadership today, reflectng an advance in the political maturity of our membership, tends to consider such downward trends in the political development of the working class as added reasons for intensifying the party's activities to revolutionize the working class.

Here we have a basic element in the development of a correct, a homogeneous Communist political ideology in the ranks of all the layers of our membership. This fact is of paramount importance as a force for organic unity in our ranks.

5. A Correct Trade Union Policy.

In the main, except for a section of the former majority group, a large proportion of our membership and the decisive majority of our leadership is now headed towards a correct Communist policy on the trade union field—the field of activities which must receive our increasing and major attention. The dangerous misconception of the very purpose of Communist activity in the trade unions is rapidly losing ground in our party. The notion that the basic objective of our campaigns in the trade unions is to win offices in the labor unions is losing ground, at an accelerating pace, to the fundamental, correct Communist concept of winning over ideologically increasing sections of the organized proletariat.

Concurrently with the development of this understanding of the primary purpose of our trade union work we can also notice the fact that the tendency in our ranks to consider trade union work as a special art of a selected group of experts has been seriously undermined. The attitude that trade union work is the monopoly of a handful of particularly ordained comrades is only the reflex in our ranks of the craft concept which still permeates American trade unionism, of the commodity concept of labor unionism which still pervades American labor union officialdom.

6. Towards Stability of Leadership.

The unity declaration of the central executive committee has laid the basis for a far broader composition of party leadership than our party has yet had. The final leadership of our party, to the extent that one can speak of final leadership, is not yet definite. Leadership must be developed thru activity, thru tests in practice. Such leadership our party is now only crystallizing. The Comintern and the central executive committee's unity resolution only indicated the line of development of our leadership, but this indication in itself is a powerful agent for unifying our party ranks as well as the leading strata.

7. The Attitude to the Comintern.

Last, but not least, we find that the new attitude which the large majority of our party is developing towards the Communist International makes possible the genuine unification of our party on a correct political basis. The basic political line of demarcation dividing our members today is to be found in the attitude towards the Communist International. On the one hand, the decisive majority of our membership now, more and more, views the Communist International as a world party placing at the disposal of every one of its sections the composite lessons and experiences of all its sections—as the real leader of the entire international Communist movement. On the other hand, a decreasing section of our membership still takes an incorrect attitude towards the Comintern, views Comintern decisions thru social democratic spectacles. The experiences of the various parties with such fundamentally wrong estimates of the role of the Communist International show beyond question that this attitude, if maintained, logically leads away from the Communist International.

To a larger number of our members than ever before, acceptance of Comintern decisions now means execution in deed as well as adoption in words by means of a resolution. There can be no greater driving force for the unification of our membership than this new, correct orientation for many of our members in their attitude towards the Communist International.

The Need for Party Unity.

THE need for the unification of all Communist elements requires no emphasis. Specifically the factors pressing for the organic unity of the party are the following:

Unification—The Road to Reconstruction.

1. The party has been weakened considerably by the recent struggles over policy and leadership. The party cannot recover and advance unless unification of all the elements standing for the line of the Comintern proceeds at full speed.

2. Unless we secure unity without reservation of all those who hold the Comintern above everything else, we will not be able to break the isolation in which our party still finds itself. We will not be able to mobilize our full resources and energy for major mass activities, for activities by our members in the ranks of the non-Communist proletarians, unless we end the period of our party's life in which the center of attention of our members is found in the field of inner party controversy. The long period of factional strife has tended to develop an ingrown, a subjective, outlook in our ranks. We must turn our eyes toward the masses. No trade union campaign, no labor party campaign, no trade union unity campaign, in short, no campaign in which large numbers of non-Communist workers are to be stirred into motion, can be even attempted, let alone succeed, without the unification of our membership on the basis of unqualified active support of the Comintern's policies in every field.

3. Our party has, until the last convention, been for many months in a state of factional siege. We must restore Communist normalcy in our party. Democratic centralization will remain a hollow phrase unless all of the elements having a correct attitude towards the Communist International are unified, are working on a basis of equality. Consequently, the normalizing and democratizing of our party are a prerequisite to the success of our party's campaigns which require the full mobilization of our best forces. It is immediately necessary to uproot every vestige of the state of factional siege which may still be found in certain sections of our membership. More elements should and must be drawn into party work. New party workers must be developed if our party is to grow. We must develop an intense spirit of party work and party loyalty. It is absolutely necessary to have unity in order to achieve these essential results.

4. Without organic Communist unity in our ranks, reorganization of the party will prove a dismal failure. Reorganization is a deep-going, political change. He who has doubted this before the convention of our party need but look at the enemies of our party crystallizing their forces to a large extent against party reorganization.

The Danger From the Right.

5. The danger from the right necessitates the unification of all Communist elements. Lore and company are spending most of their time mobilizing against the Comintern and the party. Only the other day Lore joined hands with the reactionary Jewish Daily Forward crowd and the vilest opponents of our movement in his attack against the party for its attitude to the refusal of the left wing at the Furriers' convention to be hoodwinked by the black Kaufman clique and its fraudulent progressive allies. The enemies of the Comintern in the ranks of the Italian workers are marshalling their forces, as evidenced by the recent issuance of an Italian daily posing as a radical, fighting proletarian organ.

INSIDE our own party the right wing is also working overtime. Certain elements of our party are fighting feverishly against the creation of a centralized party apparatus and thorogoing party reorganization, at the same time some of these elements are taking the first step towards completely deserting the Comintern by protesting against "Moscow interference" in the American party. Under such circumstances it is no accident to find that these "anti-Moscow" elements are often rallying to the support of that section of the former majority following the leadership of Comrade Foster. These elements which do not have the correct attitude to the Comintern are, only temporarily, not putting all their cards on the table in the expectation of a reversal of the last Comintern decision.

The Economic and Political Situation.

6. The developing economic and political situation is a further pressing argument for the necessity of Communist unity. There are multiplying signs that the end of our present period of so-called prosperity is fast approaching. The building boom has seen its best days. American world trade supremacy is being challenged with ever-greater seriousness. A gigantic trade war is on and assuming larger proportions among the imperialist powers. Lower wages are in sight for our workers. The miners' union is now under heavy attack. The American Industries, official organ of the National Association of Manufacturers, for September, 1925, announces the preparation of a renewed and most intense open shop campaign. While the steel industry is at the height of prosperity for the bosses and steel prices are rising, wage cuts are taking place in the mills.

IT is clear that an attack on the Communists will be the first order of business on the program of the Wall Street clique. The Communists are the most advanced but also organizationally still one of the weak sections of the organized working class. An attack on the Communists serves only as a prelude to an attack against the whole working class camouflaged by the smoke screen of prejudice and misrepresentation. The unification and the strengthening of our party are imperative on the eve of such developments.

7. Finally, only unification of all the Communist forces will enable the party to measure up to its urgent tasks in the near future. Labor party sentiment is reviving. The spirit of resistance is increasing among the workers. The trade-union unity movement and the movement for an American trade union delegation to Soviet Russia are assuming important proportions. The only guarantee that the party can have for success in these campaigns is a rebuilt party, a unified party—on the basis of the line of the Comintern—with its roots sunk deeply in the proletarian masses found in the workshops.

GRAND RAPIDS HEARS WICKS ON LOCARNO

Shows Imperialists as They Are

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 20.—Before the largest audience that has attended a labor meeting in Grand Rapids in years, H. M. Wicks, editorial writer of The DAILY WORKER delivered his lecture on "Locarno" here today.

Reviewing the various pacts of Europe since the close of the world war he showed how the very conflict of interests between the victorious countries made them mere scraps of paper, until the conference of Locarno, which he showed was a desperate effort on the part of the imperialist powers to stabilize Europe and revive the sinking currency.

He particularly emphasized the role of the government of the United States as the agent of the House of Morgan and explained how the pressure of this government as the money monopolist of the world brought pressure on the European nations forcing them desperately to strive to set their houses in order so that further loans from Wall street could be secured. Since imperialism desires to crush the workers' government in Russia, the Locarno conference took the form of an attempted alignment against the Soviet Union.

Explains Syria and Turkey.

In a masterful manner he explained the events following Locarno, which proved the stupid pacifist rejoicing over the dawn of an era of peace to be myth.

Many in the audience had read Wicks' articles and editorials on world politics, but in an hour and a half they obtained a picture of the great conflict of economic and political forces that would take them weeks to receive thru reading.

The speaker's conclusion, showing the developing power of the working class in the big capitalist countries and the colonial countries was a picture of a world-wide movement that will never be forgotten by those who heard it.

The place of the Communist International and the various Communist parties of the world in relation to the great events now transpiring was portrayed so that it seemed indispensable to the working class.

1,000 Parents for School Strike Move

Y. W. L. AND WOMEN'S COUNCIL IN LEAD

Protest Transferring Children

NEW YORK CITY—At a meeting of the parents of children in public school 148 presided over by Clarence Miller the following resolution was adopted unanimously: "Whereas a situation has developed in P. S. 148, Brooklyn, which is arousing the active and just resentment of the parents of the neighborhood and P. S. 148 is to be transformed into a junior high school and the pupils in lower grades are to be transferred to other schools, and

"Whereas, this mechanical transfer may appear on paper as a simple and reasonable affair, but in actual fact it is an outrage against the welfare of the transferred children, forcing them to travel unreasonable distances, in some cases about 16 blocks, and cut across traffic in order to reach the schools to which they have been assigned and thereby endangering their lives, and

"Whereas, we recognize that this will effect mostly working class parents who form the majority of the residents in this section who are already overburdened with hardships in their struggle for a living.

1,000 Parents Speak Up.

"We, 1,000 residents of Brooklyn, mostly parents of the children concerned gathered at a protest meeting December 8 at Amalgamated Temple, therefore "Resolve, to protest against the action of the board of education and call upon all organizations and individuals interested to join with us in this protest and help us in our endeavor to keep the children in P. S. 148."

Y. W. L. in Leadership.

The chairman, a member of the Young Workers (Communist) League, is opening the meeting pointed out the general conditions prevailing in the schools in the working class sections and how six children were killed crossing one of the streets in the neighborhood, Broadway, and called upon the mothers to stand together and fight for the lives of their children.

A RUSSIAN KOMSOMOL

Women's Council Supports Move.

Kate Gitlow, representing the women's council in the neighborhood then addressed the meeting in the name of her organization promising their just demands. This was greeted with great applause.

Outline for Campaign.

A collection was taken up in order to cover the expenses of the campaign. The following outline for the campaign was proposed: To picket P. S. 148, the board of education and the mayor. A petition is to be gotten up protesting against this action of the board of education. Appeals are to be sent to organizations for support and then if the decision is not withdrawn a general school strike will be called.

Mrs. Zlott and Mrs. Kaplan, two mothers most responsible for organizing the mothers, also spoke expressing the sentiments of the audience. There were about ten speakers in all from the floor.

COLLEGE PRESIDENT LEARNS TRAGIC TRUTH THAT WORKERS CAN THINK

In a speech at Amherst some time ago, President Hopkins of Dartmouth University told how he discovered that workers without a college education had a wider knowledge of social theories than many of the rah-rah boys. The New Student writes of this incident as follows:

"President Hopkins called this a tragic circumstance, 'in which thousands of the youth who had not gone to college had, thru fuller knowledge of various contentions and longer consideration of these, acquired a lead which made the college men, who ought to have been their intellectual peers, actually inferior and weak when it comes to a discussion of these questions. The college men, just out of the various institutions of learning, had no knowledge of arguments and social theories on which thousands of these boys and young men had whetted their minds for years.'"

Workers Write About the Workers' Life

MESSINGER MEN KEPT DIVIDED BY DISCRIMINATIONS

Co. Magazine Mum on Workers' Conditions

By RUFUS P. HEATH.
(Worker Correspondent)

A recent issue of the Monthly Messenger, the magazine issued by the Messinger Lunch Rooms' company, tells of the decorative and artistic atmosphere of its lunch rooms, the courtesy of its employes, the low cost of food. Not a word is mentioned of the twelve-hour day or the low wages paid to workers. The outstanding purpose of this issue seems to be to boost their new house at 3 West Grand Ave., calling it a palace of art, etc.

The company knows how to boost its own business. It stops at nothing to get the public's interest, to arouse people to take favorable notice of them. But what do the employes of Messinger lunch rooms do to tell the people about the conditions under which they work. Do they ever try to show up these lies? Do they ever bring to the attention of other workers facts concerning the miserable conditions of work they have to put up with while in the employ of this company?

How Unions Are Kept Out.

Now I will tell you fellow workers something about the new house that the Monthly Messenger failed to mention and incidentally about the working conditions in all Messinger lunch rooms.

The manager of the new house is a notorious slave driver by the name of C. B. Emery. It is impossible to do enough work for him. The more you do the more he wants you to do. To keep the workers divided he conducts a systematic campaign of discriminations, treating the workers on some jobs better than those on others, thus creating an aristocracy of jobs. This division is plainly seen in his treatment of the porters and dishwashers. He submits them to all manner of humiliations while he plays trivial favoritisms to the cooks and countermen. The porters and dishwashers must eat their meals in the cold concrete basement while the cooks and countermen are permitted to eat out in the dining room. The colored workers he treats worse than the white workers. This is one of the most successful methods of keeping workers from organizing into a union and that is the purpose behind it.

As I stated in a previous article the wages in Messinger's range from $14.00 to $22.00 a week. The day crew works ten hours daily, six and a half days a week, while the night crew works twelve hours daily, seven days a week for the same pay.

Simple Thing to Get New Workers.

The least little thing is cause for a worker to loose his job. And why not? There are several thousand unemployed workers in the food industry in Chicago. At the present time it is easy enuf to get new workers. The only remedy for these conditions is for the food workers to form an industrial union in the city and take up the fight for the eight-hour day. Organized into a union the Messinger lunch room food workers could do much to improve their standard of living, lower their working hours, raise their wages, do away with artificial discriminations, and all the evils that are keeping the food workers in the position of the most badly treated and enslaved workers.

WESTERN ELECTRIC EMPLOYE TELLS OF SPY SYSTEM AT CHICAGO PLANT

By WM. MASON, a Worker Correspondent.

For a number of months I've been reading your excellent paper, and I must say it is the clearest paper expressing the vital problems of the workers that I have ever read.

The Worker Correspondents' page is truly inspiring and gives substantial proof of two things, i. e., that there is much latent ability in the working class and that you are destined to develop that ability.

Speed System Defined.

It is not to sing your praises, however, that I now undertake to write, but to give the readers of The DAILY WORKER an insight into the working conditions in the Western Electric company plant on the southwest side of Chicago.

The Hawthorne works, as this plant is called, is 100 per cent an open shop. I have worked in various departments of this plant. The same specialized system prevails in all departments which compels each employe to produce a specified amount in the eight and three-fourths-hour day. The speed-up system is in force and the less efficient slaves are weeded out—except in the so-called "good times" when they are transferred to different departments. Very little mechanical skill is required since, as I stated above, the work is specialized.

As is to be expected, the spy system is in force. The lockers are mysteriously searched in some departments and if anyone is caught reading anything except the reptile press, sensational novels or religious literature, some subterfuge is found to discharge him.

When hired, one has to fill out a long application blank, give four city references and undergo a physical examination. After the examination, if accepted, he is handed a little booklet and a pass and told to report next morning.

Pension—A Form of Exploitation.

The booklet contains the company's rules and an explanation of the pension system, one of their methods to keep workers enslaved. Clauses stating that the company reserves the right to abrogate said pension at any and all times are prominently displayed.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about this institution is its system of publicity with which it poisons the minds of its slaves. It publishes a weekly paper, the "Hawthorne Microphone" and a monthly magazine, "The Western Electric News" besides a host of leaflets announcing its social activities consisting of baseball clubs, basket ball teams, bobbed hair contests, etc., all saturated with ruling class ideas. To back all this up this huge combination has its hosts of stool pigeons and uniformed police.

After working here for a while one can fully appreciate what Lenin meant when he said "The bourgeois countries are being turned into huge military prisons for the workers."

I would suggest systematic distribution of leaflets exposing this despotism and urging organization by workers who are not employed at the plant. This can be done on the streets when the employes go home at night. On the inside, a few intelligent workers can carry on a skillful agitation for organization but they cannot distribute leaflets.

Los Angeles Central Labor Council Turns Down World Court Idea

By R. BELLIT.
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20.—At its last meeting the Los Angeles Central Labor Council turned down the invitation of the chamber of commerce to participate in a conference in behalf of the world court. The secretary of the council made a motion that the executive should go there to investigate the conference, but one of the delegates made a motion to table the entire matter. After a lengthy discussion the council gave the chamber of commerce a cold shoulder on this proposition as it did when an invitation to participate in a preparedness parade on Labor Day was extended by the chamber of commerce.

Progressives Urge Organization Drive in Pittsburgh Area

By A Worker Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 20—Following the report of the committee to arrange the showing of the movie film "Labor's Reward," Progressive Delegate Otis took the floor and demanded that the showing of the picture be made the beginning of a drive for membership in the steel center here.

Organize Industrially.

He pointed out that in this organization campaign we must not leave it to each separate craft to attempt organization, but that it should be done on the basis of organizing the entire industry into an industrial union.

Following Otis, another left wing delegate took the floor and pointed out that in his trade—the bakery trade—there is one branch of the industry that is completely unorganized—that is the confectionery workers. He then told of how a delegation of young workers had come to him and asked for assistance and he had helped them to start an organization in Pittsburgh and that the workers want to join unions and will join if a drive is made at organization.

For Amusement.

The stand-patters declared that a picture is for the purpose of entertaining and amusing the looker-on and not to be used as a means of organizing the workers.

Wake-Up!

Many of the so-called progressives that attend these meetings don't say a word and think that all the Central Labor Union members have to do is listen to a lot of letters and as soon as they are read, to go home and forget that organization work must be done.

Lack of Organization Brings Many Insults to Boston Jewelry Workers

By SAUL WHITE,
Worker Correspondent.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 20.—The impudence of bosses in taking advantage of unorganized workers was clearly demonstrated recently in a jewelry manufacturing shop here. The boss did not like a piece of work produced by one of the workers and he told him to make a new one on his own time, a thing unheard of in the the trade.

The boss knew from past experience that when a man has to choose between losing his job and swallowing humiliation he is more likely than not to choose the latter. Especially when he has a family to support.

This worker happened to be a man of principle and independence so he picked up the challenge. He quit and demanded his wages. The firm refused to let him have his money. He decided to demand his rights.

He took a chance in the capitalist courts. The trial came on and the miracle happened. The worker collected his wages.

The need for organization is growing as the appetite of the bosses for greater profits becomes more and more pronounced. Some workers do not realize this fact until they get hit mighty hard by the economic club. This same thing will happen again, perhaps to another worker who will not be in a position to put up an individual fight.

Wrap your lunch in a copy of the DAILY WORKER and give it (the DAILY WORKER, not the lunch) to your shop-mate.

UNITED FRONT TO FIGHT BOSSES IS NEED OF CANADA

Canadian Labor Defense Calls for Unity

TORONTO, Ontario, Dec. 20.—The Canadian Defense Labor League which is defending the 24 Drumheller coal miners, who are now on trial before Canadian class justice, has sent out the following appeal calling for a united front of all labor organizations to combat the attempt of the capitalist powers to deny the right of strikers to peaceably picket:

Five workers have been sentenced to imprisonment for one year and a boy of fifteen has received a suspended sentence of six months.

The crime they were charged with was "unlawful assembly."

The truth of the matter is they were "pickets." The "right to picket" has been established by law. Organized labor has suffered much for this right.

Under pretexts of one kind or another, employers and courts use other names for this right.

The imprisonment of these five workers is a challenge to the entire trade union movement. It is the challenge of destruction.

The right of picketing must be maintained as an "international right." It is bound up with the "right to live." Workers who picket must be protected against misinterpretation.

It is the duty of organized labor to protest vigorously against the imprisonment of the four men and one woman who are to be deprived of their liberty for one year because they were "pickets." These workers who struggled to maintain a decent living wage must be supported.

The Canadian Labor Defense League urges a united labor front for the protection, support and defense of our fighters.

You are urged to build up your Labor Defense branches. Bring your local unions into activities.

Help the workers who have helped the labor movement to maintain its wage standard.

Help the families of the men who have gone to prison for the right of the workers to live.

Issued by the Executive Committee Canadian Labor Defense League.

John Young, Chairman, Florence Custance, Secretary.

Nine Millionaire Cops Will "Retire"

NEW YORK—(FP)—Dec. 20.—Nine millionaire honorary police commissioners of New York and eight special deputy commissioners are going "off the cops" with the first of the year on the retirement of Commissioner Enright who appointed them. But while they wore their badges the rich special deputies had offices at headquarters and considerable to say in the running of the job: and the honorary commissioners swanked at polite parades and broke what speed laws they chose with the magic aid of the Police Department signs on their cars.

Here is the list of police aristocrats—you will spot some open shop magnates if you look closely and perhaps guess the side policemen's clubs would swing for during disputes between labor and the employers:

Honorary Commissioners: John F. Birmingham, pres. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal Co.—now fighting the anthracite workers: Matthew Scott Sloan, president, Brooklyn Edison Co.; William A. Todd, shipbuilder; Herman A. Metz, chemical manufacturer: R. A. C. Smith, steamship manufacturer; George A. MacDonald, officer and director of many public utilities' companies; Daniel B. Freedman, real estate magnate; Edward Sykes, broker; Walter Scott, merchant.

Now come the financial blue bloods on the list of special deputy commissioners: Rodman Wanamaker, multi-millionaire department store owner is in charge of police reserves: T. Coleman duPont of the huge duPont interests, and also a United States senator from Delaware, is supervisor of the New York police hospital: Edward A. Guggenheim, metal mine baron, is director of the pension fund; Barron G. Collier, of the bureau of safety; Dr. John A. Harris, in charge of traffic: John M. Sgaw, supervisor of Richmond; Dr. Carlton Simon, head of the narcotic bureau and Henry Fragauf completes the list.

French Airplanes in Syria Drop Dynamite on Druse Villages

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JERUSALEM, Dec. 20.—French airplane squadrons have started a campaign of aerial bombardment of the Druse strongholds near the Palestine borders. No attention is being given to whether bombs fall on women and children or armed men, in fact, a well-placed bomb in a village full of women and children earns the aviator a croix de querre.

MONTANA WORKER FARMERS FORMING LOCAL COUNCILS

Demand for Political Weapon Spreads

PLENTYWOOD, Mont., Dec. 20.—William Bouck, militant leader of the working farmers of the northwest, has organized a number of local councils in Montana of the Progressive Farmers. Following his meetings in Plentywood, Outlook, Dagmar, Dooley, Quitmeyer, Reserve, Homestead, and other farming communities, local councils were formed of the working farmers, who are enthusiastic for creating a new political party in this country to represent workers and farmers.

The local councils that are now being formed are to organise district councils, the district councils will in turn organise county councils, which will in turn organise state councils.

Working Farmers' Organization.

The organisation is pledge-bound, its business is to be kept in secrecy and it will admit only working farmers. Bankers and large landholders will be able to enter this organisation as easily as a camel can pass thru the eye of a ten-cent store needle.

William Bouck in an address at the Farmer-Labor Temple traced the history of farmers' movements and pointed out the insufficiency of many of the present organizations and urged the farmers to organise a new political weapon which they will be able to wield in conjunction with the workers in the towns and cities.

Gives History of Movement.

"Many farmers' organizations have come, had their day and passed away," declared Bouck.

"The old Grange was probably the first farmers' organization of any strength in the country—organised first as a co-operative and political expression of the farmers, it grew until in 1872 in Iowa it formed a political party and nearly captured the state. Soon, thereafter, the national Grange met and passed a law that hereafter no Grange or Granger as a Granger should enter politics. That killed the interest in the Grange.

The Farmers' Union.

"Then later came the Farmers' Union and several others whose history is more or less a copy of the Grange. Along about 1880-85 the farmers of the west organised a virile semi-political movement called the Farmers' Alliance which was afterward merged into the populist party. This party carried several western states, put the initiative principle in the constitution of several states, secured many economic advances for the farmer and passed away.

Non-partisan League.

"Later came the non-partisan league which secured many progressive economic advantages, some of which are becoming of great advantage to the farmer. Other states also took it up. Some secured great advantages thru its work—it too passed away, having repaid the farmers in money and training a million times its cost.

Need New Organization.

"Now we are in a time of chaos. Old organizations have passed away. Farmers and progressives everywhere are turning to a newer, more progressive, strongly organized and better disciplined organization—as the forces of plutocracy are more strongly intrenched today, than ever bfore. The national chamber of commerce is the strongest, most centralized organization of predatory interests ever known. Always on the job at Washington, D. C., when there is any interest in progressive laws for the producer at Washington and always thwarting the producers' interest. So we have in this movement the embryo machine that we propose to build and equip for the fight that we see just ahead for the producers of the country—to keep the farmer from descending until he becomes a poorer edition of the European peasant."

The Russian 'Living Newspaper' in Chicago

By NANCY MARKOFF.

THE Russian "living newspaper" in Chicago. What is it? How did it come to be organized?

The revolutionary Russian workers in this country have a daily newspaper, the Novy Mir, which has been published in New York City for about 13 years. It has Rabcors, (worker correspondents) thruout the country. Chicago alone having over twenty. But their big problem has been and still is to a certain extent to get the Russian workers to read the Novy Mir. There was the additional need to counteract the influence of the anti-revolutionary white guard Russian newspaper in Chicago which every day wove its nets of lying anti-soviet and capitalist propaganda around the uninformed Russian worker. How to get these workers to read the Novy Mir and to counteract this anti-revolutionary influence was their problem, and they decided to meet it in the way the workers of Soviet Russia met such problems, thru the medium of the "living newspaper." To be sure there had been worker correspondents before the Bolshevik revolution. But the needs of the revolution spurred them to greater activity.

THE Rabcors of the Novy Mir set to work. They organized the "living newspaper." Articles for Novy Mir were first discussed and edited at meetings of the Chicago Novy Mir worker correspondents. Then a hall was secured for the "living newspaper and announcements sent out inviting the Russian workers to attend the "publication."

On the night of the publication the writers arrived bringing with them their revised and edited articles. The The subscribers and readers arrived and took their places in the hall. An editor in the chair. The writers were called upon in their turn to read their articles (the subjects being divided in departments). After the whole newspaper was read the audience had its chance and the articles were discussed and criticized.

The worker correspondents class of Chicago instructed its secretary to attend the publication of the Chicago Russian "living newspaper" known as the Proiet-Tribune, at 1902 W. Division St. on Saturday, Dec. 19. Sitting thru the publication of the paper one could readily understand why the idea has been so effective and brot such splendid results.

The articles took up questions of interest to workers. They showed up the farce at work to keep capitalist society in power and the workers enslaved. There were humorous articles at which the audience rocked with laughter. There were articles which the audience felt so keenly, they sat nodding their approval so expressivly that you knew the writer expressed something that they had thought about too. There was poetry read by workers with fervor and spirit. There was the youthful Rabcor who told about youth activities. And cartoons, drawn on a very large sheet of paper, all humorous, showing up some individual or incident, gave a real zest to the evening. There were letters to the editor and his reply and at the end the advertisements and announcements.

At twelve o'clock, tho I did not understand one word of the language, I left as reluctantly as the rest of the workers in the audience and thoroly refreshed, they with the intellectual and spiritual treat they had received, I imbued with the spirit of the atmosphere, and with a warm appreciation of every one of those workers who came up to the platform.

Colonel House Returns to Washington

Col. Edward M. House, of the House of Morgan, who was the "confidential advisor" of Woodrow Wilson during his two terms in the White House, has just returned from Europe and is stopping with Coolidge for a few days to give the president the benefit of his observations.

Such is the fiction of the situation. In reality the coming of House to Washington is of fundamental political significance. It means that the House of Morgan is to dominate Coolidge and his administration in the same manner that it dominated Wilson. From now on we may expect [illegible] much more definite political tone from the White House. Ins[illegible]d of the anaemic superficialities of the textile senator, Mr. B[illegible]r of Massachusetts, we will have the most astute and most trus[illegible]d representative of finance capital in constant touch with Coolidge.

Colonel House is the political watchdog for the most powerful banking combine in the world. He left the White House with Wilson, after the industrialists had defeated the league of nations program of Morgan. Now he comes back after the republican party has supplanted the party of Wilson as the political expression of bank capital. His coming marks the close of an epoch—the epoch of Harding, a belated revival of the rule of industrial capital.

For nearly five years bank capital has been steadily gaining influence in the republican party. Coolidge is a Morgan president. But the world situation has become so involved that ordinary politicians, no matter how loyal to Wall Street they may be, cannot be depended upon to at all times perceive the intricacies of the interests of their masters. Hence one of the masters is selected as guardian over the politicians.

Force Aliens to Pay for Slavery

In his campaign to force the registration of aliens in this country, as a prelude to registering all workers to better enable the master class to conduct its open shop drives and to enable the government to be prepared for military and industrial conscription in time of war, Secretary of Labor Davis assures congress that the expenses involved will be met by the victims themselves.

This contemptible proposition designed to enable the capitalist class to maintain an effective black last thru application of the police bertillion measurement system is to be financed by those whom the government compels to register. The plan of Davis provides that upon enrollment the "alien" be required to "pay a small fee, for which he would receive a registration card, made out in duplicate, one copy to be kept in the naturalization files, after which the alien would be directed to a competent source of training." The "training" will consist of being placed in a barracks within the environs of some slave pen, where he will slave by day and then at night there will be poured into his tired brain the poison propaganda of patriotism, Americanism and other forms of scabbery.

Every effort should be made by organized labor to combat this proposition, which is a scheme to conscript the whole working class. Unquestionably, under pretext of registering the foreign-born the whole working population will be registered, so that the workers are mere numbers during the hours they work in industry today, will be given numbers instead of names during the other hours of the day in a vast scheme of compulsory industrial servitude.

The League as a War Machine

Not even the most purblind pacifist mumbling soft phrases about the league of nations can now be blind to the fact that the illicit performance of Versailles has given birth to a full grown bastard, conceived in the blood of war, who now follows in the footsteps of his parents. No pacifist in the service of imperialism can cover with platitudes the stark fact that this so-called "achievement of the ages" exists for the one and only purpose of carrying out on a great scale the ravaging of nations that stand in the path of imperialist expansion.

The decision of Tuesday on the question of Britain's claim against Turkey in Mosul reveals the true nature of the league. Already war maneuvers are going on in both contending countries. The league has granted Mosul to Irak, which is now under a British mandate that is soon to expire. But it has applied to the league for a 25-year extension of the Irak mandate. For capitalism that means for life, as it can not hope to exist beyond that time.

But meanwhile the working class is in for another blood bath for the aggrandizement of imperialism unless it rises in its might and smashes every capitalist government in Europe. American workers are confronted with similar conditions and eventually must meet the problem in the same manner.

Florida has launched a campaign to nominate Mitchell, the court martialled aviator, for the presidency. Illinois ought to fall in line with "Red" Grange, while Hollywood comes along with Ben Turpin. Then the voters could get a good cross-eyed look at the issues dividing the old parties.

"Borah Opens Fire on World Court," says a headline. But the Idaho senator is willing to surrender on his own terms to the capitalism that has spawned the world court. Capitalism doesn't fear that kind of an attack.

The LaFollette bloc in the house of representatives let the tax bill of the great financiers go thru without the semblance of a fight. So did the socialist, Berger. Labor must send some militant class fighters to congress.

Senator Wheeler is now trying to obliterate his apostasy to the democratic party by supporting Morgan's world court proposition.

The Class Character of Schools and Education

By Morris Backall

THE schools reflect the economic, political and cultural status of society. They embody the ideas, ideals, morality and the esthetic values of the immediate social environment. The class forces of all time put their hand upon the education of our youngsters.

The middle ages, as of ancient days, that kept the large masses in slavery, as human live-stock, did not permit any education for the commoner. The masses groaned under the yoke of darkness, ignorance and vulgarity. Education, knowledge, was the vested privilege of aristocracy. The slave-owners, merchants, landlords, peopled the schools and universities of old and medieval days. The spirit that reigned there was the one of the aristocratic rulers, the spirit of the blue-blooded lords and kings.

These schools were training camps for rulers, knights, priests, diplomats, etc. Religion which was at the bottom of all slave rule controlled the schools with an iron hand, and a so-called religious education was pieced out to lower classes.

At the end of the 19th century, when capitalism vanquished feudalism, the doors of education were thrown open to the masses. The emergency of machinery in industry opened the public schools in all developing capitalist countries.

The reformation, the renaissance, had already begun to rend assunder the cover of darkness from the masses. The sages of these periods had wanted to penetrate the multitudes with their teachings, but the natural inertia, prejudices, and the darkness that lay over them, were the boulders in their train of enlightenment and education to the people.

THE public schools are a product of capitalism. They were born, bred and mothered on the lap of modern industry. The development of capitalist industry would have been impossible, had it not prepared the children of the poor to become clerks, bookkeeping machine operators, engineers, etc. The feudal barons needed few or no learned specialists, and their schools did not bother to teach practical things. They trained gentlemen in their manners; showed them how to behave in their social circles; languages were the things in vogue. Capitalism, on the other hand, in its aim to control the natural forces for its own gain, had to bring into its service all possible practical knowledge and that at a small cost. So it opened schools. All may learn but only enuf to serve the purposes of the steel age.

The schools have it for their purpose not only to train hands for modern industry, but also to protect ideologically the inapproachability of the right of property. The holiness of ownership consecrates war slaughter of every kind when its lordship is questioned.

THE class differentiations of the eighteenth century were peculiarly distinct from those of the nineteenth. The feudals, merchants, knights artisans, priests, clerks, belonged to distinct classes, and were different in their education.

The 19th century dissolved the various classes and precipitated the two existing ones, the capitalists and the proletariat. The ruling capitalist class proclaimed the individual supreme. The free development of personal talents without regard to caste, blood and birth was decreed. This revolutionized education. A strife between the academies of the gentlemen and the modern school of individualism ensued. The former began to give way till entirely, or almost so, besieged by the latter. Individualism was the main landmark of the 19th century. Economic and political battles were won or lost individually. The freedom of the individual was the main principle of life. Literature, art, bowed before his majesty, the individual, which of course, was also embraced in education.

From Frobel, Spencer, to Montessori, we find an unbroken thread of individualistic tendencies in education. The individual child, in their opinion, need not be loaded with predetermined educational ideas. The character and the abilities of the child must be taken in consideration first.

But in industry and politics, individualism, tho good for the first stages of industrial development, became a bankrupt. Useless competition, over-production, crises, wars, devastation, are the symptoms of its abnormality. In education also individualism wrought havoc by upbringing narrow, petty, egotistic people. Individualism stimulated the development of capitalism by bringing into play the individual energy and initiative. When capitalism reached a certain stage it brought about the necessity of associating the various means of production. The various participants are forced to come together.

IN education, too, individualism was a sort of drive that brought about social education. The individual desire to excel brought about the circumstance, where co-operation, associative co-ideation became necessary with the resultant social ideals, social views.

The 19th century, in sum, destroyed thrones, erupted feudal domains and established the reign of capitalism. The 20th century called forth a new force, the working class, with new interests, views and ideals. Its economic, political and cultural interests, were common, collective and united. The freedom of the working class depends upon its understanding of the social forces that lie within it and drive it into collective channels.

To the working class there are no abstract ideas of freedom, democracy and equality, outside of real social human cohabitation. One may only be free as far as his being so does not tax the collective, the groups, the class, and the like with other abstracts.

III.

The 19th century being heir to the middle ages, especially with regard to education, did not cast off all remnants of feudalism. The schools were, as they are yet, apart from real life. The school was considered as something outside of life. A place where children might be trained in reciting the Latin and Greek classes, and not where they might learn to meet the problems of life. Very few social sciences flourished during those days, and least of all pedagogues. It may be because all public schools were filled with children of the lower, poorer social strata, whereas education in general was capitalistic, individualistic—contrary to the needs of the working class.

THE most important point is not what has already been done in connection with schools, but what might be done when the working class brings its spirit into the schools. Education in its wider sense, has a social meaning. Capitalist society is deteriorating, filled with wild contradictions, and has its consequent effect on its schools. The history of schools and education may be divided in six categories. Each categody represents distinct social, economic interests. These categories may exist together as they do in our public schools. (1) Schools where they teach manners to fit for certain professors, e. g., knighthood. (2) Religious schools to bring so-called spiritual knowledge to the public, as the Lutheran, Calvinists, etc. (3) Schools to develop servants for the state and church, when they were the same. (4) Vocational schools to uplift the poor from poverty, degeneracy and immorality. (5) Public schools as we know them. (6) The schools of the oppressed nations to elevate the national patriotism, develop their language and national culture. Mazzini organized the first school of its kind.

A new school is in emergence. The school of the rebel working class. In its pedagogues is synthesized the best methods of the world adapted and modified to fit the collective spirit of the workers. In all capitalist countries there are to be found groups that are organized under the auspices of the Young Pioneers. These groups, the learning in the public school, develop the feeling of solidarity and co-operation among their young comrades.

LABOR IN THE FAR EAST -:- -:-

By Semaoen

(INDONESIA)

INTRODUCTION TO ARTICLE I

Both the leaders of imperialism and of proletarian revolution have more than once emphasized the importance of attention to the Far East. Even William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, at the Atlantic City convention, said that "labor"—which means to him the bureaucracy of the trade union movement—must turn its eyes to the problems of the workers in the Far East. But revolutionary workers know that the leaders of class collaboration will approach the eastern workers only to betray them. It is well to know, then, that in Indonesia there exists a center affiliated to the Red International of Labor Unions, and that on the R. I. L. U. Executive Bureau there sits Comrade Semaoen of Java, the writer of a short series of articles, which are furnished to The DAILY WORKER by the Trade Union Educational League. The first of this series appears below.

ARTICLE I

NOTWITHSTANDING the continual terror upon the labor movement in general since the big railway strike in May, 1923, the Dutch government does not succeed in suppressing the resistance of our young working class in Indonesia.

The strike law from that time, the deportation of many comrades, the imprisonment of hundreds and hundreds of workers, do not prevent the progress of the trade union movements.

Now, September, 1925, only two and one-half years after the railway organization was destroyed by force, the Vereeniging Pegawei Spoor Dan Tram is again as strong as before the suppressed strike of 1923. Its membership is again 14,000; its organ Si Tetap is one and one-half times the circulation of 1923.

THE Union of Seamen and Harbor Workers, organized by one deported Javanese comrade from Holland in September, 1923, has 4,000 members at present. It appears that the capitalists concentrate oppression upon this organization, because it is not only dangerous for the economic life of the foreign trade, but also because it is a means for connection between the revolutionary movement in Indonesia and abroad.

During its existence not less than 100 comrades, seamen in the steamers sailing between Indonesia and Holland, were discharged on account of propaganda. Not less than 30 comrades were arrested and put into prison from one month to three months, being discovered in so-called "smuggling" of Profintern and Comintern literature, etc., from abroad to Indonesia. At present in every steamer sailing between Holland and Indonesia is put one or two spies. . .

Many other comrades were discharged from the steamers of the Koninglijke Paketvaart Maatschappij, sailing between the various islands of our archipelago. Then we have the victims who were discharged from the harbor in Tandjung Priok (atavia).

No wonder that under such circumstances this young trade union has only 4,000 members after two year's work, mostly workers in the harbors, and the minority are illegal members in the various steamers. Its organ, the Djangkar (anchor) is a popular paper among the seamen and harbor workers. Nevertheless, when we count the difficulties, we can say that here also, we get sucess in spite of the capitalists.

THE Sarekat Postel, union of the post, telegraph and telephone workers, having its headquarters in Surabays, printing regular its monthly organ, Soeara Kita, continues its progress and is 2,500 members strong now. Its editor, Comrade Muso, is persecuted on account of revolutionary propaganda in that organ in the month of May. (Comrade Muso, member of the executive committee of the Communist Party, section Sarabaya, is one of the most active propagandists of the trade union movement in that industrial town.)

In its congress June 7, the Frederasi Sarekat Boeroeh Tjitak, the trade union of printing works, it was said that this federation has 15 sections with a total membership of 3,000. The open meeting of that congress was destroyed by the police by force, because—one of the speakers had too "loud" a voice. (Every revolutionist has a "too loud" voice, so think the police in our country.)

NEARLY at the same time the congress of the Frederasi Sarekat Boeroeh Bingkil, the union of workers in machine-repair factories, having ten sections with a total of $2,000 members, took place in the same town (Semerang). It is its first congress after its existence from September, 1924. It is a very new union, this. Its monthly organ is published at Malang.

Also in the first week of June in Semarang was held the congress of the auto-transport workers. The various local organizations, formerly united in a federation, decided there to reorganize into one union, the Chauffeur Bund Indonesia. It has managed to organize some 2,000 members all over the archipelago. Active propaganda on behalf of this union began in June, 1924, when the old union catering for the chauffeurs had altogether only 1,000 members.

THE Sarekat Boeroh Goela, the union of workers in the sugar industry, is not yet able to work openly. This illegal union, organized from the remnants of the old one, finally destroyed by the capitalists in 1921, has become active since August, 1924. Here we have only 1,000 members, due to the difficult circumstances under which propaganda has to be carried on among these workers.

The same applies to the union catering for the workers in the mining industry, (coal, gold, oil, [petrol], etc.) Here we have only 700 members. From about the middle of May this new illegal union began to publish its organ Soeara Tambang (The Voice of the Mine Worker).

BETTER progress is being made by the union catering for hospital workers. This union has succeeded in increasing its membership from 500 to 2,000 from the beginning of 1924 up to date. In 1925, it began the regular publication of its organ, at present a monopoly. The above mentioned unions are led by Communists.

indeed! He learned that the Turks were murdering the Christians in that part of Mosul where the oil bubbled. But wherever there was no oil, it appears that the Turks acted quite decently. The good league of nations decided to let the Turks do their damndest to the christians who were unfortunate enough to exist in an oil-less land.

THE Chicago Daily News regrets that certain American papers, express considerable skepticism as to the alleged altruistic motives of England. "Give England a chance," says the News. It is time enough to cry "wolf" when that animal makes his appearance! It is hard to reply to such hypocrisy. There are approximately 500,000 words in the latest edition of Webster's dictionary, but there is no word sufficiently biting to describe the infinitesimal smallness of the lackey who scribbled such drivel for hire. Even a moron can see that England's interest in Mosul can be attributed to oil.

A YOUNG man of 25 years, serving life for an alleged murder was recently paroled by the prison pardon board of Illinois. It was reported that the young man's father is a millionaire, but the father denies this and states that he is deeply in debt. Perhaps he is right and perhaps what follows in the effect of his poverty. No sooner was the young man paroled than the papers raised a hue and cry against the parole board. Like hungry wolves the circulation managers of the capitalist press hunted their victim and brought every human hyena in Chicago out of his lair to snarl his cry for the apprehension of the paroled boy.

THE Small administration reeling under the blow inflicted by the decision of the court in the interest stealing case, surrendered to the clamor of the press and the young fellow was brought back to the pen. There a story was told which rivals in barbaric cruelty the torture of Jews by christians in the Middle Ages. Perry, the paroled convict, told how he was treated by officers at the West Chicago avenue station, in order to force confessions out of him. After abusing him for a few days at the station, without giving him food or water, he was taken to the third floor of the notorious detective bureau.

ONE officer worked on him all day at the bureau. He was given the famous "water cure," a method of treatment with which those of the Filipinos who survived their experiences with the United State army are acquainted with. This is the way the boy tells the story: "They pulled me back on the table. One of the detectives got a forearm under my chin and bent my neck back, pinching my nostrils shut with the fingers of one hand. Another held my feet. Still another anchored my arms around and under the table. They have or had—a gallon jug they filled up. One detective dug two fingers into my cheek so that my mouth flopped open. Then he forced the uncorked mouth of the jug between my lips. I had to keep swallowing as long as I could. The water filled me so that my stomach pained terribly because of the distension. But still it gurgled down."

THIS is the way a confession of murder and of several robberies were wrung from this lad. How many could resist the temptation to confess to anything in order to gain respite from such inhuman punishment. There is not a person who ever had any experience with the methods used by the police who will not believe Perry's story. Mayor Dever and his chief A. Collins, expressed great indignation when Perry's story was made public. This is not the first time that Chicago police have been caught with the goods in cases of this sort. They are supported by the powerful money interests however, and always escape punishment. Only when they rob the capitalists, which occasionally, do they get their medicine.

THE story of the rapist Sir Basil Thompson, formerly of Scotland Yard is too good to let pass. Sir Basil spent many years of life saving England from law violators and since 1917 he was the protector of the British Isles from Bolshevik propaganda. Those who read the stories of stool-pigeon Nosovitsky in the Hearst press recently saw his name mentioned. But Sir Basil fell and fell badly. Perhaps this is not the first time he fell, but this is the first time he was caught, so to speak, in a rather unvarnished position. The man who boasted of sending Roger Casement, the Irish rebel, to the gallows, came to grief when he raped a girl in Hyde Park, London. But in extenuation of the gentleman's conduct we must admit that he is a clergyman's son, in addition to being a professional stool-pigeon.

Exhibition of German Artist Depicts Many of Workers' Revolts

By LOUISE DIEHL

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 20—An exhibition of woodcuts, etchings, lithographs and posters by Maethe Kollwitz, member of the Berlin Academy of Arts and Sciences, will be on view during the next two weeks at the Civic Club, 14 West 12th street, New York City.

Kaethe Kollwitz is today generally conceded to be one of the most distinguished exponents of the black and white art in Germany. Of her work Fritz Stahl, art critic of the Berliner Tageblatt wrote after the German black and white exhibition in Berlin, "I cannot understand how any artist worthy of the name can refuse to take his hat off in reverent admiration before this thing that Kaethe Kollwitz has created."

In the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag Lothar Brieger commented as follows: "The strongest note in the exhibition was struck by the work of Kaethe Kollwitz. The drawings and woodcuts of this remarkable woman stand so far above the mass of the other, that praise, here, would degenerate into hollow phrase-mongery."

The exhibition, which consists of 53 of the best known of Professor Kollwitz's works, among them the series: "The Weaver's Rebellion," and the "Peasants' Rebellion," will open Sunday, Dec. 20 at 7 o'clock, and will be open to the public daily for the two weeks following, from 2 to 10 p. m., except Wednesday evenings. Admission free.

Ulster Constabulary Revolt Near Collapse

BELFAST, Dec. 20.—The revolt of the Ulster constabulary showed signs of collapse today when several platoons of mutinying police returned to duty.

By T. J. O'FLAHER[illegible]

WHEN the anti-Coolidge [illegible] and congressmen get thr[illegible] ing the world court and the V[illegible] law, they will not be wanting [illegible] good healthy excuse for another scrap which may be just as popular with the reading public as either of the two already mentioned. How the story did not gain wider publicity is one of the mysteries of politics. It is this: Calvin Coolidge has appointed a prominent member of the ku klux klan to an important federal position, while the appointee retains his $25,000 a year job in the hooded order. Norman Hapgood is responsible for the story and Hapgood, like all of Hearst's chief literary hacks is a professed admirer of Coolidge. There should be some excitement on the way.

FOREIGN correspondents hint that we may have two more dictatorships in Europe soon. One in Germany and another in France. Both capitalist dictatorships. Germany is in the throes of an industrial crisis and France is on the verge of financial collapse. It is reported that the German government has the necessary orders formulated for the declaration of martial law, to be published at a moment's notice. In France the mill magnates of the north have offered to finance the government on their own terms. It appears that the boasted stabilization of Europe which was scheduled to follow the Dawes' plan is far from stable. And the Locarno pact, outside of helping Britain to get some oil has not done much to give capitalism a new lease of life.

"WITH the entrance of Germany into the league of nations fades the last glimmering of the Communist hope for world revolution," says the New York Times. This should console the Times for the agony it suffers over the presence of several Soviet commercial missions in the United States and the ungodly sight of those horrible miscreants who sent the grand dukes to work or somewhere else, actually eating and perhaps drinking with some of the biggest bankers in Wall Street. But if the Times can believe that the social revolution is permanently halted by Germany joining the league, we can [illegible] that complete petrification [illegible] taken place in the brains of the [illegible] who own the Times.

COMPANY ATTEMPTS TO FORM CREW TO SMASH UNION WORKERS' STRIKES

LONDON, Dec. 21—The conductors and drivers of the London General Omnibus company have been circularized to join the company's division of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary, which will be used whenever the "commissioner of police declares that an emergency has arisen in which the services of this support to the regular police are required for the preservation of law and order.'

The appeal is signed by one H. Lansdown, calling himself commandant. All those that join this strikebreaking crew for three years get a uniform and all the "equipment" needed to carry on their work. Those that try the scheme for one year only get a policeman's hat and "equipment."

Tchicherin Denounces League of Nations

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 21—Georges Tchicherin, foreign minister for the Soviet Union, upon his arrival in Paris declared that Soviet Russia did not consider the league of nations a means of bringing about world peace. He denounced the league as a coercion of some states by others and expressed Russia's willingness to not only abolish the army, but all of the war industries.

"I deny that the league of nations as consituted today is a real instrument for world peace," declared Tchicherin.

In referring to the question of whether the Soviet Union would become a part of the league, he declared:

"I really cannot see how our entry into the league can be expected to promote a settlement of outstanding

COMMUNIST MAYOR RE-ELECTED IN NEW ELECTIONS AT SALONIKI

(By Cablegram to The Daily Worker)

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 21.—Despite the action of the Greek Pangalos military dictatorship voiding the election in Saloniki of the Communist mayor, Patrikios, the Communists were able in the new elections to have Patrikios re-elected.

The Communists in Saloniki made a united front with the refugees and the labor elements in putting up Patrikios as candidate for mayor.

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS' MEMBERSHIP CALLED TO ACT FOR OVERTHROWAL OF HILLMAN RULE

Statement by the A. C. W. Action Committee to the Membership of the Union.

It has always been the policy of Sydney Hillman and his gang to confuse the minds of the workers in order that they may not know what they want. In the last struggle that ran like fire over the country, the Hillman machinery set to work thru two channels; first, to scare off the membership thru organized gangsters; second, thru peace negotiative talk by which he meant to make the membership believe that the struggle will be brot to an end.

What Is This Struggle For?

It is no secret that conditions in the shops are becoming unbearable. Reduction in wages, the discharge of employes is becoming a more and more frequent occurence in our trade. The terrible "rush system" is entering our trade as a native. The "readjustments" that the Chicago manufacturers demand, and the tendency to reinstate piece work, prove that our trade is on the downgrade.

The Hillman administration instead of combatting the wild appetites of the manufacturers sought a policy of peaceful collaboration with the employers. And the more he sought collaboration the more he was forced to concede. It is an irrefutable fact that the Hillman machine has done nothing else but organize manufacturers' associations in New York and other centers in the last few years.

Forget They Are Servants.

To them, to the leaders, these bosses' organizations meant bodies, responsible groups, with whom the unions could negotiate union problems. But these leaders have forgotten entirely they were to serve the workers. In the last few years they hanven't even made the slightest endeavor to check the continued infringements upon the rights of the workers. Not only have they done nothing to improve the conditions in the shops but they have not even tried to get into the organization those who were yet on the outside.

They bowed to every demand made by the employers' associations. They brought into effect the notorious standard of production and permitted

BATTLE OVER WORLD COURT IS ON AGAIN

Administration Will Oppose Reservations

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—The world court fight was resumed in the senate today with indications pointing more and more to its becoming, in the final analysis, "a battle of reservations" such as featured the protracted struggle over the league of nations.

It was reservations that in the end accomplished the defeat of the league, and the foes of the world court apparently are hopeful that history will repeat itself in the present struggle.

Battle Against Reservations.

Recognizing the situation, and remembering their history, the democrats and pro-court republicans are pointing their efforts to the rejection of any and all reservations other than those originally proposed by President Harding when he submitted the question to the senate.

Protestant President Presides as Papal Nuncio Is Elevated

PARIS, Dec. 21.—With President Doumergue, a protestant, presiding, Cardinal Dubous gave the red-hat to the papal nuncio Ceretti, who was been elevated to the cardinalate. The ceremonies were held in the salon of the Elysee palace and Cardinal Ceretti received the red-hat while kneeling on the cushion formerly used for the coronation of the kings of France. Premier Briand attended the ceremonies.

NONPARTISAN LEAGUE FEARS MILITANT PARTY

Reactionaries Fight Farmer-Labor Party

By ALFRED KNUTSON
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. Dak., Dec. 21.—The farmer-labor party of North Dakota as formed at Bismark will be a burning issue at the next non-partisan league convention, which in all probability, will be held on February 22. The leaguers are not all united on the idea of forming the new party at this time.

United States Senator Lynn J. Frazier and Congressman J. H. Sinclair sent a joint telegram to the farmer-labor conference, stating they did not think "it would be wise at this time" to go ahead with the organization of a farmer-labor party in the state.

Similar telegrams were received from non-progressive, fossilized league office-holders in the state.

Rank and File Demand Party.

Other telegrams from rank and filers, on the other hand, expressed fervent sympathy with the formation of a real farmer-labor party in North Dakota.

A. C. Townley, former league leader, who is now drilling for oil in North Dakota and Kansas and who is looking forward to a re-entrance into the political arena, is not in sympathy with the new farmer-labor party.

To Build Party in Dakota.

Nevertheless, the conference, under the leadership of William Lenke and R. H. Walker, are standing pat on the decision of forming a farmer-labor party and the plan now is to go ahead with the building of such a party in North Dakota.

Farmer-labor representatives from other states strongly urged the non-partisan leaguers of North Dakota to join the new party and give it the best possible support. William Bouck of Washington, Charles E. Taylor of Montana and Tom Ayres of South Dakota expressed the view that the formation of a militant farmer-labor party in North Dakota would give a great impetus to farmer-labor movements in other states and inasmuch as many farmers and workers of the northwestern and central western states are still looking to North Dakota for guidance and leadership in a wide-awake farmers' and workers' political movement, that it should reassert its original militancy.

Workers and Farmers Must Unite.

J. G. Soltis from Minnesota gave a good talk on how the capitalist system exploited both the farmer and worker and the necessity of forming a class party of their own.

There is yet a good deal of timidity in this new farmer-labor movement, but a start has at least been made and it is destined to grow wider and deeper as the political experience of the farmers and workers in the state becomes riper thru capitalist oppression.

CALVIN COOLIDGE BUTT OF SATIRICAL ATTACK ON FLOOR OF SENATE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—President Coolidge was the basis of a satirical attack in the senate by Senator Pat Harrison, democrat, of Mississippi, who charged the executive's Chicago speech to the farm bureau and federation resulted in lower prices for farm products.

"The day after the president made his plea for the farmers in Chicago," said Harrison, "the price of oats went down, meats went down, live stock went down, corn went down, wheat went down, poultry went down and cotton went down.

"Another factor connected with that speech was that the president of the federation praised it. A few days later the farm bureau met in convention and the man who praised Coolidge's speech was defeated for re-election while a Mr. Thompson, who criticized the president, was elected in his stead."

FARRINGTON ENTERS CONSPIRACY WITH OPERATORS TO CUT MINERS' WAGES FORCING MEN TO STRIKE

By S. MASULIO, a Worker Correspondent.

TROY, Ill., Dec. 21.—The miners of Local 691 are on strike as a protest against the cut in wages which was pulled off on them in a secret conspiracy between the operators and the yellow president of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, District 12, Frank Farrington, to violate the agreement.

At one mine the operators put on a few new loading machines, but instead of the union officials taking advantage of the situation to give the min-

Charge Coolidge in Deal with Democrats of the South to Get I.C.C. Jobs

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—A sensational charge that President Coolidge entered a deal with Southern democrats to secure confirmation of the appointment of Thomas F. Woodlock, of New York, to the interstate commerce commission, thru the appointment of Richard V. Taylor, of Alabama, to another vacancy on the commission, was aired on the senate floor today. Woodlock's appointment was blocked by the senate last year.

The charge, brought into debate by Senator Cole Blease, (D.) of South Carolina provoked Senator Underwood (D.) of Alabama, to make an impassioned defense of Taylor's appointment.

ANTHRACITE OPERATORS REFUSE TO NEGOTIATE WITH MINERS ON PINCHOT PLAN; SEE LONG FIGHT

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 21.—The heralded meeting between the anthracite operators and union representatives that was scheduled to take place today here, is called off by reason of the refusal of the operators to enter negotiations on the basis of the Pinchot proposals. This was made known by the spokesman for the operators, W. W. Inglis, who said:

"There can be no meeting of the operators and miners until such time as President Lewis agrees to an open discussion of any and all plans for a settlement and does not confine the miners to the Pinchot peace proposal."

Want Still More.

The Pinchot proposal, it is to be remembered, constitutes for the union a surrender of the Tri-District convention demands and an unheard of contract for five years' duration. In view of the fact that the operators are not satisfied even with this concession, the conviction is growing that the operators are out to destroy the union entirely in the anthracite region.

Lewis, at a speech to the real estate board of Philadelphia last Friday declared that the operators and the "financial interests behind them" were ready to pay a billion dollars to crush the United Mine Workers' Union. What Lewis intends to do about it may be seen by his other utterances. He said:

"Knowing the operators' plans, the United Mine Workers of America is now organizing the defense of the anthracite mine workers in expectation of a continuance of the present struggle to the fall of 1926 or the spring of 1927. Funds will be provided so that the hungry will be fed and the naked will be clothed."

Wanted—A Fighting Defense.

Meanwhile, miners in the anthracite are becoming increasingly dissatisfied with the sort of "defense" which is promised by Lewis to begin some time. The miners are angry at the washeries being allowed to run, the shipments made of anthracite of any grade, but above all the miners are angry at the failure of Lewis to call out the maintenance men, several thousand of whom are working keping the mines in good

BRITAIN CLEANS UP ON THE OLD ARABIAN EMPIRE

Bribes and Bulldozing Completes the Grab

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 21—The capitalist journals report that King Ali of Hedjaz has "abdicated and fled to Irak" is the version given out by the British foreign office to as corrupt a piece of British imperialism as has been pulled off in many a long day.

The king of Irak, the territory held by Great Britain under a league of nations mandate, is merely a puppet of British rule. The league recently ruled that because the Turks had been, so it alleges, guilty of some "atrocities," therefore Irak should get the valuable Mosul oil region—providing the British would "permit" the league of nations to extend the British mandate over Irak 25 years more—or enuf time in order to get all the oil out of Mosul.

Britain, accustomed to bearing the white man's burden, agreed to accept the burden of being responsible for getting the oil out of Mosul. So that's that.

But now to complete the "pacification" of the country, the British pay out a bribe of $2,500,000 in cold cash to the king of Irak, with the understanding that he is to buy off his brother, the king of Hedjaz, who has been holding out against the British in the mountainous section. England got the father of the two kicked off the throne in 1924. Ali went on the warpath, while his brother became a well-paid British puppet.

The news that King Ali has "abdicated and fled to Irak" from Hedjaz, is simply another way of saying that Ali has succumbed to the bribe and that British imperialism now holds almost all the great Arabian empire, with the blessing of the league of nations.

FEW SCABS SHOW UP FOR WORK IN EDISON PLANT

Company Is Unable to Recruit Strikebreakers

The Edison Electric Appliance company, 52nd Ave. and 19th St., had fewer scabs enter the gates yesterday morning than at any other time during the strike of the sheet metal workers.

The deputy guards have not been diminished. The number of guards still remains the same. Yesterday morning those on the picket line missed the deputy who had come near drowning in his bowl of soup in a nearby restaurant. The deputy failed to show up. The pickets believe that he has been transferred from this plant to some other "job."

Production in this plant has been tied up during the busy season and the company in order to fill its orders is looking around for someone to do their struck work for them.

Will Investigate British Monopoly of Crude Rubber

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Investigation by the house of the British crude rubber monopoly became assured when the house rules committee approved the resolution introduced by Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, republican floor leader, calling for the inquiry. The investigation has the support of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and will be launched after the Christmas recess, according to plans of administration leaders.

CHICAGO NEGRO BODY TO HOLD PROTEST MEET

Race Oppressed Here and Abroad

Preliminary arrangements for a great anti-imperialist demonstration on the South Side of Chicago, to protest against the oppression of Negroes in the United States and by American imperialism abroad, were made last Friday evening, at the meeting of the executive committee of the Chicago Negro branch of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League (U. S. section.)

It was pointed out that while the persecution of Negroes in the United States continues, the U. S. government is now taking a whole series of decisive steps to completely crush the only Negro republics in the world—Haiti and Liberia.

Ruled by Marines.

American sailors and marines [illegible] dominated Haiti for a num[illegible] years, and now Military Go[illegible] John H. Interested in Liberia.

Chicago Negroes are vitally interested in the fate of these two republics, particularly Liberia, which was founded by Negroes from the United States.

The Chicago Negro branch of the All-America Anti-Imperialis League (U. S. section) is working out a special program, based on race issues, to be brought forward in all phases of its activity. A program committee was elected Friday night and will report at the next executive committee meeting.

Raise Price of Bread in Paris After Xmas

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Dec. 21.—Twenty-five arrests had been made and $5,000 worth of narcotics seized in a series of raids on drug peddlers and narcotic "speak easies." The arrests are continuing. Girls of 15 and 17 were found pledging their clothing and jewelry for cocaine, heroin and morphine.

UNEMPLOYED ARMY GROWS LARGER IN NORTHWEST CITIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 21.—The number of unemployed in the larger cities of the northwest is continually increasing as many workers from other sections keep piling in.

About 600 men were laid off in one of the fir logging camps near here, while most of the camps are shutting down for two or three weeks for the holiday season.

In the inland empire where sawmilling has been brought to a seasonal close, and where few woods operations are running, the unemployment situation has become even more acute than on the coast. Spokane has a large number of unemployed with absolutely no prospects for many months of ever getting a job.

START THE NEW YEAR RIGHT!

BEGINNING immediately after New Year's Day The DAILY WORKER will launch an exposure against conditions under which workers are forced to toil in the many plants of the meat packing industry.

The story of the workers in these plants will be told, their grievances set forth and the program laid down pointing the way out.

Hundreds of thousands of unorganized workers toil in "the stockyards" of Chicago, St. Paul, Omaha, Kansas City and many other meat packing centers.

Hundreds of thousands of copies of the issues containing these articles should be distributed at these plants. The DAILY WORKER wants the names of all those who will help, not only in the work of distribution, but also in gathering information to add to the large amount of material that has already been assembled. Address all communications to the Editorial Department, The DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

CHICAGO LABOR DEMANDS RECALL OF AMBASSADOR

"Release Cuban Labor Leaders," Workers' Cry

Placing the full responsibility for the plight of Julio A. Mella and his twelve imprisoned comrades in Cuba upon the shoulders of American imperialism, a mass meeting of Chicago workers at Northwest Hall, corner North and Western avenues, Sunday night protested against the intrigues of the American sugar trust on the island and unanimously demanded that the United States government recall Ambassador Crowder and abrogate the treaty which forces Cuba to maintain the notorious "Platt amendment" to her constitution in the interests of American imperialist domination. The meeting was one of many to be held in all the important cities of the United States, under the joint auspices of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League (U. S. section) and International Labor Defense.

Demand Immediate Release.

The meeting further demanded immediate release of all those kept in jail in Cuba by American influence. Quick action is necessary, it was pointed out, if Mella and his comrades are to be saved. Mella is in a desperately serious condition as a result of the long hunger strike he has been carrying out in prison.

William F. Dunne, the principal speaker, gave a survey of American imperialist history with regard to Cuba, beginning with the unprovoked war of aggression of Spain in 1898. One of the slogans of this war, he declared, was "Via Cuba libre!" (Long live free Cuba!) but Cuba today is suffering under a reign of terror such as even the black regime of the Spanish General Weyler did not surpass. Under the domination of the sugar trust and the National City Bank of New York, the real "owners" of Cuba, colonos in the sugar fields are being forced to work at the point of the bayonet for a bare subsistence, while labor leaders who attempt to organize the sugar slaves are impris[illegible] trade unions are smashed and [illegible] protest against American imperialism are persecuted by the sub[illegible] Machado government.

[illegible] Must Fight Imperialism.

[illegible] greatest share of the responsi[illegible] fighting American imperialism," declared the speaker, "rests [illegible]—the workers of the United [illegible]. The official bureaucracy of [illegible] trade unions does not take up this [illegible]. Instead it strives to extend American imperialism by poisoning and rendering harmless the labor movements of the subject countries, while at the same time sharing the ill-gotten gains of imperialism thru the profits of so-called labor banks, insurance schemes, etc. This makes our responsibility for determined struggle all the greater. We must win the trade unions for class struggle, and away from the policy of 'class collaboration,' built upon the foundation of imperialist exploitation. [illegible]ere, inside the very fortress of American imperialism, we can strike the most telling blows at the monster that has become the universal exploiter, the enslaver of all the world!"

Other speakers included Manuel Gomez, secretary of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League, George Brewer, a young Negro who told of the struggle of the Negroes against race discrimination and oppression in this country; Vicente Orbet, a Filipino, who described the iniquities of the rule of Gov. Gen. Wood in the Philippines, and George Maurer, secretary of the Chicago branch of International Labor Defense.

Adopt Protest Resolution.

A resolution demanding complete and immediate independence for the Filipino people was unanimously adopted, copies of which are to be forwarded to President Coolidge, to the Filipino Independence Mission now at Washington and to the Philippine legislature.

TITLED BRITISHER SPILLS THE INDIA RUBBER BEANS IN PRESS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Government circles were not too pleased today with a frank discussion of the rubber situation which appeared yesterday in Lord Riddel's News of the World under the heading, "Rubber Is Wiping Out England's Debt to the United States."

"With rubber fetching today a dollar a pound, America within four years will have paid this country the equivalent of the British war debt of four billion dollars," said the News of the World. "Every American who is trundling about in his motor car will have the satisfaction of knowing that thru rubber tires he is helping the British pay off the debt they incurred to save humanity."

Reports that Secretary Hoover plans to encourage the planting of rubber in the United States are described by the newspaper as "moonshine."

The government has been prone to deny that there is any artificial increase in the price of rubber, and such frank discussion as that in the News of the World is discouraged, lest it calls forth American retaliation in the form of restrictions that will raise the price of wheat and other staples to Great Britain.

"OUR" ambassador to Mexico has been snubbed by the Mexican government, according to reports emanating from American circles in Mexico. When Mr. Sheffield returned to the capital of our southern neighbor and presented the views of the state department, the Mexican official who received him, is alleged to have said something in Spanish that sounded to Sheffield remarkably like a suggestion to scratch his ear. Sheffield was disposed to discuss American interests in Mexico with the foreign office. If we remember rightly, it was understood some time ago that Wall Street had everything its own way in Mexico. It has not and it will not, no matter how many leaders fall for the gold dollar.

The world court is about as useful to labor as the electric chair is to a condemned criminal.

FOUR very interesting rotogravure pictures appeared in the December 6 issue of the Chicago Tribune. Three of them were related to the Armistice day celebrations in Europe. Marshals Foch and Joffre of France were shown in conversation. The caption said they may have been recalling heartbreaking reverses in the world war and "happier reminiscences of glorious triumphs." Is it possible they may have recalled the 800,000 French dead, who lost their lives to foist a Dawes' plan on Germany and an invisible franc on France? Premier Stanley Baldwin of England, flanked by ex-premiers MacDonald, the socialist and George and Asquith the liberals, with the royal family, is shown reading a memorial to Britain's dead heroes. Over 1,250,000 live, but hungry British heroes are trying to exist on a miserable dole, seven years after the glorious victory.

IN the third picture, Germany "proudly lists its battles on a world war monument at Karlsruhe," and the German soldiers to the number of over a million who were killed in the war are glorified. Many of those who lived after the dread carnage were polished off by the social-democratic leaders in the two revolutions that followed the war. Still another picture shows German divers with a new diving apparatus trying to raise a sunken British submarine. What puppets the workers are? They are taught to hate the workers of other nations when it suits their masters and they are used to assist the capitalists of the same nations when hate no longer serves.

GERMANY recently "honored" Baron Manfred von Richthofen, the most famous of her war aviators. There was nothing surprising about the German bourgeoisie bringing the remains of a popular hero from its French resting place in order to feel the nationalistic ego of the people. But it did create a ripple of surprise to see a representative of Great Britain's military forces offering tribute to a soldier on whose head they had set a price a few years ago. No doubt, the Communist Party of Germany called the attention of the workers to the ease with which the capitalists can forget their differences when it is to their interests to bury the hatchet. The workers have no clashing interests yet they clash. But they are fast learning the need for unity.

order for the operators, while these operators are defying the union.

In Carbondale, Pennsylvania, five local unions have officially protested the loading and shipping of coal by the Sweeney Brothers of Scranton, who are shipping about 100 cars a day from Prompton.

The locals intimate that if their request for a discontinuance of this practice is not obeyed, mass picketing will follow. The plant is operating at full capacity both day and night, with a forc of men heavily guarded by gunmen. The coal is being reclaimed from the old Gravity roadbed, loaded into cars and shipped to New York state.

Local teamsters and carters are being approached to dissuade them from hauling coal from stripping operations and prepared sizes of bituminous coal furnished by dealers. Scranton teamsters have refused to accede to this call for solidarity.

Need a General Strike.

It is pointed out that the greatest aid to be expected is not funds for relief, altho many miners' families are starving and living on charity at present, with prospects for the future getting darker every day. But the greatest aid that could come would be for Lewis to declare a strike in all the mines of America, a 100 per cent strike that would take out the maintenance men, too, and let the operators either yield the union demands or lose their mines to undrgeround water and cave-ins.

Miners say that this would not only win the anthracite strike, but would win into the union whole districts of coal mine fields now working under non-union conditions.

Iowa Farm Land One Third Depreciated, Says Congressman

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Federal aid in the promotion of farmer co-operative marketing was commended today in the house by Representative Dickins (republican) of Iowa. He declared its operation too slow to be of benefit to the present day hard pressed farmers. Farm lands in Iowa have depreciated one-third, he said. Corn is selling at 50 cents a bushel, while it costs 62 cents to raise.

Milwaukee Council Votes for Government Ownership of Mines

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 21.—By 22 to 2 the Milwaukee city council approved a resolution calling upon the federal government to acquire all coal mines and operate them for the public welfare. The aldermen were almost unanimous in regarding government ownership as the only permanent cure for fuel shortages.

Fight on Prohibition.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—An amendment to the constitution, wiping out compulsory prohibition and substituting a government regulation of the liquor industry, was proposed in the senate this afternoon by Senator Bruce, (D) of Maryland, one of the leaders of the congressional wet bloc.

Membership of the Amalgamated Called to Act for Union

time and again, three times in succession, a cut in wages.

They only made a fuss that they would "organize the unorganized" tailors, but have done it only upon the crook of the finger of the manufacturers' association (the organization campaign of Philadelphia.) As it looks now the leaders of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers have made themselves a sub-committee of the bosses' association.

The Reign of Terror.

The most active members of the union have been suspended. Locals have been disowned. Workers are thrown out of shops when they dare protest against the criminal behavior of our leaders. Terror has been instituted by which not only the expulsion policy has been put in effect but also individual members have been beaten up. This chapter of history in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has no comparison. Meetings of locals of the union have been turned into battle grounds by Hillman's gangsters.

The official press of the Amalgamated is turned into sheets by which the Hillman machine sought to cover up its criminal activities with etherized and radical phrases. No word has been said about the struggle that the membership leads against the bureaucrats. Not a syllable has been written about the living problems of the tailoring industry. Everything there had been planted in rosy colors.

Forced to Revolt.

The unbearable conditions in the shops on the one hand, the continuous conceding policy of the Hillman machine to the bosses on the other, the terror against the membership as a good third, were the forces that brought the membership into uprising against the bureaucrats.

The struggle embraces more and more workers over the country. New York is in revolt. There is almost no local where the machine agents have not been defeated. There is no shop where the workers have the slightest faith in our leaders who mislead. They have tried to fabricate lockouts and strikes in order to regain the trust of the membership. But they were mistaken. The membership refuses to recognize them. The only organization that has the trust of the membership in New York is the Amalgamated Action Committee.

Chicago Uprising Only Begun.

The tailors in Chicago are coming out into open battle against the so-called "readjustments" and against their bureaucrats. The pogroms that the Hillman agents organized against the membership cannot check the fight. On the contrary, it acts only as a spark in powder; it spreads the flame to its full length and breadth. Workers of Rochester, too, have shown that they wish to have nothing to do with the corrupt Hillman methods and this was shown plainly in their recent election. This is the sentiment that is prevalent among the workers in our trade against the Amalgamated machine.

The Hillman game in the Amalgamated is lost. The bureaucrats feel it. This is the one reason why they hav renewed their campaign of terror on the one hand and peace negotiations on the other. The New York locals which elected a committee to speak terms with the bureaucrats play unconsciously into the hands of the machine. There are a few men in the committee who are in earnest and it is to them that we address the following:

1. Those who desire peace must first of all decide that all expelled members must be reinstated. The dissolved locals must be reorganized. Those who were thrown out of work because of their opposition to the Hillman machine must be put to work again at their former places.
2. The officers of the New York joint board must resign at once and a new election must take place for members of the joint board and executive committees.
3. The New York organization must be united into one joint board and each local of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America shall be represented there on a proportional membership basis, abolishing privileges of one local over another.

Those who speak of peace must realize that the above is the only basis on which we can come together. If those who speak of peace are in earnest they will not hesitate a moment in accepting the above, without which there is no common ground for a conference.

The conferees that will come together upon these three points as a basis of peace will also have the program of the Amalgamated Action Committee, which is built up upon the demands of the tailor workers. There is no other program which has for its fundamentals the economic improvement of the tailor. The program, in part, is the following:

The Program.

1. Under no condition shall an employe be thrown out of the shop.
2. To combat every attempt of the manufacturer to reduce the wages of their employes, be it in the form of "readjustments" as in Chicago or in any other form as common everyday reduction as in New York.
3. Abolish the production standard.
4. To combat every attempt to resucitate piece work.
5. To establish week work over the country.
6. A minimum scale of wages.
7. Open a campaign for the 36-hour week.
8. One general agreement for the whole clothing industry of the country.
9. To unite into one big needle trade union all the needle trade unions with separate departments for the specific trades.
10. Establish the system of shop delegates who shall become the legitimate body to execute and act upon all union problems.
11. Abolish the Hillman policy of collaboration with the clothing manufacturers and in its stead, bring in the policy to defend the interests of the workers under all conditions. Enter upon the offensive whenever the first opportunity comes.

Call to Action.

Comrades! Workers! The left wing of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of the country calls upon you to enter this fight against the Hillman machine. Only thru strife will the workers preserve their union that they have built up by so much suffering, and which was later captured by a group of irresponsible politicians.

A call to action, workers of New York and of the country over! Organize yourselves and gather about those who hold the banner of strife. Stand with those who are ready to fight for the interests of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' membership. Shake off the Hillman machine from your shoulders. It has sold you thru its policies to the bosses and made the pogroms upon you and your union possible. In no other way can we save our union from annihilation. Let it resound from one end of the country to the other: Down with Hillmanism! Down with gangsterism! Forward to a clean, strong and militant union!

Pres. Green, of A. F of L. Took Two Months to Get Out Letter to Aid Miners

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, finally issues an appeal to all affiliated organizations to contribute funds for the striking anthracite coal miners in Pennsylvania.

This is an example of the efficiency of the Green regime in control of American organized labor. It has taken two months for Gompers' successor to write this letter.

• • • •

It was two months ago, while the sunshine and warmth of October days were still beaming over Atlantic City, that the A. F. of L. convention by unanimous vote, all delegates rising to their feet, decided to come to the aid of the striking miners.

Then the convention adjourned. The delegates went back to the bickerings of their various international unions. President Green, according to all reports, went on tour addressing chambers of commerce and other organizations of the business interests, pleading for "peace," for "friendly relations" between the workers and their bosses. He completely ignored the great industrial war, a crisis in the American labor movement, that is raging in the Pennsylvania hard coal fields. To be sure, the A. F. of L. office in Washington sent out a printed copy of the address delivered at Atlantic City by President John L. Lewis, of the miners' union. This went to "the press" and came from the office of Secretary Frank Morrison. But that was all. White paper, even with ink on it, doesn't feed hungry strikers and their families.

• • • •

This is just another act in the bitter tragedy showing how the present leadership of organized labor does not function in the industrial struggle that rages continuously in spite of Green's class-collaborating orations.

The capitalist press has carefully spread the lie that the anthracite strikers are "rich and prosperous," that they have bulging bank accounts and big automobiles, that they are enjoying the "vacation" the strike has brought them. Perhaps the officialdom believes this stuff. That is one explanation of their inactivity.

But the Scranton, Pa., Republican, dated Dec. 19, 1925, has just arrived, and over a news dispatch from Pittston, one of the biggest mining centers, there appears the headline: "SOUP KITCHEN LINE-UP IS INCREASED TO SIX HUNDRED"; "PITTSTON LODGE OF ELKS TO INVESTIGATE SITUATION IN CITY TO DETERMINE EXTENT OF ACTUAL NEED EXISTING." The item follows:

> PITTSTON, Dec. 18.—The line-up of youngsters between the age of six and sixteen years at the "free lunch" handed out at the St. Regis Restaurant, on North Main street, was increased to six hundred this evening, according to a tabulation made this evening by Harold Stein, the proprietor.
> Patrolmen Merle Finnan and Joseph Sheridan were on duty this afternoon from 4 until 5 o'clock keeping the children in line. As on yesterday, soup was dispensed with and sandwiches served instead.
> This afternoon Sigmund Samuels, manager of the Pittston Dry Goods, made known to William Conlon, secretary of the Greater Pittston Chamber of Commerce, that if any public organization opens up a relief station, he will supply the butter and bread that will be needed for the duration of the strike, the relief station to be not only for children, but for grown-ups if it is necessary. An offer has already been made by Daniel O'Shea, manager of the Montrose Beef Company, to supply meat and soup bones, if such a station is opened up.
> William Coplan, chairman of the Christmas Relief Committee of Pittston Lodge of Elks, stated tonight that an additional thirty applications for aid had been received in the mail today. Owing to the number of requests reaching 350, the committee have decided to make an investigation in an effort to ascertain the conditions really existing in Greater Pittston.

• • • •

It is not known how many of those hungry children come from the families of striking coal miners. But it is a crime that a capitalist sheet is able to publish such a news article, flaunting in the face of the workers their own misery, that must be relieved by the charity of business interests, dispensed under the direction of the local chamber of commerce.

If some of these starving children come from the families of workers in other trades, made idle thru the strike, then the crime of the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated international unions is all the greater. The big fact that is certain is that all these hungry boys and girls are the children of the working class. They are not the children of the coal barons and their well-paid henchmen.

• • • •

It is also certain that the sight of their children going hungry has a demoralizing effect on the striking miners. This is a good time of the year to organized relief committees, based upon the trade unions, in every city in the land, to furnish relief for today's vanguard in the American industrial war—the anthracite coal miners of Pennsylvania.

BRITISH MINERS DEMAND RELEASE OF COMMUNISTS

Denounce Jailings as Political Acts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The executive committee of the British miners' union denounces the action of the British government in jailing the twelve Communists, who were active leaders in the labor movement of England, and joins with the other English unions in their demand that these working class fighters be immediately released:

"This committee unanimously protests against the altogether unwarrantable and severe sentences inflicted upon the officials of the Communist Party, considering that the whole proceedings were influenced at every stage by political bias.

Unite With Other Union.

"We unite with the other trade unions in demanding their immediate release and the prevention of this attempt to interfere with the freedom of the press, free speech, and personal liberty of opinion.

questions between ourselves and other nations, when those very nations have up to the present refused to recognize us. Moreover, we reject a cardinal doctrine of the league—the idea of the coercion of some states by others. There is yet another reason for our refusal to join the league. I must point out that the insistent invitations that certain members of it are addressing to us come with very ill grace from countries which not only reject all our overtures for mutual accommodation, but are actually in occupation of our territories."

Referring to disarmament, Tchicherin said:

"After the termination of the war, we were, I believe, the first nation to advocate disarmament and we officially expressed our approval of this policy in our reply to the draft of the treaty of mutual assistance. We not only vehemently criticised that treaty for giving enormous international power to a few states, but we rejected it as delaying the practical settlement of the disarmament question. Incidentally, I have just received the report of the spech made in Moscow by M. Rykoff, chairman of the council of commissaries, in which he makes the downright offer to abolish not only the army, but also Russian war industries, provided complete disarmament becomes general. He goes on to say that he is ready to give his fullest support to any attempt at even part disarmament. This readiness of ours to disarm is not a mere rhetorical gesture, it is implied in our fundamental attitude to the world. We renounce not only the policy, but even the very idea of conquest. And we need an army and navy only for defense."

Tchicherin in discussing the Locarno pact declared the pact was part of a drive of the capitalist powers on Soviet Russia and further reitertated Russia's desire for peace by saying "Locarno or not Locarno, we want real peace and the removal of antagonisms which would tear the whole world to pieces, and we are wholeheartedly ready to make our contribution to this end."

BRONX BARBERS REVOLT OVER A FAKER'S REGIME

Members of Local 560 Form Opposition

BRONX, N. Y., Dec. 21.—At last regular and a special meeting held by Local 560 of the Barbers' Union, a question was brought up by the executive committee to raise the salary of the officials for the coming year. The raise will be $5 more per week.

On this question Brother F. Coco criticized the attitude of the officials. He said, "The sentiment of the barbers in this local is against the officials, but they fear to say anything or vote against this proposition, because many discriminations and abuses were used and have been used continuously against those fighting for the betterment of the local."

Brother J. Magliacano attacked the officials on the ground that they did not specify in the postal card the purpose of the meeting and were using camouflage methods against the membership.

He appealed to all the barbers to open their eyes once and express their own opinion, their own indignation, against all the discrimination and camouflage methods used by the officials in crippling the opposition. He said, "Be free men and vote against the raise of officials' wage."

Many Speak Against Raise.

Brothers L. Scarfidi, Rinehartz, Cavella, Dedore and others spoke against the raise of salary.

All the above brothers demanded a secret ballot but the president, Mr. Quinto, a great reactionary, saw that the spirit of the barbers present, was against the raise and he put the question to the vote by raising the right hand. Of course members fear to lose jobs, because if they are with the opposition the officials will never give them jobs.

The barbers present were nearly 600. The vote favoring, raising wage, [illegible]. Against 47. The great majority abstained from voting, for the reasons I pointed out above.

Afterward the nominations for 1926 officials, was open. Brother Coco for president-organizer, opposed Mr. Quinto, the present president-organizer.

Brother Coco wished to make a statement, but the czar, Quinto, refused to give him the floor.

Brothers J. Magliacano, I. Brodowsky and L. Scarfidi were nominated for the executive committee, opposed to the present lackey members. Brother Cavella for the financial committee. Brother Dedore was nominated for vice-president but the czar Quinto refused to accept the motion.

What They Stand For.

The above mentioned stand for the following principles: They want that the barbers should be more interested in the union affairs. They want that the barbers should be educated by lectures on unionism. They want the barbers protected by the union in case any barber will be dismissed by the "boss" for his union activity. Until now when a barber was dismissed he has no protection at all. And for this reason the hours are not respected as they should be, because the barbers are afraid to compel the boss to close at the hour established by the contract between the union and the master barbers.

The opposition proposes that all the beauty parlor workers must be organized because if not they are a great detriment for the barbers in general. This question was voted at the Indianapolis convention last year. But until now the officials promised, but never put it in practice.

It is time for the barbers to open their eyes and ears and realize that until all the barbers in New York and vicinity are 100% organized conditions cannot improve as they should. If you want efficiency and progress of your local, vote for the above candidates in the next election of our local.

PEORIA LABOR SWALLOWS ALL OF THE HOOK

Class Collaboration Bait At Banquet

By MAX COHEN

(Worker Correspondent)

PEORIA, Ill.—Last Monday night the labor misleaders of Peoria demonstrated that labor and capital could "get together," when eighteen of them were present as guests of the Peoria association of commerce at its annual banquet at which nine hundred men and women were present.

Hell and Maria's Brother.

The principal speakers were Wm. R. Dawes of the Chicago association of commerce, who gave a lot of "valuable information" on "methods," and John N. Van der Vrees, manager of the northern central division of the chamber of commerce of America, who, to quote the Peoria Labor Gazette, "took the breath away from the labor representatives, for he came darn close to making a red hot union labor talk."

"Ninety per cent of his address," says the sycophant Gazette, "was along the lines that every labor union stands for. He advocated the round table discussion, sitting together and threshing out differences, rather than standing apart, wasting time hating each other."

Brag Over Betrayal.

The local newspapers printed many columns in "praise" of the Peoria workers, gloating over the fact that their "representatives" were staunch backers of the A. of C. and that "they believed in the co-operation of all classes, where each grounp realize that the other fellow has some rights on the map."

This last is a quotation from the Peoria Star, which, in turn, was quoted from the Labor Gazette.

Among the so-called leaders of labor present were Joe Lynal, president of the Trades and Labor Assembly, who was a comic figure at several miners' convention, in one or which he got up on a chair and told Lewis to go to hell.

From this he was misnamed "Fighting" Lynal. He was a silent boy at the A. of C. banquet.

Willis K. Brown There.

Waldo Cross, vice-president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor was seen but not heard, as were George Rimington of the miners, Willis K. Brown of the carpenters, and W. H. Milligan of the machinists. Walter Bush, editor of the Peoria Labor Gazette sat at the speakers table, since he was starting on his third year as vice-president of the association of commerce, as "labor's representative" in the association.

To show how these leaders have swallowed the bunk of class peace without protest we quote the Labor Gazette as saying:

Pearl of Class Collaboration.

"It has been the custom in the past for the A. of C. and labor unions in other cities to be continually at war. But in Peoria we are glad to say this civic organization will bring peace and prosperity to all alike. Labor is for a square deal and no favorites, a fair day's pay for a fair day's work. The A. of C. is more than simply a bunch of business men for mutual protection, but it is for all Peorians, big and little, rich and poor."

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

Alberta Carmen War on B. & O. Plan of Class Collaboration

EDMONTON, Alta.—The Edmonton local of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of North America is on the warpath to fight the notorious B. & O. plan.

At the recent meeting of the West Edmonton Lodge a resolution was adopted to elect the local secretary and one other man as a committee "to be empowered to draft, publish and distribute bulletins exposing the anti-working class nature of the Baltimore and Ohio plan of co-operation. The bulletins to be distributed to the members of all railroad shop crafts, so that this plan of profit making may be exposed and rejected by the workers of Edmonton and district, and a policy of amalgamation, consolidation and unity on national and international lines may be adopted."

In their first bulletin the committee points out that this plan causes increased unemployment, speeds up the workers, and benefits no one except the company, which is able to produce more at less cost.

SHOWS THE TRUE SPIRIT OF WHAT UNIONISM MEANS

Little Local Seeks Power and Light

By HYMAN GORDON

(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY. — The Paper Plate and Bag Makers' Union, Local No. 107, of the International Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, is conducting an intensive campaign to organize the trade in New York City.

We recognize that the task is hard, as we have to deal with an unorganized trade, with the lowest paid workers, who are intimidated by the bosses and are scared to death to meet a union organizer.

But our local has decided to do everything in its power in this organization campaign. At the same time our local, thru the efforts of the members of the Workers Party and the progressive group, is doing splendid educational work.

On the third of November we had a mass meeting to celebrate the 8th anniversary of the Russian workers' republic, where 45 members of the local were present and listened with great interest to the English, Jewish and Spanish speakers.

On December 12 we had a little rescue party for The DAILY WORKER at the house of Brother Chanoh. A collection brought in $22.00, and it was decided to send it to The DAILY WORKER in the name of Chanoh's little son, who returned from the hospital where he underwent a serious operation.

The executive board of the local is assisting in the educational work, and we hope that with the organization of the unorganized workers of our trade our local will be one of those progressvie locals that will help to build up a united progressive labor movement in this country.

ARKANSAS COAL COMPANIES SUE MINERS' UNION

Operators Start Second Coronado Case

FORT SMITH, Ark., Dec. 21.—Five coal companies have filed suit in federal court here against District 21, United Mine Workers of America, its officers, executive board, individual members and locals in western Arkansas counties, for $1,080,000 as damages from the union which is leading a strike in the collieries.

The suit was brought on the same basis as the suit of the Coronado Coal company now on trial for the third time in United States district court here.

The Greenwood Coal company, the Mammoth Vein Collery company, Backbone Coal company, Semi-Anthracite Coal company and Blue Hills Coal company are listed as plaintiffs. The petition asks for the issuance of an attachment against funds now in the hands of the receiver of the district, and for writs of garnishment.

Miners now on strike are charged with having caused employes of the companies to quit work and with violation of an injunction order issued by the Sebastian county chancery court.

DEPT. STORES DRIVE WORKERS LIKE ANIMALS

Macy's Store Enslaves Its Girl Workers

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 21.—With Christmas shopping at its highest peak, the department store workers are now overburdened with work that is wearing them out both physically and mentally.'

R. H. Macy & Co., New York's largest department store, both in the amount of workers it employes, as well as the amount of business it does, can be cited as a good example.

Frantic shoppers crowd into the store to such an extent that daily many of the customers as well as the employes are taken sick from the intense strain.

Work From Morning Till Night.

The sales clerks are not the only ones who have to bear the burden of the holiday rush, in fact, their lot is much easier in comparison, with others who work in the store, for when the store closes they are able to usually leave within a half hour's time.

It is in the checking and shipping departments, where many young girls are employed, that we find the worst example of slave driving. Refusing to hire enough extra help for the holidays, the workers are compelled to toil from the morning to nine or ten o'clock at night without obtaining any extra pay whatever, receiving only a free supper in the store restaurant which consists of the food that is left over from the day's meals.

A big proportion of these workers, many of whom have been employed by Macy's for several years, only receive twelve and thirteen dollars a week. If they ask for a raise, they are reminded that there are many unemployed to take their place at a minute's notice, and therefore, they are compelled by fear of losing their jobs, to keep quiet.

Macy's is now giving all of their employes a mental and physical test and undoubtedly as soon as the holidays are over will fire those who do not figure up to a certain mark. Many of the questions that are being asked, especially of the girls, are of a personal nature that is an insult to them.

Must Organize.

The department store workers must realize that only by their own strength and determination will they be able to better their conditions. They must demand to be paid for all overtime, also obtain a raise in wages to lift the mont of the ridiculously lowly paid class they are now in. They must organize themselves into a union and fight shoulder to shoulder together for by their unity they will be able to make the department store owners come to terms.

OFFICE WORKERS PLACE A. C. W. A. ON UNFAIR LIST

Amalgamated Ignores Union Demands

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec 21.—In a statement issued to the press, Ernest Bohm, secretary of the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union has declared that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, has been placed on the unfair list for refusing to allow the office force of the Amalgamated to be unionized.

"We are doing this because Sidney illman, president of the Amalgamated, has ignored our letters calling upon him to employ only union clerical help in the office of his organization," stated Bohm.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

FURUSETH AND LA FOLLETTE IN BLACKLIST PLOT

To Destroy M. T. W. by "Discharge Book"

It is not usual for a company blacklist scheme to get the legal authorization for itself of the United States government, but that is what is being attempted now, and the bill to accomplish it is being introduced by no less than young LaFollette who is walking about Washington in the same fog of fake progressivism as did his dad.

As usual, all the politically mole-eyed "labor" journalists swallow with uncritical haste every act and utterance of "young Bob" and rush to their typewriters to tell the world what perfectly wonderful things are being done for labor. The result is a fair-sounding article w[illegible] tells the exact opposite of the tru[illegible]

No Blacklist is "Favorable"

Even The DAILY WORKER was taken in by such a story, printed in last Saturday's issue under the head of "Bill Favoring Seamen Introduced in Senate." About this damnable scheme to blacklist all radical seamen off of American ships the recent issue of the Marine Worker, organ of the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W., has the following to say:

"The International Seamen's Union thru its president Andrew Furpseth, is advocating a law making it compulsory for shipowners or the I. S. U. to issue to all seamen continuous discharge books. These books are to contain the record of the seaman and be filled out by the officer in charge of his department.

"Senator LaFollette, son of the former candidate for president and father of the seamen's act, is to introduce the bill at the present session of congress.

Aimed at M. T. W.

"The bill was originally introduced by the father of the present senator at the last session, but was defeated.

"The I. S. U. hopes by this means to get control and fleece the seamen as they have in the past. The object of the bill is to blacklist those who are active in bettering conditions for the seamen and it is a direct blow against the membership of the I. W. W."

How Come?

All militant workers will join with the Marine Transport Workers in opposition to this plot to blacklist the revolutionary and active elements among the seamen, at this conspiracy to get legal authority to destroy the only militant marine union in the United States, the M. T. W. of the I. W. W.

But the I. W. W. should also explain why it is that its officials permit prominent members, such as Covington Hall, to work for LaFollette's election, as in the last presidential campaign, without rebuke or loss of standing. Yet these officials are ready enuf to ostracize and bar from the organization press any member, however able and willing to build up the I. W. W. if he even is suspected of being a Communist.

Class Collaboration for Export -

By Harrison George

Frank Hodges, secretary of the Miners' International, Amsterdam leader and civil lord of the admiralty in Ramsay MacDonald's "labor" government, in an interview published in the American press recently (Chicago News, Dec. 18), gave expression to a definite new current in the international labor movement. Among other things, Hodges said:

> British trade unionism must look to American trade unionism not only for its practical demonstration of economic power, but for guidance in the industrial crises of the next decade.
> American trade unions have gained an incalculable advantage over us by their system of labor banking.
> I think American trade unions are to some degree responsible for the generally excellent co-operation betwen labor and employers. In that co-operation Americans have a happy advantage over us. We are miles from achieving it.

On Dec. 5, at the Amsterdam General Council meeting, Hodges directly spoke of the desirability of the admission of American labor to the Amsterdam International as opposed to the admission of the Russian trade unions —"It would be a much more important event than even Russian acceptance of the (Amsterdam) constitution," said Hodges.

Oudegeest, too, chimed in with this view, saying that the real importance of the general council's meeting was in the "approach to Ameria and Mexico, which is a question quite different from that of Russia."

"Our difference with America, said Oudegeest, is one of tactics, not of rules."

These indications of an orientation toward "American rules" by European labor, synchronized with a reformist maneuver to seek support against the movement for world trade union unity by admitting the American Federation of Labor to Amsterdam, make an examination of existing tendencies in American trade unions of great international sifinigance.

We must remember, also, that the recent German delegation of trade union reformist leaders were stricken with wonderment at the "B. and O. plan" of class collaboration invented by William H. Johnstone of the Machinists' Union and applied on the "Baltimore and Ohio" railway at first, which gave the plan its name. The Germans went home pledged to spread this scheme of class collaboration all over Germany. Hence a survey of American class collaboration tendencies is of world interest.

Company Union and Collaboration.

Two phases of one thing, class collaboration, may clearly be discerned in the labor movement of the United States of recent and current days. These two phases are: first, the growth, forced by the employers, of "company unions." The second is the growth of the movement for "co-operation with employers" among the trade union officialdom.

Both of these movements, which are taking on a tremendous significance, whether they come from the employers or from the trade union bureaucracy, find a common divisor in the principle of class collaboration, and the only difference between the two positions is one of application of the principle.

Both arise out of the same situation, the lack of a militant policy of intensive organization of the workers by the trade union leadership, and a complete unwillingness to base even the existing numerical strength of the trade unions upon a clear and implacable policy of class struggle. The lack of a program for the organization of the unorganized turns the helpless masses over to the employers to exploit as they will, thru company unions if they so choose. Lack of a class struggle policy for the workers already organized not only fails to attract new members, but demoralizes the present membership when it faces the employers in battle with no policy but that of retreat and surrender.

Lure of Direct Dealing.

Moreover, so remote has become the mode of life, the material interests and the income elevation of the trade union bureaucracy from the average proletarian, that the siren song of the company union booster, for "direct dealing," "shop democracy" between "just we two," has been a powerful argument aiding the winning away by the comany union of members and ex-members and possible members of trade unions which should be based on the class struggle and rank and file control.

With the union membership declining the trade union bureaucracy felt secure for some time in their fat-salaried positions, by the brilliant discovery of "labor" banking, with the dividends from the banking business serving to cover the slackening income from dues. But the field is inherently too limited to take care of the whole species of trade union bureaucrats, and the growth of the "company union" threatens to reduce the trade union membership to the vanishing point.

Nothing to Sell.

With the numerical strength of the company unions of the United States attaining a figure of an estimated 1,000,000, or fully one-third the strength of the American Federation of Labor, the panic-stricken disciples of Gompers saw that their principles of "collective bargaining" would have nothing to bargain over, with their shelves swept clean of merchandise by the company unions.

In some cases the company union movement has secured the direct assistance of the government. Such a case is cited recently involving the Maintenance of Waymen's Union and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad. A dispute arose over the pay rates of the bridge and building painters belonging to the union employed on the road. That was five years ago, and at that time the union entered complaint against the road with the United States rail labor board.

The U. S. board decided in favor of the men, but it did nothing to enforce its decision which the road paid no attention to. The board even took two years to answer the union's last letter. And then it reversed its decision with the following cogent observation:

> The situation on the Lackawanna railroad, so far as it affects the painters in question, has been materially changed. These painters are no longer represented by the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way employes, but are and since April 17, 1923, have been represented by the Federation of Mechanics and Helpers of the engineering department of the company.

In other words, these painters, if they lived long enough to get the final decision of the United States rail labor board, were no longer members of the Maintenance of Way Brotherhood, which is one of the sixteen "standard" railway unions, but now belong to the "company union," to which the board found it unnecessary to speak of wage rates.

This is the systematic working out of a policy by the American employing class which can truly be charged as a conspiracy against the American proletariat. But what do we find the "leaders" of American labor doing about it? There are several excellent illustrations.

Mutual "Boards of Adjustment."

In reference to the railway unions, even as this article is being written dispatches from Washington tell of a grand "agreement" arrived at between fifteen of the "standard" railway unions and the Association of Railway Executives to introduce a bill in the U. S. congress providing: (1) The abolition of the U. S. labor board, and (2) for the legalized establishment of "boards of adjustment" upon which both the management and the union have representation and concerning which magnificent results are foretold in the line of "co-operation and peace."

The details of the bill are not yet made public, but a clear inference that the unions have surrendered the right to strike and other vital policies, can be drawn from the fact that the Pennsylvania railroad, a die-hard enemy of unionism has voluntarily joined in the scheme, which promises to give the railroad companies more efficient labor at cheaper scales than their own "company unions." This, if it turns out as indicated, will be one of the most brazen and wholesale surrender of American unionism in many a long year.

This fever to outdo the company unions is burning thru the veins of every labor union in the country. And it is voiced by the head of the American Federation of Labor, William Green, speaking at the annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in New York recently, in the following words:

"Management must either deal with trade unions organized by the workers, free and apart from outside influences, or deal with their workers individually."

This was Green's starting point of argument against company unions. But he goes on:

> The purpose of management which fosters the organization of company unions is clear and understood. The motive behind their action is a selfish one. They seek to maintain the form of collective barbaining without its virtues or its spirit of independence. They seek control rather than co-operation.

Here we have Green telling the employers that the purpose of the company union is too obvious, "clear and understood" by the workers, to be successful in their selfishness. Better methods are suggested:

> They exert the power of compulsion instead of inviting the voluntary co-operation of their employes.

"Such co-operation," says the dispatch, "Green would have come thru agreement between the trade unions and management to make industry more efficient."

Such are the funeral orations being preached over the coffin of the "right to strike" and all semblance of policies of class struggle, by the trade union bureaucracy of America.

Another shining example is the speech of the infamous "Major" George L. Berry, addressing an audience of both employing printers and wage earning pressmen at Mason City, Iowa, Dec. 14, 1925:

> I have no patience with the employer or the employe, who takes the position that they are two rival forces. They are not. They are interested in one common end, making money so that both worker and employer may share in it.

"The strike was held up as an economically unsound weapon," the dispatch goes on to state, "destructive alike to workers and employer. Conciliation and arbitration are far better."

But "age cannot wither nor time decay" the classic example of a bid for class collaboration, quoted by Com. Earl R. Browder in the first article written in America against the "B. & O. plan" in The DAILY WORKER of December 8, 1923, in which William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, was said to have spoken at St. Louis, as follows:

> I want to emphasize as strongly as I know how the fact that in the task of positive co-operation in the railroad industry there can be no substitute for the genuine unions of the railroad employes.
> I maintain that such a management would never again (after using Johnston's co-operation plan), as long as it retains its good sense, desire to see the affiliated shop crafts effaced from the scheme of things on its road.

The sweep of th[illegible]s collaboration movement advances. And the key problem of American revolutionary unionists hinges around the fight to win and hold the unions for policies of class struggle as against this collaboration poison that is spreading thru the veins of American labor.

Organization Meetings | Workers (Communist) Party | Social Affairs Resolutions

New York Supports the Unity Campaign

THE district executive committee of District No. 2 and, the general membership meeting of the New York members of the Workers (Communist) Party have gone on record as supporting the campaign for the unification of the party initiated by the central executive committee, the former by a vote of 8 to 6 and the latter by a vote of 460 to 233.

The meeting of the district executive committee was held on Thursday, Dec. 10, and was addressed by Comrades Lovestone and Cannon on behalf of the unity resolution of the central executive committee. The two central executive committee representatives discussed at length the political situation in the country and in the party, pointing out that the growth of a two-and-a-half international tendency both inside and outside the movement, the growth of a new left wing inside the socialist party and in the labor movement in general, the serious danger of a split in the party which was prevented only by the energetic and united fight of the central executive committee representatives at the Finnish convention which ended in the triumph of the Bolshevik elements in this convention, and the general favorable situation for mass work required the unification of the former factions of the party for united work and that the removal of the political differences, which had divided them, made possible such unification. The speeches of Comrades Cannon and Lovestone were followed by a thoro discussion of the entire question, Comrade Krumbein being permitted by the central executive committee representatives, to speak for a half hour against the central executive committee resolution altho the original plans for the meeting, as outlined by the central executive committee, did not provide for any such long speech against the resolution. Comrades Olgin, Mindel, Sjoman, Weinstone, Wolfe, Stachel, Miller, Bimba, Lifshitz and Don supported the resolution and Comrades Krumbein, Grecht, Siskind, Zack, Undjus and Aronberg voted in the negative. Comrade Olgin, in supporting the resolution of the central executive committee, declared that he was convinced that the central executive committee was working earnestly for the unification of the party but that, in his opinion, it would still take some time and much earnest conciliatory work to disarm all the old prejudices and suspicions, and he introduced an additional resolution in the district executive committee in which the district executive committee should express to the central executive committee a further interpretation of the spirit of harmony involved in the adoption of such a resolution. This resolution was adopted by the district executive committee, no one voting against, but six abstaining and referred to a sub-committee for editing. The resolution proposed by Comrade Olgin is reprinted at the end of this article.

General Membership Meeting.

At the general membership meeting, which was held on Sunday, Dec. 13, at Webster Hall, the entire question was discussed at much greater length in an eight-hour meeting. Comrades Cannon and Lovestone again spoke on behalf of the ceneral executive committee and released Comrade Johnstone from his obligation as a central executive committee member to support a unanimous decision of the political committee of the central executive committee in order that not Johnstone's right to speak but the unity resolution should be the central question for the discussion during the meeting and that there could be diversion of the main political issue to subordinate questions. The following spoke in favor of the unity resolution in addition to Comrades Cannon and Lovestone: Comrades Dunne, Olgin, Mindel, Weinstone and Wolfe. Comrades Krumbein, Zack, Brahdy, Costrell and Radvansky spoke against the resolution. Comrades Brahdy and Radvansky introduced their own resolutions, both resolutions receiving four votes. The representatives for the central executive committee, in closing the discussion, emphasized the fact that they would continue to work energetically in order to win over those comrades who still opposed the unification of the party and that every opportunity would be given to anyone who supports the line of the central executive committee and the Communist International to work without discrimination in the party. Whereas every effort would be made to win back to the line of the Communist International those who were now objectively working against that line.

Olgin's Resolution.

The resolution of interpretation introduced by Comrade Olgin into the district executive committee and adopted by a vote of eight in favor, none against, and six abstaining was referred for editing to a sub-committee of which Comrade Olgin formed a part which unanimously presented it in the following form:

"WHEREAS, The abolition of all kinds of factional struggles and factional discriminations is the most imperative need of our party as a prerequisite for the Bolshevization and for the growth of our party as a leader of the working masses, and

"WHEREAS, Some of the comrades of the former majority, in their shock of surprise and in despair over the Communist International cable, have in various instances expressed their opposition to the Communist International decision and some have even attempted to organize within the party an opposition to the central executive committee, thus creating an atmosphere of misunderstanding and confusion which must result in a weakening of the party and of the confidence of the rank and file in the Communist International, and

"WHEREAS, The unity resolution and the spirit behind the resolution as well as the declarations of the responsible representatives of the central executive committee indicate a determination to do away with the remnants of factionalism which were manifest in some activities of the central executive committee immediately after the national convention, and also to do away with the factional spirit still manifested by some comrades, now

"THEREFORE: The district executive committee, in voting for the unity resolution, requests the central executive committee that this resolution be interpreted by it to mean as follows:

"1. That the former majority led by Comrade Foster, notwithstanding mistakes and deviations of some of its members and notwithstanding the recent declarations of some of the two-and-a-half international opposition within our party as being in sympathy with the Foster group, was and is in the main composed of the Bolshevik elements who must take an integral part in all the work of the party, including the fight against the right wing opposition.

"2. That no discriminations will be made against Comrade Foster or against any of his followers who will bona fide submit to the decisions of the Communist International and relinquish attempts at organizing a caucus.

"3. That the central executive committee will not tolerate any caucuses in the party.

4. That the central executive committee in the immediate future will judge the members of the party not merely by whether they voted for or against the unity resolution, but by the political orientation of their actual work in the party.

"5. That the central executive committee, in accordance with declarations made by its representatives at the present district executive meeting, will henceforth be guided by the recognition of the fact that a successful and authoritative leadership in our party can be created only thru a complete amalgamation of elements who are willing to follow the line of the Communist International regardless of former grouping."

CLEVELAND GOES OVERWHELMINGLY FOR PARTY UNITY

Membership Meeting Backs C. E. C.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 21.—The membership meeting held in Cleveland on December 18 resulted in a sweeping victory for the central executive committee. By a vote of 1[illegible]2 to 50, the membership went on record supporting the unity that has been brought about between the Ruthenberg and the Cannon groups in the party.

Comrades Lovestone and Cannon represented the central executive committee; whereupon the Foster group demanded that a representative be allowed equal time to present the Foster position. This was granted and Comrade Karath spoke for the Foster point of view.

Show's Utter Bankruptcy.

Without advancing anything constructive, Comrade Karath made charges and accusations that showed the utter bankruptcy of the opposition to the central executive committee in District No. 6. No platform, no program, but a mere rallying about Com. Foster as a person. This, the representatives of the central executive committee revealed to be a dangerous tendency. This is not a campaign against Comrade Foster but an educational campaign to unify the party and to find the correct policies for the work of the party.

Comrade Brahtin, another supporter of Foster, launched into a tirade and even expressed the belief that the criticism of Lore about the party might be correct, which Com. Cannon exposed in analyzing the results of Lore's criticism.

Comrade Ruthenberg was in the hall and, after receiving an enthusiastic greeting, explained the correctness of the policies of the central executive committee in the Finnish convention, in the unity with one section of the former majority group.

The district executive committee which met on Saturday, Dec. 19, went into the details of the trade union policy. Comrade Cannon made an analysis of the policies hitherto applied by the party, and the policies intended by the central executive committee. Com. Cannon and Lovestone analyzed the errors made and the wrong policies still pursued by the Foster group. They explained what the intentions of the central executive committee are in regard to the left wing movement.

Overwhelmingly for Unity.

The opposition in the district executive committee was again led by Comrade Karath and Brahtin, which Comrade Cannon in particular had to expose. Comrade Severino and Comrade Hamilton had a somewhat divergent point of view, Comrade Hamilton presenting a resolution which was intended to embody his ideas.

The discussion was quite lively, and when the vote was taken, 8 voted for the unity resolution of the central executive committee, three for that of the Foster group well-known thruout the country, and Comrade Hamilton voting for his own resolution. The membership meeting and the meeting of the district executive committee prove that District 6 is behind the unity resolution and the earnest attempts of the central executive committee to achieve unity and lay down correct policies for the party, particularly on the trade union question.

PITTSBURGH OVERWHELMINGLY SUPPORTS UNITY RESOLUTION; VOTES AGAINST FACTIONALISM

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 21.—Continuation of factionalism within the party received a death blow at both the district executive and membership meetings held in this city December 16 and 17 with Comrades James P. Cannon and Jay Lovestone present, representing the central executive committee. All members of the Young Workers (Communist) League district committee and candidates as well as active members of the outlying steel and mining town attended the district executive meeting and took part in the discussion.

The "Opposition."

Quite a resentment was shown at the district executive committee meeting against allowing Comrade Blankenstein, who came to Pittsburgh several days prior to the meeting as special organizer of the so-called Foster group, to speak at the meeting. By request of the central executive committee representatives, however, Comrade Blankenstein was granted the floor and was given considerable time to present the views of his group. A resolution against the central executive committee unity resolution was then introduced by Comrade Otis who was also given ample opportunity to defend his point of view.

D. E. C. Decisive For C. E. C.

The discussion on the two resolutions was most interesting with members of both the party and the Young Workers' League participating. When the vote was taken several members of the district executive committee of the Young Workers' League, who were previously supporters of the Foster group, declared that they will register their vote next day as they needed more time for a more thoro consideration of the question. Next day they registered their votes for the central executive committee resolution.

The final vote, therefore, stands as follows: In the district executive committee of the party, 12 for the central executive committee resolution and 2 for the resolution introduced by Comrade Otis.

On the district executive committee of the Young Workers' League, 10 for the central executive committee unity resolution and 1 for Otis' resolution. All the candidates and the out of town representatives voted for the central executive committee resolution. The Young Workers' League district executive committee was organized on the parity basis, and the meeting on the December 16, finally broke down the lines that have previously divided the members into two opposing camps.

Membership For C. E. C.

At the membership meeting held next day Comrade Otis again introduced the same resolution which was so decisively defeated at the joint meeting of the party and Young Workers' League district executive committees. The chairman, together with the central executive committee representatives were in favor of giving Comrade Otis the opportunity to defend the point of view of the "opposition" to the unity resolution altho Comrade Otis as a member of the district executive committee was duty bound to support and defend the resolution adopted by the full district executive committee the night previously. He was given practically as much time as was given each of the representatives of the central executive committee.

During the discussion, one of the comrades, a member of the district executive committee of the party and Young Workers' League formerly a supporter of the Foster group, pointed out that after a thoro consideration, he was finally convinced of the correctness of the central executive committee resolution and appealed to the members to look upon the question from a political point of view and not from the point of view of past prejudices or personal likings for this or other individual in the party. The objective conditions and the situation in the party, especially in this district, where the coal operators and the steel magnates are making every effort possible to disrupt the party, demand unity of all Communist forces loyal to the central executive committee and the Communist International. The comrades of the former minority, he added, have proven their sincerity in raising the question of unity in this district by actual deeds. Comrades of the former majority were placed in responsible positions both in the party and the league and were even given a majority on such important committees as the political and the industrial committee.

The vote that followed the discussion, 94 for the central executive committee unity resolution, 12 for the resolution of the "opposition" and 4 abstaining from voting—was a most decisive blow at any attempt to carry on an organized opposition to the party leadership. The membership in this district is united for the central executive committee and the Communist International, and it is hoped that the few comrades who are still opposed to unity or are for unity with reservations will soon realize the correctness of the central executive committee resolution and policies and will change their votes, accordingly.

Administration Tax Reduction Bill Faces Hot Fight in Senate

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21. — The $325,000,000 tax-reduction bill, which has been enacted by the house, faces a stormy future in the senate with both democratic and so-called progressive republicans opposing many of its provisions.

Senator Smoot, chairman of the senate finance committee has announced that hearings on the bill would start in the senate Jan. 4, the bill carried to the floor by January 15 and held there until enacted.

The democrats declare they will offer a substitute calling for an increased slash in taxes amounting to over $100,000,000.

Senator Norris, leader of the so-called progressives, declared that the house measure "gives greater tax reduction to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon than to all the taxpayers in the state of Nebraska," and declared he would oppose the administration measure.

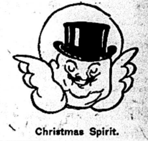
The "Christmas Spirit" and the Young Workers



Christmas Spirit.

During the month of December we again are faced with a spirit of "brotherly love," "capitalist benevolence, etc. The salvation army can already be seen with their "theatrical Santas" on the important streets panhandling the pedestrians for their loose change. Christmas dinner societies of "nice ladies," save-your-money-and-soul missions, basket circles and what not are already preparing to pool interests for the extraction of the pennies from the lucky workers who have jobs. As far as the young workers are concerned not many will be fooled by the "one meal a year" Christmas charity of the bosses.

While the bosses are engaging in this tomfoolery and inoculating the workers with the "religious-superstitious" bug, the young militant workers are utilizing the month for greater organization and activity in the class struggle.

December for us is economic trade union month. It is definitely linked up with the working youth conference being called in eastern Ohio for the end of February. There the immediate demands, principally of the young miners will be discussed and a fighting program set up.

In other parts of the country the Young Communists are organizing themselves into trade union fractions in order to carry on their struggle on behalf of the young workers into the unions in an organized fashion. The league demands that every member become a trade union member and a member of a youth fraction.

In New York City the league is also laying the basis for the calling of a general conference of young workers delegated from their shops in order to discuss and formulate demands for their immediate economic interests, against the use of injunctions and for a labor party separate and apart from the bourgeois political parties.

Young Workers of Other Lands

British Times on the Y. C. L.

LONDON—In the series of articles which the Times publishes on Communism in England, there is a shorter section on the Young Communist Leagu eof Great Britain.

By way of introduction an incident is decribed which is alleged to have happened in Manchester and which is an illustration of the extraordinary activity and unscrupulousness of the alleged leader of the league. After this introduction the connection between the Comintern and the Y. C. L. is described in a few words and a few sentences from the program are quoted.

While this is going on the attack of the Balwin government on the Communist organizations has aroused an enthusiastic fighting spirit in the league which is resulting in a steady increase in membership.

Czech Youth Fight Militarism.

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia. — The Communist Youth has published an appeal to the Czech soldiers. The following demands have also been published:

1 Reduction in the number of higher officers. 2) Smaller salaries for these officers. 3) Cessation of pensions for the officers of the old Austro-Hungarian officers. 4) Higher pay for soldiers and non-commissioned officers. 5) Re-introduction of care commission. 6) Permission to serve in one's birthplace. 7) Prohibition to use soldiers as strikebreakers. 8) Prohibition of deduction from pay as penalty. 9) Free selection of political newspaper and literature. 10) Soldiers' free participation in the political life at their own discretion. 11) Prevention of the abolition of soldiers' franchise. 12) Liquidation of the church administration in the army.

German Children's Congress New Departure.

BERLIN, Germany.—At the recent national congress of the Junge Spartakus-Bund (Communist Children's Movement) and its leaders a new departure was made for more effective work among the masses of proletarian children. Among the important decisions were: 1) The children's movement must not remain isolated sets of the more advanced children, but must become mass organizations. 2) No isolated groups but a centralized children's league. 3) Not only the school struggle but an energetic struggle against child labor and child misery with economic demands.

Austrian Young Socialists for Soviet Russia.

VIENNA, Austria.—On the return of the young workers' delegation from the U. S. S. R. the young socialist workers had organized seven Soviet Russia meetings in Vienna, but the attendance at these meetings was only 1,900. It so happened that the majority of the social-democratic members of the audiences favored Soviet Russia, so that at one meeting even the social-democrat Kanitz was compelled to speak of his "warm regard" for the Russian working class. The young socialist workers have decided to hold a course on Soviet Russia. This is, of course, to counterbalance the enlightment on Soviet Russia by the young workers' delegation. Otto Bauer's (!) wife will lead the course.

Farrington Part of Conspiracy to Cut Coal Miners' Wages

ers some of the benefits derived, the absolute contrary is the case. The bosses were permitted in this agreement to cut the miners' wages from $10.32 to $8.04 a day. This holds good for miners who load coal by hand as well as by machine. Very often the machines get out of order and the men are forced to load by hand. Besides only a very few load coal by machine, the large bulk of the miners loading by hand.

Formerly if a miner loaded more than 12 tons of coal a day which at 86 cents a ton makes $10.32 the regular union scale, he was also paid for [illegible] extra amount produced; but under [illegible] new Farrington agreement, in ad[illegible] to the reduced wages of $8.04 [illegible] twelve tons a day at 67 cent a ton, [illegible] is not paid extra no matter how many tons over twelve he loads.

When this cut was announced by the operators, the miners immediately applied to the officials of the union for an explanation of the violation of the agreement. The miners worked for many months waiting for this explanation which was never made. Then the miners, humiliated and outraged, went on strike demanding the return of the former scale.

STEEL MILLS CUT WAGES WITH INSTALLATION OF MACHINERY; BOYS REPLACE SKILLED MEN

By W. J. WHITE, a Worker Correspondent.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Dec. 21.—The United States Steel corporation is a gigantic combination of manufacturing capital with its tentacles reaching into hundreds of branches of manufacturing. Towns and cities of this country have felt and are feeling the deadening effect of its presence, with its open shops and in some cases, the ownership of even the towns themselves. This corporation is at the present time having its plants overhauled, and the waste of back number units of its numerous works wiped out.

New Castle is one of the places where this concentration and elimination is being rapidly carried out. One of their blast furnaces here is already down and dismantled and at least two other are marked to go the same way in the near future. These furnaces, the pride of the capitalists a few years ago, are now slated for the junk heap.

New and more up to the minute heating systems are being introduced by the efficiency engineers of the company. One such which has just been put in at the local steel mill, has displaced two-thirds of the firemen at the plant. Instead of the 270 men who were employed on the three turns, they now have the work done by 90 men, thus saving the labor of 180 firemen.

The patent doubler has been introduced into the tin mills here and they are being handled by boys of fifteen and sixteen, who are fast displacing the higher priced men. Some idea of the number of men displaced may be gleaned from the fact that New Castle has at the present time some 300 houses not tenanted. The workers who formerly lived in them have had to seek work elsewhere.

In the tin coating plants they have introduced the latest machines which make it possible for one man to do the work formerly done by five. This work is largely done by the colored and the foreign-born workers and they have been especially hard hit. Many of them are in dire straits because of the lack of other work to be had in the town which is largely a United States steel fortress. Wages are about 40 cents per hour on the average. The boy who now runs the patent doubler gets about $4.50, while the doubler whose place he is taking got about $10.00 per day. The tin house man now runs five machines, formerly run by five men, gets in the neighborhood of the wage of one of the men he now displaces.

The company recently bought 800 acres of land for the purpose of putting up coke ovens, and they are dismantling the coke ovens in Sharon and evidently intend to put in improved coke plants here. Concentration and improvement and displacement of man power is the order of the day, and here you see it in the process of instalation.

The local officials are largely the tools of the steel company consequently nothing is being done to turn the situation into one of benefit to the workers.

Building Workers in Santa Barbara Warned About Scab Contractor

By A Worker Correspondent.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Dec. 18.—Near the postoffice on State St. where stood the catholic church, which was destroyed by the earthquake on June 29th, John M. Cooper of Los Angeles is excavating for a two story store and office building.

This architect and contractor is well known in Los Angeles because of his refusal to pay anything like the union scale or give his men union hours. The carpenters and laborers in that city have received rough treatment from him.

Indications are he is trying to do his "stuff" in Santa Barbara also. His men work any and all hours it seems. As yet there have not been many carpenters employed on the job, but the few who have worked for him have received $8 per day of eight hours and worked Saturday afternoon for straight time. The carpenters' scale is $9 for eight hours. Saturday afternoon work is strongly discouraged by Local 1062. Sec. 2 of the trade rules says:

"There shall be no work done Saturday afternoon, between the hours of 12:00 m. and 6:00 p. m., except to preserve life and property."

Painters and plasterers are working five days a week here. The electricians are seeking to have their wages raised from $10 to $12 per day and the week shortened from 44 to 40 hours.

PICTURES OF LIFE -:-

By S. P. SLAVIN

(Worker Correspondent)

STAMFORD, Conn.—In a grocery store a hard-working woman, shabbily dressed, stood in front of the counter talking to the man in charge: "What is the cheapest butter you got?" The man told her. She hesitated. Evidently it was still too high for her. Finally she reluctantly said: "Give me a quarter of a pound."

Just at this moment an expensive automobile stopped in front of the store. An elegantly dressed woman with a poodle dog in her arms stepped out and entered the place. The grocer was immediately on his "tip-toes."

"Send me three pounds of the best butter you have," the lady ordered. She included other things in her order, always specifying she wanted "the very best" and, joyfully patting her poodle, she departed, while the poor woman was still waiting for that quarter of a pound of the "cheapest butter you got."

• • •

It seems unbelievable that such perverted conditions should be tolerated among civilized people in capitalist America. The harder you work the more you have. If you earn your living by honest work you are a nobody, but if you are a grafter you belong to "our best citizens" and you ride in limousines and you have the "very best" of everything.

I happened to know both women. The poor woman is my neighbor. Her husband works in a shop, their 14-year old boy works too. She herself, besides taking care of a family of six, takes in washing, and with all that she can only afford the "cheapest."

The rich lady is the wife of a "prominent real estate man" who buys property cheap and raises rents, and that's where the limousines and poodle dogs came from; and this is why our hard working woman couldn't afford anything but the "cheapest butter you god." She has to pay that high rent so that Mrs. ———, whose husband never did an honest day's work in his life, may roll in luxury.

CLASSES OF WORKER CORRESPONDENTS TO BE ORGANIZED BY WICKS

During his tour thru the East, which started yesterday in Grand Rapids, Comrade H. M. Wicks will devote considerable time to the organizing of worker correspondents' classes in the various cities that he visits.

This is some of the most important work being conducted by The DAILY WORKER and the party. It is essential that proletarian writers be developed so that a great staff of field correspondents can be created that will know how to handle all labor news in a manner that will appeal to the working class.

All worker correspondents and those who want to take up this work should attend the Wicks meetings and remain afterwards to take up this question with Comrade Wicks.

The following cities will be visited: Detroit, Buffalo, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Pittsburg, Cleveland and Toledo. Time and place of lectures announced elsewhere in today's paper.

How to Americanize Workers Party Seen in Street Nucleus

(By a Worker Correspondent)

With a Czecho-Slovak comrade acting as chairman, a Bulgarian as agitprop director, a Scandanavian as The DAILY WORKER agent and a Ukrainian as financial secretary, street nucleus No. 13, section 4, of the Workers (Communist) Party of Chicago carried on its branch business Wednesday night at 1532 W. 19th street with but one native-born American, the latter acting as secretary. The meeting was carried on entirely in English, with an enthusiastic discussion lasting for three hours.

How to work in co-operation with the shop nuclei in that territory was the principal subject. The agitprop committee and industrial organizer will keep in constant contact with the secretaries of the shop nuclei in the district, helping in the distribution of The DAILY WORKER and of the nuclei bulletins. Besides, an industrial survey of the neighborhood will be taken so that conditions in the shops where there are no party nuclei can be studied.

As the first step toward the new work, the nucleus members organized for a house-to-house distribution of 1,000 of the "Challenge to Coolidge" dodgers.

How About Some Evening?

Some night when you have no meeting—or some night when you're broke and you can't go to a show—why not step over to the Workers' Book Store at 19 S. Lincoln St.? You can help to prepare a propaganda campaign — and you'll spend a pleasant evening. Step over ANY night and speak to The Daily Worker Agent—S. Hammersmark. We sure need your help!

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL IN HOUSE AND U. S. SENATE

Law Aimed at Curbing Southern Lynchings

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Bills have been introduced in the senate and the house to curb lynching in the United States. Both of these bills are identical and provide than any state officer who fails to make all appropriate oforts to protect a prisoner in his charge from mob violence or apprehend any person participating in mob violence, shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding five years or a fine not exceeding $5,000 or both.

The bill also makes it a felony for any state or municipal officer to conspire with any person to injure or kill or suffer a prisoner to be taken from his custody. Those who conspire with him likewise shall be guilty of a felony. Upon conviction the persons so conspiring shall be punished by imprisonment for life or not less than five years.

District Court's Right Defined.

The district court of the judicial district in which a person is injured or put to death by a mob is given jurisdiction to try and punish those who participate when it appears that the state courts fail or refuse to apprehend and punish them or when the jurors obtainable for service in the state courts are so strongly opposed to such punishment that there is no reasonable probability that this guilty of the offense can be punished in the state courts.

Must Pay $10,000 Forfeit.

Any court in which a person is put to death by mob violence shall forfeit $10,000 to the family of the victim. If he has no family, then the money shall go to his dependent parents, if any; otherwise to the use of the United States.

In the event that any such person put to death by mob violence shall have been transported from one county into another during the time intervening between his capture and putting to death, the two counties shall be jointly and severally liable.

The bill also makes any act committed in violation of the rights of a citizen or subject of a foreign country a crime against the peace and dignity of the United States, punishable in like manner as in the state courts.

Three Make a Mob.

Three or more persons, acting in concert, without authority of law, for the purpose of depriving any person of his life or doing him physical injury is defined in the act as a "mob or riotous assemblage."

Mr. Lowden—Farmers' Advocate

Since Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, received a staggering political-blow in the primaries leading up to the republican presidential elections in 1920, when his agents were caught buying votes in the state of Missouri, he has been diligently trying to recover his standing. Himself adopted by marriage into the circles of industrial capital by way of the Pullman millions, he was a political creature of industrialism in the United States. Next to Major General Leonard Wood, he was the favorite of Standard Oil and the steel trust in the pre-convention fight of the republican nomination. Wood was disqualified because of his vile record as a strikebreaker and scabherder in the steel strike. The Indiana primaries, where the industrial centers snowed him under in the balloting, made Wood dangerous timber. Lowden was eliminated not because he did anything the others were not doing, but because he was unfortunate enough to be caught corrupting votes.

Now this discredited darling of the industrialists comes forth as the advocate of the interests of the farmers while in reality endeavoring to destroy them. He proposes a federal farm board which would utilize government resources for the farmer as the federal reserve board aids the banks.

As is well known the federal reserve system "to aid the farmers" is a means of enslaving them to finance capital. Country bankers, most of whom are directly controlled by Wall Street or La Salle street, obtain money from the federal reserve at 4 per cent and lend it to the farmers at 7 and 8 per cent and even more, for they frequently collect interest in advance by deducting it from the loan, also when the farmer is hard pressed they actually deduct as much as ten per cent, with the result that the real interest paid by the farmer mounts as high as seventeen to twenty per cent.

Now comes Lowden with a proposition that other government resources be used "to aid the farmers." Lowden's game becomes clear thru his observation: "It is significant that the eastern industrial leaders are now studying the farm situation." It means that those farms not already mortgaged to the banking combine will fall into the hands of the industrials and is a plain bid for government aid in bringing about this condition.

Government agents will advise farmers to purchase new machinery and nitrates and other chemicals for replenishing the soil so that bigger crops may be realized. Farmers will have to mortgage their farms in order to do this. When the mortgages are foreclosed, as they eventually will be, the land will fall into the hands of the industrialists who will merge the individual farms into large-scale production by introducing large tractors.

With the industrialists falling in line with the bankers for a general expropriation of the farmers, which will proletarianize millions of them, it will become impossible for the capitalist newspapers and politicians to befog the minds of the agricultural workers with the illusion that their interests are opposed to the interests of the workers.

In this respect it is significant that in North Dakota, where large scale farming is proceeding at a rapid rate, we have a mass impulse toward independent class political action. Effective leadership for the labor party can only arise thru a national labor party that will consolidate the interests of the workers and farmers into a class party.

The Next Step

Now that Col. Edward M. House has returned, after almost five years, to his old room in the White House, so that he can "advise" the president as he advised Wilson, there can be no doubt that the world court project is really the threshold (whether it be called back or front door) to the league of nations. It was House, the trusted silent partner of the Morgan banking combine, whose influence sent Wilson on his sea voyage to Versailles where the treaty and the league covenant were hatched. The league is referred to as the "pet project" of Col. House.

The pacifist crew that, under various names, is boosting the world court proposition, and trailed in the wake of Col. House during most of the Wilson administration, now again finds itself under the direct leadership of House. The entire political history of Wilson, proclaimed "neutrality in thought as well as in deed" to his fourteen points, is the history of the changing and developing interests of finance capital.

Foreign policy at Washington is now back to the point where the scepter of the House of Morgan fell from the palsied hand of Wilson. After an interregnum of five years we have the complete restoration in the White House of Mr. House of the House of Morgan.

This is ominous, a herald of great upheavals that will soon rock the world in another clash of imperialist interests, and it is a challenge to the working class of the world to rise and in no uncertain terms defiantly challenge the brigands of Wall Street and the conflicting imperialist group of Lombard street, London. It was the hand of Colonel House that directed the policy of the Wilson administration and paved the way for the United States entering the last world war. As the conflicts between the capitalist powers become ever sharper the same hand again directs the destinies of the United States government.

The silk glove of the wily colonel will soon change to the mailed fist driving the workers into another blood bath, unless the workers themselves can concentrate sufficient power to stay the blow.

The only reply to the preliminaries for war that are proceeding apace is the revolutionary struggle against war and that struggle can only be carried under the policy formulated by the Communist International. Against the war of imperialism toward which Wall Street is driving we must mobilize the batallions of labor under the Bolshevist slogan of changing the predatory war between nations into a way of the oppressed peoples against imperialism.

At last the American Federation of Labor, in calling for relief for the striking anthracite coal miners, has made a belated move to give some aid to the workers in this important industrial struggle.

Right and Left Wings in the I. L. G. W. Convention

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

ARTICLE I.

The Character of the Left Wing Struggle.

AT Philadelphia the left wing in the International Ladies' Garment Workers convention made history.

For the left wing movement in the American trade unions the proceedings of the eighteenth biennial convention, the actions and accomplishments of the left bloc, the general line of policy followed and the tactics employed by the Sigman machine are of immense importance. Every struggle of the workers against the union bureaucrats is of importance and each furnishes us with additional experien to guide us in other struggles but because of the size of the union—only five A. F. of L. unions exceed it in point of numbers according to the per capita tax payments given in the report of Secretary Morrison for 1924—because of the high level of political consciousness of the membership as compared to the great majority of the A. F. of L. unions, because of the tremendous influence of the left wing in the union, a majority of the membership supporting it against the Sigman machine, because the Communists enjoy the undisputed leadership of the whole rank and file opposition and because the bureaucracy is of a distinct social-democratic color, the I. L. G. W. convention has given us the richest field for investigation and analysis of our trade union policy, tactics and form of organization.

THE convention marked the end of one period of the struggle of the left wing in the I. L. G. W. The history of the left wing bloc with our party playing an active part can be divided roughly as follows:

1. The period from the appearance of the T. U. E. L. up to the Boston convention where mass expulsions of left wingers were authorized.

2. From the Boston convention until the suspension of Locals 2, 9, and 22, and the organization of the left wing Joint Action Committee.

3. From the organization of the Joint Action Committee and its successful fight for the reinstatement of the suspended locals until the convention.

With the end of the convention the left wing fight for a militant program based on the class struggle and rank and file control of the union enters a new phase. Its successful issue depends upon strategy and tactics adopted as a result of a correct estimation of the strength and weaknesses displayed by the left wing in the convention and upon the success or otherwise of the policy, its method of application as well, pursued so far.

IN drawing our conclusions we must not be misled into viewing the left wing struggle in the I. L. G. W. as something apart from the rest of the labor movement. We must look upon the fight merely as part, an important part, it is true, but nevertheless only part of the broad struggle in which we are engaged thruout the American labor movement.

THREE LEFT WINGERS ON EXECUTIVE BOARD OF GARMENT WORKERS

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—The following were elected to the executive board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at closing session of the convention here:

Louis Hyman, of Local No. 9; J. Borokhovitch, of Local No. 2; Julius Portnoy, of Local No. 22, representing the left wingers in the union; and Gingold, S. Ninfo, J. Halperin, D. Dubinsky, L. Antonini, H. Greenberg, E. Reichberg of Philadelphia, M. Amdur of Canada, Molly Freedman of Chicago, C. Kreindler of Cleveland, J. Hochman, D. Goddes of Boston.

Delegates to the American Federation of Labor including B. Desti, A. Nagler, F. Oretzky, L. Pincoffsky all represent the right wing.

It can be said without hesitation that the convention gave, in testimony submitted by the reactionaries themselves, the most convincing proof of the correctness of our general line of strategy and tactics. As in all other trade unions, both here and in Europe, the battle strategy of the bureaucrats has as its principle objective the isolation of the Communists. That is, the Sigmanites, more skilful than the average A. F. of L. bureaucracy because of their socialist and anarchist training, well-equipped with the phraseology of the class struggle, both in the pre-convention struggle and in the convention itself, tried to drive the rank and file following from the Communists and compel them to fight for the right as Communists to belong to the I. L. G. W. or on the still more demagogic issue of the domination of a union by a political party.

OUR strategy was and is, by forcing the bureaucracy to fight on the clear-cut issue of their failure to carry on a struggle for the basic needs of the workers and their wrecking of the union instead of building it, to gather around us every honest worker in the union. We carried on the struggle that the bureaucracy had abandoned and betrayed and proved to thousands of workers that the Communists have no interests separate and apart from those of the working class. The Sigman machine was defeated by the failure of a maneuver on which it had staked everything. The confession of failure is to be found on pages 48-49 of the report of the general executive board to the convention:

> The conflict had started as a fight against Communist control of some of our local unions but soon, partly thru tactical oversight on our part and partly THRU ADROIT MANEUVERING OF THE OPPOSITION, THE ISSUES OF THE FIGHT BECAME DIVERTED TO OTHER CHANNELS, which benefitted our opponents and befogged the real issue of the fight. THUS THERE WERE BROUGHT INTO THIS FIGHT SUCH ISSUES AS THE CHANGE OF REPRESENTATION AT THE JOINT BOARD, THE QUESTION OF HIGHER DUES, FRAUDULENT ELECTIONS, THE EXTRAVAGANCE OF THE JOINT BOARD AND OF LOCAL OFFICES, THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS BY REFERENDA—and a widespread impression was created to the effect that we were fighting to retain the status quo in the union, that we were opposed to the bitter end to any reforms and any organizational improvements, and similar stories to which the opposition was trying to give wide circulation in order to arouse sympathetic publicity for itself.

THE history of the American labor movement records no more complete confession of political and organizational impotence than the above while at the same time it reveals fully the utter cynicism of an officialdom which regards the raising of such questions as fraudulent elections and official corruption as obscuring "the real issue of the fight."

So successful had been the appeal of the left wing to the membership before the convention, so damaging the machine had been the struggle waged around mass needs and demands, so widespread nad been the revolt of the membership in the decisive garment centers, so severe had been the loss of prestige suffered by the Sigman machine when it had been forced to sign a peace agreement with the left wing, that at the convention a complete re-modeling of its tactics was necessary.

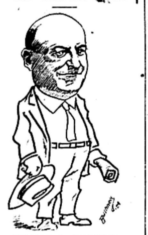
Company Unions and the "B. & O. Plan"

By Earl R. Browder

HE BRIDGED THE GAP BETWEEN TRADE UNIONS AND 'COMPANY UNIONS'



WILLIAM H. JOHNSTON

President of the International Association of Machinists.

IN the "B. & O. plan" of class collaboration, which has now been officially endorsed by the American Federation of Labor, we are told that the magic formula has finally been found which unites into one happy family the employing capitalists and the employed workers. As evidence of the beneficence of the new scheme, it is pointed out that whereas, formerly, certain employers were militantly fighting against the labor unions, under the slogan of the "open shop," they are now "recognizing the unions."

How does it come that these bitter enemies of labor, the "open shoppers," are now so ready to sign agreements with the unions?

The reason is, that the unions have surrendered to the "open shop," and the new agreements that are being signed transform the labor organizations into company unions in substance. Under such conditions why shouldn't these employers be ready to sign the agreements?

Similarity of Company Unions and "B. & O. Plan."

How does the "B & O. plan" change the labor unions into company unions?

First we must establish definitely what are the characteristics of "company unions." These are: (1) Replace the union as a fighting organization of independent working class power, with a machinery for "consultation" between employer and worker; (2) eliminate strikes and speed up production; (3) soothe the workers with the form of consultations about their working conditions, while keeping all power in the hands of "management"; (4) to draw the worker directly into the process of increasing his own exploitation.

This is the ideal union in the eyes of the "open shop" employers. Stated definitely in the words of these employers themselves, the "open shop" or "company" union has the following purposes (From the "Open Shop Encyclopedia" published by the Open Shop Department of the National Association of Manufacturers, 1922):

"(a) To provide regular means of access by employes thru the representatives to the employer, and for consultation by the employer with employes thru representatives.

"(b) To avoid interruption of production and to maintain maximum production.

"(c) To give employes an opportunity to discuss conditions under which they work and the means of improvement.

"(d) To further the common interest of the employes and the employer in all matters pertaining to work, organization and efficiency."

Compare the foregoing statement of "open shop" principles with the principles of the "B. & O." plan," which were formulated by Wm. H. Johnston, president of the Machinists Union, and Otto S. Beyer, Jr., "consulting engineer" for the railroad shop unions (see the New York Times, March 22, 1925):

"(1) Full and cordial recognition of the federated shopmen's unions as the agents of the employes.

"(2) According to these unions and their spokesmen constructive as well as protective functions in railroad management.

"(3) Agreement between these unions and the management to co-operate for improved service to the public.

"(4) Agreement to share fully any consequent benefits.

"(5) Perfection of definite administrative machinery to accomplish these purposes."

The B. & O. plan, it will be seen, contains all the principles of the "open shop" plan, with the addition of the idea that the best instrument of carrying out these principles is the very union organized by the men themselves. Whereas the employers of the "open shop" movement have been fighting bitterly against recognition of the union, they are now asked to recognize the union as the instrument for carrying out their own plans. The full force of this argument (which has carried weight with the employers) that the B. & O. plan is an improvement upon the "open shop" scheme from the employers' point of view, is shown at its best in the words of Wm. H. Johnston at a meeting of railroad executives in St. Louis, at the time of the launching of the plan. Johnston said:

"The idea underlying our services to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad may be compared to the idea which underlies the engineering services extended to railroads by large supply corporations which have contracts with these railroads to furnish, let us say, arch-brick, superheaters, stokers, or lubricating oils."

From all the above, it becomes clear that the essential difference between the "company union" plan of the National Association of Manufacturers (the "open shop" movement) on the one hand, and the B. & O. plan on the other hand, is simply that in the latter proposition the union officials enter into a contract with the employers to use the power of the labor union itself to establish the principles of the "open shop."

The labor union officials had their own reasons for being anxious to make this kind of a deal with the employers. Their criminal mismanagement of the great strikes of 1922-23 had demoralized the unions, to such an extent that the officials became alarmed at the danger to their salaries. They had to find a new method of renewing the flow of per capita tax into their treasuries.

As for the "open shop" employers, they began to get interested in the B. & O. plan because, first, they were having trouble with the operations of their private "company unions," and second, they realized the need of a second line of forces inside the workers' own organizations to prevent even the "company unions" from being captured by the workers—the employers needed the expert assistance of the labor officials.

So the union leaders and the "open shop" employers found a common platform. And the B. & O. plan spread from the railroad that gave it a name, first to the Chicago Northwestern, and then to the great Canadian Pacific railroad. At Atlantic City the A. F. of L. convention endorsed the idea for the entire labor movement. Capitalists, liberals, and labor leaders unite in proclaiming an era of industrial peace and well-being as a result of the new "Holy Alliance."

The "Struggle" Between Company Unions and "B. & O. Plan."

Of course, there are differences, as well as points of unity, between the two plans. These differences bring about a "struggle" between them—or, more properly speaking, competition. This competition takes the form of struggle to see which can best serve the interests of the employer.

Wm. H. Johnston, first sponsor for the B. & O. plan, but the case as follows:

"I want to emphasize as strongly as I know how, the fact that in the task of positive co-operation in the railroad industry there can be no substitute for the genuine unions of the railroad employes.

"I maintain that such a management (as has tried the B. & O. plan) would never again, as long as it retains its good sense, desire to see the affiliated shop craft unions effaced from the scheme of things on its road."

On the other side Daniel Willard, president of the B. & O. railroad, said after two years' experience with the plan:

"I believe that it has now been fully demonstrated that the co-operative plan has more than justified itself from many angles."

The reason for Willard's enthusiasm lies in the fact that the increased exploitation of the workers, operating under "efficiency engineers" of their own hiring, had suddenly put the B. & O. railroad on the road to rich profits again, after several lean years. The men had themselves, under the B. & O. plan, abolished their own protective rules (seniority, etc.), speeded up production, eliminated waste, driven out the less productive workers, and received in return—nothing but "recognition" of their officials, and the same wage as paid by all other roads. Meanwhile, the operating expenses of the railroad dropped from 82 per cent to 78 per cent from 1922 to 1923, while net profits increased from 23 millions to 42 millions. In 1924, the operating expenses dropped further to 77 per cent. All of which was a "great victory" of the B. & O. plan over the company unions—it had convinced the employers that it was even better for profits than the "open shop," and not a bit more dangerous to capitalism.

Another definite result that accrued to the workers, was loss of employment, and increase in layoffs. In May 1925, the speed-up system had worked so well that the railroad announced a reduction of the shop forces. This operation was repeated in August, when 7,000 men were laid off at one blow.

The "Open Shop" Triumphant.

The company union is merely one side of the "open shop" drive of the capitalists. This is a well-organized movement with a definite program. In 1920, in reported definite branches in 240 principal cities of the United States. Its national center is the open shop department of the National Association of Manufacturers. Its principal organizers and boosters in the various cities are united in such powerful secret societies of employers as the Rotary Club, the Kiwanis Club, the Lions' Club, and the various chambers of commerce, etc., all of which endorse and support the open shop movement. And the B. & O. plan is but another one of the instruments of this same movement.

The progress of [illegible] shop" movement as a whole has gone forward unabated. The National Association of Manufacturers boasts in its official publication, "American Industries," of September, 1925, page 27:

"During the last few years the industries of the United States, for the greater part, have enjoyed a general condition of industrial peace. This has been due, to a large extent, to a constant decline in the prestige, numerical, political, and financial strength of the American Federation of Labor. And while the forces of closed shop unionism have been suffering organizational anaemia, the principle of industrial freedom, widely known as the open shop method of industrial relations, has steadily advanced in all manufacturing industries."

And how has the "open shop" been able to achieve its victories? Thru a well-laid plan of operating within the unions, using the agency of the labor officials. The B. & O. plan is one part of this larger strategy. Another part is the war against the left wing and the expulsion of Communists from the unions. This was not the original idea of Gompers, Sigman, Green, Kaufman & Co. These labor officials took the idea ready made from the "open shop" movement, from the bitterest enemies of labor in America. Wall Street lays down the strategy and tactics for the reactionary labor officials. That is how the "open shop" is able to win.

Is there any worker who thinks such a statement is an exaggeration? If so, then read the following quotation from "The Minnesota Banker," under date of December 16, 1920:

"The closed shop is zealously fought for by the radical wing of labor organization. The open shop can be the most readily brought about by the elimination of this element (the left wing—E. B.) as a power in organized labor. The conservative labor man is one to whom sound argument and horse sense appeal. He is the hope of the open shop proponent and upon him, in the final analysis, will rest the matter of accepting the idea philosophically, in the right spirit, without disrupting the entire industrial situation by means of disastrous strikes and lockouts. The open shop argument must be addressed therefore, to the conservative in organized labor."

Since the war, the labor unions in the United States have lost more than 1,000,000 members. This is the period of the "open shop" movement. And during that period, we saw another development, concurrent with the loss of the union membership, namely, the growth of "company unions," "work councils," "employee representation," etc., until, between the years 1917 and 1924, there had grown up more than 800 such "unions," with something more than 1,000,000 members, approximately the same number the A. F. of L. unions lost.

So we see the "open shop" movement triumphantly advancing outside the labor movement by smashing it, and inside the labor movement by corrupting it with the B. & O. plan and similar schemes, and by smashing the left wing thru the expulsion policy of Green, Sigman, et al.

In another article we will enter into more detail on the status and workings of company unions and related forms of the "open shop" and class collaboration movements.

Labor in the Far East

Yesterday we read of the activities of the different Red Labor Unions of Indonesia and the terrific persecution against them. Today we read in the second article by Comrade Semaoen, of the General Labor Federation, the relation of the Communists and these Red Unions to it, of the fight by the left wing for control of these unions in order to bring to the workers a beneficial policy of class struggle.

ARTICLE II.

By SEMAOEN.

THERE is a Red Labor secretariat in Indonesia acting as the central body regulating the general propaganda of these unions and linking them up with the movement abroad. This does not, however, mean that these organizations have left the General Federation of Trade Unions, the chairman of which is a so-called "neutral" leader (neither Communist nor nationalist, but only a trade unionist). The executive committee of the General Federation is made up of Communists and nationalists.

To this federation there are also affiliated the reformist teachers' unions (6,000 members, among whom there are of course Communists to be found); the Union of Government and Public Workers (4,000 members); the Union of Pawn-shop employes (3,000 members), for the most part opposed to their so-called "leader," Surjopranoto, a reformist-nationalist, opposed to the Communists); and other small reformist unions like that of the opium sellers (who are in government service, the opium trade being a state monopoly, as is also the case in regard to the pawnshops!)

These small unions have a total membership of about 3,000. The quality of those unions is low because inside there is a constant internecine struggle between the many national leaders, the "neutral" leaders, and the Communists.

LET us take for example, the pawnshop employes' union. Its 1924 congress decided to elect Sosrokardono a revolutionary as chairman, as well as many Communists to the central committee. Thereupon the retiring chairman, Surjopranoto, stayed in to nominate himself chairman, and, together with the minority, he "nationalized" the printing office, the bureau, administration and the name.

The police and the courts, refused, of course, to intervene in favor of the Communist majority. The question still remains unsettled and the brazen-faced Surjo held a "pawnshop congress" last June, visited of course, only by the minority, the majority not having been allowed to attend.

It is, therefore, small cause for wonder that these organizations have of late shown no increased activity. Only when the Communists succeed in capturing these unions will they play an active part in a progressive movement. The history of the pawnshop employes' union, shows, however, that the task of capturing it will be a difficult one indeed.

Moscow Will Need About 60,000 New Workers Next Year

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Dec. 21—In the Moscow industry during the current fiscal year from 60,000 to 70,000 new workers will be employed of which 40,000 to 50,000 will be skilled and semi-skilled. Of these 7,000 will enter the metal industry and 25,000 to 30,000 the textile industry.
